

BULLETIN
OF THE
ADRAS GOVERNMENT MUSEUM

EDITED BY THE SUPERINTENDENT

TIRUPARUTTIKUNRAM AND ITS TEMPLES

WITH APPENDICES ON JAINA UNITS OF MEASUREMENT
AND TIME, COSMOLOGY AND CLASSIFICATION OF SOULS

BY

T. N. RAMACHANDRAN, M.A.

Government Museum, Madras

NEW SERIES—General Section, Vol. I, Pt. 3

MADRAS

PRINTED BY THE SUPERINTENDENT, GOVERNMENT PRESS

1934

1 rupee 4 annas

III

TIRUPARUTTIKUNRAM AND ITS TEMPLES

WITH APPENDICES ON JAINA UNITS OF MEASUREMENT
AND TIME, COSMOLOGY AND CLASSIFICATION OF SOULS

BY

T. N. RAMACHANDRAN, M.A.

Government Museum, Madras

(Published—May 1934)

AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

IN the village of Tiruparuttikunram on the outskirts of Conjeevaram is an enclosure containing two Jaina temples. The smaller of them is in late Pallava style, the larger early Chola with a mandapa in Vijayanagara style. They thus supply an epitome of the main features of the chronological development of Dravidian temple architecture which so far as is known is found nowhere else in so concise and well-balanced a form.

The evidence of architectural style is supported by evidence contained in inscriptions in which the larger temple is particularly rich. And the ceilings of the mandapa and veranda of this temple are adorned with paintings illustrating Jaina mythology, a row of which has been published by Dr. A. K. Coomaraswamy in his History of Indian and Indonesian Art, pl. LXXX, fig. 256. It will thus be seen that these temples, though small, are of quite exceptional interest and deserving detailed study.

This has therefore been attempted in the following pages. It led at once to the identification of Tiruparuttikunram with Jina-Kāñchi of the temple inscriptions, Nos. 19 and 21. It also necessitated a study from Jaina manuscripts and texts of Jaina iconography, mythology, cosmology, etc., from the Digambara standpoint. As the insertion in this paper of a convenient and clear account of these will be most appropriate to explain many details arising from the study of the paintings not explained under their descriptions, a summary is given in Appendices I-III. The authorities consulted are:—

1. The Śrī Purāṇa, 2. Ādī Purāṇa and 3. Punyāśrava-kathā, obtained from the Madras Government Oriental Manuscripts Library; 4. Merumandara Purāṇa obtained from Mr. T. Appavu, Tiruparuttikunram; 5. Vardhamāna Purāṇa from the Adyar Library; 6-10. Four palm leaf manuscripts, two relating to the iconography of the Yakshas and Yakshis, one relating to Punyā-havachana and the fourth relating to Āchārya-praśasti obtained from the temple priest, as also a printed copy of Āśādhara's Pñjavidhī obtained from the same source; 11-12. Hemachandra's Trishashṭiśalākāpuruṣa-charitra (Gaekwad's Oriental Series, No. LI) and Abhidhāna-chintāmaṇi; 13-14. Nemichandra's Trilokasāra, and Umāsvāmi's Tatvārthadhigama-sūtra (edited by J. L. Jaini) obtained from Mr. Mallinath, editor of the Jaina Gazette, besides other printed books and English publications such as C. R. Jain's Rishabhadeva, J. L. Jaini's works on Jainism and papers in Journals such as the Indian Antiquary, etc.

My thanks are due to the temple trustees of Tiruparuttikunram, more particularly to Mr. T. Appavu Jain, Honorary Magistrate of Conjeevaram, for facilitating the preparation of this work. I acknowledge with pleasure the generous assistance rendered by the temple priest Mr. Purushottama Upadhyaya, who not only placed at my disposal the manuscripts necessary for my study and explained several passages in them from out of his experience of temple rituals and other Jaina matters, but also evinced a zealous interest in my work throughout.

I am under a deep debt of obligation to Dr. F. H. Gravely, the Editor, for much helpful criticism and valuable suggestions. My thanks are no less due to Mr. C. S. Mallinath, Editor of the Jaina Gazette, Madras, not only for procuring for me the necessary literature but also for his kindness in reading through my manuscript and for incidental criticisms.

T. N. RAMACHANDRAN.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
List of abbreviations	vii
Introductory matter	1
Identification of Jina-Kāñchī with Tiruparuttikunram, one of the four Jaina Vidyāsthānas	4
The name Tiruparuttikunram and its derivation	2
Notes on the history of Kāñchipuram	3
Notes on the history of Jainism in South India	4
The Temples in Tiruparuttikunram	10
The Chandraprabha Temple	11
The Vardhamāna Temple	18
Vardhamāna, Pushpadanta and Dharmadevi shrines	18
Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa	20
Vardhamāna-mukhamandapa	23
Triakūṭa-Basti	25
Triakūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa	26
Triakūṭa-Basti-mukhamandapa	26
Saṅgita-mandapa	27
Irugappa—its builder	29
Gopura	31
The Cloister	32
Śānti-mandapa	34
Munivāsa	35
The Temple Well	38
Processional Path	38
Prākāra (the Compound Wall)	39
Sages and the Religious History of Tiruparuttikunram	40
Identification of Alagiya-Pallavan with Kōpperuhjīga	47
The merchant Śengadircheḷvan	48
Kanarese Inscription of Krishṇadevarāya	48
Inscriptions—
In the Chandraprabha Temple	49
In the Vardhamāna Temple	49
Paintings in the Vardhamāna Temple	62
Scenes from the life of Kishabhadeva or Trailokyānātha	64
Description of Samavasaraṇa	105
Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna	116
Scenes from the lives of Kṛishṇa and Neminātha	133
Scenes from the life of Agnīlā (Ambikā) or Dharmadevi	157
Miscellaneous Paintings	160
Fragments of Earlier Paintings	161
Appendix I—
Jaina Units of Measurements and Time—
Units of Measurement	163
Divisions of Time	164

Appendix II—

Jaina Cosmology	170
The Lower World	170
The Middle World	173
The Upper World	183

Appendix III—

Jaina Classification of Souls	185
Siddhas	189
Samānya-Siddhas	189
Tirthaṅkara-Siddhas	189
Tirthaṅkaras of the Past Age	190
Tirthaṅkaras of the Present Age	190
Śāsana-devatās	196
Tirthaṅkaras of the Future Age	212
Arhats	213
Āchāryas	214
Ārya-Devis	218
Upādhyāyas	219
Sādhus	219
Non-Ascetic Great Souls	219
Twelve Chakravartins or Chakrins	220
Nine Nārāyaṇas or Vāsudevas or Ardhachakrins	221
Nine Prati-Nārāyaṇas or Prati-Vāsudevas	222
Nine Baladevas or Balabhadras	222
Fourteen Kulakaras or Manus	223
Parents of the 24 Tirthaṅkaras	225
Nine Nāradas	225
Eleven Rudras or Ekādasa-Rudras	226
Twenty-four Kāmadevas	227
Devas—
Bhavanavasi-Devas	228
Vyantara-Devas	229
Jyotishka-Devas	230
Vaimānika-Devas	231
Other Devas and Devīs	234
Vidyādevīs	234
Sarasvatī (Śāsana-devī)	234
Dvārapālas, Dikpālas, Yoginīs, Jhātī-devatās	234
Hanumān	234
Kṣhetrapālas	235
Index	236
Plates

ERRATA.

Page	Line	For	Read
4	Footnote 2, line 6	Śvetāmbaras	Śvetāmbaras
7	29	Vaiṣṇavism	Vaiṣṇavism
14	5	mentionsth is	mentions this
27	34	ii-B	i-B
28	6
28	41	koṇḍai	koṇḍai
41	25	Hima śītala	Hima-śītala
47	36	Conjeeveram	Conjeevaram
57	19	nṛpatiḥ	nṛpatiḥ
57	33	Māvaṇḍūr	Māvaṇḍūr
58	40	T	I
60	31	Jayate	Jāyate
66	38	ṛṣ	ṛṣ
74	8 and 28	lion	tiger
80	8	mahārājagṇa	mahārājagṇa
87	31	-mandapa	-mandapa
100	7	Dharamendran	Dharamendran
119	33	Priyakāriṇī	Priyakāriṇī
120	Footnote 1, line 23	astatā	astatā
120	Footnote 1, line 35	Anats	Ānata
150	22	देव	देव
155	Footnote 1, line 3	devine	divine
169	1	Utsarpinī	Utsarpinī
172	30	Asipat	Asipat
183	21	Anata	Ānata
188	Footnote 2	aṅga	aṅga
193	41	Dharaṇī	Dhāraṇī
195	39	Aryadīna	Āryadīna
210	3	Pārsvayakṣa	Pārsvayakṣa
212	Footnote 3, line 2	Saṅkha-	Śaṅkha-
221	35	Nārāyaṇa	Nārāyaṇa
226	23	centemporaneous	contemporaneous
243	23	Vantaras	Vyantaras
243	26	Jivandara	Jivandhara
244	4	Jyotiśchakra	Jyotiśchakra
248	11	Āryadevī	Āryadevī
250	17	Padma Śrī	Padma Śrī

Page	Line	For	Read
250	21	Attakāla	Attakāla
250	4	Patrā-	Patra-
251	35	Pratishthāpana	Pratishthāpana
254	20	Śrībhadrā	Śrībhadrā
254	21	Śrīchandra	Śrīchandra
255	32	Subhaṅkara	Subhaṅkara
255	48	vimāka	vināna
255	12	Sakra	Śakra
256	5	-dvīpa	-dvīpa
256 {	42 }	Syāmavara-	Syāmavara-
256 {	43 }
256	38	-maṇḍapa	-maṇḍapa

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.

A.R.S.I.E.	Annual Report of South Indian Epigraphy.
Bombay Gaz.	Bombay Gazetteer.
Ep. Car.	Epigraphia Carnatica.
Ep. Ind.	Epigraphia Indica.
Hist. Sket. Anc. Dekh.	Historical Sketches of Ancient Dekhan. by K. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar.
Ind. Ant.	Indian Antiquary.
J.A.O.S.	Journal of the American Oriental Society.
Jour. Univ. Bombay	Journal of the University of Bombay.
M.E.R.	Madras Epigraphy Report.
Q.J.M.S.	Quarterly Journal of the Mythic Society. Bangalore.
S.I.I.	South Indian Inscriptions.
S.L.A.	Sewell's List of Antiquities.

TIRUPARUTTİKUNRAM (JINA-KAÑCHI) AND ITS TEMPLES.

BY T. N. RAMACHANDRAN, M.A.

Government Museum, Madras.

A regular colony of Jains seems to have been settled in Kañchīpuram (Conjeevaram) from ancient times and the locality where they lived was styled "Jina-Kañchi" or that part of Kañchi occupied by the Jains. In the Conjeevaram taluk, Jaina vestiges are found at Tiruparuttikunram, Ārpakkam, Māgarai, Āryaperumbakkam, etc. Of these Tiruparuttikunram, about two miles from Conjeevaram, situated on the right bank of the river Vegavati is popularly known as "Jina-Kañchi" to-day and formed part of Conjeevaram from very ancient times.¹ The Jaina temple here is the biggest in the taluk² and of great interest, both architecturally and on account of its paintings illustrating the lives of some of the Tīrthaṅkaras.

The Digambara Jains of Mysore speak of four seats of learning (Vidyāsthānas or Chatus-simhāsanas), these being Kollāpura, Jina-Kañchīpura, Penukonḍa and Dehlī.³ Burgess suggests that Jina-Kañchīpura is perhaps the present Chittānūr in South Arcot District.⁴ But the local tradition associating the name of Jina-Kañchīpura with the village of Tiruparuttikunram, the high repute of Conjeevaram as a seat of learning from very early times⁵, and the reference in many other Jaina texts and traditions to Kañchīpura as one of the Vidyāsthānas,⁶ warrant the identification of the present village of Tiruparuttikunram with Jina-Kañchi. This identification receives additional strength from the inscriptions⁷ found in one of the local temples, the one dedicated to Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tīrthaṅkara.

Inscriptions, numbers 19 and 21⁸ prove beyond any manner of doubt that Jina-Kañchīpura or Jina-Kañchi stands for Tiruparuttikunram and not for Chittānūr. The latter which is dated in the seventh regnal year of the Chola⁹ king Rājaraḥa III

¹ K. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar, Hist. Sket. Acc. Dakh., p. 70.

² A.R.S.I.E., 1922-23, p. 129.

³ Ind. Ant., Vol. xxxii, p. 460.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Ep. Ind., Vol. viii, p. 34.

⁶ Asiatic Researches, Vol. 9, pp. 247 and 255. "Account of the Jains (collected from a priest at Mudgeri)"—

"At this time, the Jains have four Maṭhādhipas, or chief Pontiffs, at the following places: (1) Pennaṅḍa or Pennaconda, (2) Canchi or Conjeevaram, (3) Collapur, (4) Dehlī. . . . Their Saṅgyasis, for a long time back, have resided in these places, with power over all those professing their religion; these pontiffs teach their laws, duties and customs; and if they observe any irregularities among their monks, punish them according to the nature of the offence."

⁷ See below, Nos. 7, 19 and 21 of our list, pp. 57, 60 and 61; A.R.S.I.E., No. 97 of 1923, pp. 70 and 129; Ep. Ind., Vol. vii, p. 116.

⁸ See below, pp. 60 and 61.

⁹ Diacritical marks on popular words like Chola, Pandya, etc., are avoided in this paper.

(1223 A.D.) refers to Tiruparuttikunṇam by both its names, Jina-Kāñchīpura and Tiruparuttikunṇam, and the former, which on palaeographical grounds should be assigned to about 1600 A.D., disarms all doubts on the point by referring to this place distinctly as Jina-Kāñchīpura and omitting the name Tiruparuttikunṇam. There are other inscriptions also in this temple, ranging from 1200 A.D. to 1400 A.D., numbers 7, 14, 16 and 17¹, in which the place is referred to as either Jina-Kāñchīpura or Kāñchī or Kachchī or Jina-Kāñchī. Further we can hardly look for a Jina-Kāñchī anywhere but in Kāñchī itself, for the term means nothing more than that part of Kāñchīpura occupied by the Jaina residents of the place.

The name Tiruparuttikunṇam seems to have been derived from the fact that the cultivation of "parutti," the Tamil name for cotton, was once carried on here on a large scale². In proof of this fact it is now pointed out that the image of Chandraprabha in the small temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam³ is placed on the second floor at a height of about twelve feet from the ground in order that it may not be hidden amidst the cotton cultivation. It may be suggested however that we have perhaps in the name Tiruparuttikunṇam a corruption of the name Śemporkunṇam or kunṇu, meaning the "Beautiful golden hill", the name by which the place is referred to in inscription number 1.⁴ "Tiru" may be taken as an equivalent of "Śem" in that it means also "beautiful". Thus Tiruparuttikunṇam is a corruption of Śemporkunṇu or Śemporkunṇam, or of Tiruporkunṇam, if we replace "Śem" by "Tiru." This suggestion receives strength from the fact that the locality where inscriptions numbers 22—24⁵ are incised on the samādhi stones of some of the sages that lived at Tiruparuttikunṇam is now called Arunagiri-mēḍu, or "the elevation called Arunagiri." Arunagiri is the Sanskrit for Śemporkunṇu. This locality being only within a hundred yards of the temples it may be seen that the old name "Śemporkunṇam" is even now in current use.

Unlike Madura, Uraiyūr and Granganore, the capitals of the Pandya, Chola and Chera kings, Conjeevaram, which was once the capital of the Pallavas, abounds in structural monuments dating from the remote past and containing a large number of inscriptions which help the building of the city's history. More than 283 lithic records were collected from the city by Sir Walter Elliot as early as 1882 and, according to him, they do not exhaust the number of epigraphs in the place.⁶

The place is called, both in inscriptions and in early works in Tamil and Sanskrit, Kachchī, Kāñchī, Kāñchī, and Kachchipeḍu. Appar, Tirujñāna Sambandha and other Śaiva saints among the Nāyanmārs and Tirumaṅgai and other Ājvārs have sung hymns on the Conjeevaram temples. The Chinese pilgrim, Hiuen Tsiang, who visited Conjeevaram in about 640 A.D. calls the city "Kin-chi-pulo" and says that it was the capital of "Talo-pi-cha," i.e., Drāviḍa (the Tamil country) and was 30 li round⁷. From early records

¹ See below, pp. 57, 59 and 60.

² See below, p. 12.

³ See below, pp. 61 and 62.

⁴ A.R.S.I.E., 1922-23, p. 139.

⁵ See below, pp. 49 and 50.

⁶ S.L.A., Vol. I, pp. 178-187.

⁷ Beal, Siyu ki, Vol. 2, p. 228.

it is evident that the name of the country in which the city was situated and of which it was then the capital was Tuṇḍaka-vishaya, the several variants of which are Tuṇḍira, Tuṇḍira, Tuṇḍa and Tuṇḍai.² The Tamil equivalent of "Tuṇḍaka-vishaya" is "Tuṇḍai-maṇḍalam" which still remains in use. At the beginning of the reign of the great Chola king Rājaraṇa I (985-1013 A.D.), the name "Tuṇḍai-maṇḍalam" was changed into "Jayamkonda-chōḷa-maṇḍalam" after one of the surnames of Rājaraṇa himself, and "it was by this latter name that the territory was known for several centuries, i.e., until the Vijayanagara times."³ In inscriptions earlier than the time of Rājaraṇa I it is the term "Tuṇḍai-maṇḍalam" that is used. The term "Jayamkonda-chōḷa-maṇḍalam" appears, therefore, to come into use in the latter part of the reign of that king.⁴ Strangely however the older name alone has survived.

The history of Conjeevaram, from the earliest times to the beginning of the 17th century A.D., is elaborately dealt with by Mr. K. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar, in his book "Historical Sketches of Ancient Dekkhan" under Book I. The city was the capital of the Pallavas from perhaps the second century A.D. to almost the end of the ninth century A.D. At the beginning of the ninth century it fell into the hands of the Western Chāḷukya king, Vikramāditya II, who did not hold it long. In the third quarter of the tenth century the Rāshtrakūṭas became its lords but only for a short period (945-970 A.D.).

Leaving out of consideration these short occupations, we can say that the Cholas, who obtained possession of the city in the last quarter of the ninth century A.D., continued as its lords till the middle of the thirteenth century, when the Kākatiyas of Warangal and the Telugu-Chola chiefs from the north took their place "but found competent rivals in the rising Pāṇḍya kings of Madura." The history of Conjeevaram for a few years from then is confused and the city was affected seriously by several feudatory families revolting against the imbecile later Chola kings and asserting their independence, and by the invasions of South India by the iconoclast Muhammadans, chief among whom was Malik-Kāfur. Fortunately for South India these Muhammadan invaders were only actuated by "plunder and lust, not dominion." When they left Conjeevaram the Vijayanagara kings took possession of it in about 1377 A.D. and retained it till the beginning of the seventeenth century A.D.⁵, during which period the city enjoyed prosperity and peace and witnessed the growth of some more structural monuments.

Its monuments bear testimony to the fact that the city was a stronghold of people of various religions from very early times. Buddhism, Jainism, Śaivism and Vaiṣṇavism, each in its turn, had powerful hold over the city and have left unmistakable marks of their influence. According to Hiuen Tsiang, who visited Conjeevaram in about 640 A.D., "Kāñchī is as old as Buddha, Buddha converted its people, Dharmapāla Bodhisattva was born there, and Aśoka built several stūpas in its neighbourhood."⁶ He further states that

² S.I.I., Vol. I, p. 146.

³ K. V. S. Ayyar, Hist. Sket. Anc. Dekk., p. 5.

⁴ Ibid. pp. 63, 71 and 72.

I-A

⁵ Bombay Gaz., Vol. I, part II, p. 318.

⁶ Ibid. p. 5.

⁷ Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, p. 212.

the "Jainas were very numerous in his day, and that Buddhism and Brahmanism were about on a par."¹

In the early stages² Jaina influence existed side by side with that of Buddhism. The Sthalapurāṇa of nearly every temple in Conjeevaram confirms the belief of the people that "Conjeevaram was for ages a Buddhist and afterwards a Jaina town."³

This takes us to the very interesting question of the history of Jainism in South India which, according to Mr. S. R. Sharma "is the history of a partial attempt to Aryanise the Dravidian races."⁴ This attempt may be said to commence when Chandragupta Maurya accompanied Bhadrabāhu I to the south a few years before 297 B.C. This was followed by other missions to the south, such as that of Kālakāchārya, a preacher of the Śvetāmbara sect who "found his way to the court of the king of Penthā in the Deccan," and who was probably an Āndhra king or chief ruling from Paithan, and of Viśakhachārya, a Digambara preacher who "with a group of emigrants penetrated the Choḷa and Pāṇḍya countries." The spread of Jainism and the dissemination of Jaina ideals in the Tamil country received sufficient impetus on the advent of Kundakundaśārya⁵ "evidently a Dravidian and the first in almost all the genealogies of the southern Jainas"⁶ and is attested to by literary works such as the Kuraḷ of Tiruvalluvar, Maṇimekalai and Śilappadikāram. The spread of Jainism in the Tamil country is in no small measure due to "the patronage it obtained at the courts of Kañchi and Madura." At the time of the visits of Hiuen Tsiang to these cities, the former had a number of Deva temples of which "the majority belonged to the Digambaras,"⁷ and the latter had in it living a number of Digambaras.⁸

Whatever may be the controversial views entertained by historians to-day on the question of "the antiquity of Jainism" and the existence of "a Jaina period in the History of India" it is accepted on all hands that from the beginning of the Christian era down to the epoch-making conversion of the Hoysala Viṣṇuwardhana by Rāmānuja in the twelfth century, Jainism was the most powerful religion in the South."⁹

Though we do not possess to-day the names of kings in South India who were Buddhists we have fortunately preserved for us the names of some that adopted Jainism.¹⁰

¹ S.L.A., Vol. I, p. 176.

² According to a Jaina tradition, also recorded in the Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa inscription, Bhadrabāhu I (see Appendix III, pp. 215, 216) the last Śveta-Kevālī, led the northern Jainas, 12,000 in number to South India in the time of the Mauryan emperor Chandragupta. Chandragupta is said to have joined the migrating party. Professor Jacobi determines the date of this migration as probably a few years before 297 B.C. Bhadrabāhu died on the way at Chandragiri hill before the migration was completed. This fact of the Jaina migration to the south is important inasmuch as it is really the starting point for an account of South Indian Jainism. The division of the Jainas into Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras, which according to Leumann is the initial fact of Digambara tradition, starts from here.

³ Chingleput Manual, p. 109.

⁴ See Appendix III, pp. 216, 218.

⁵ Ibid., pp. 229-30.

⁶ Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, p. 214; A.R.S.I.E., 1922-23, p. 129.

⁷ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 177.

⁸ Watters, Yuan Chwang, II, p. 226.

⁹ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 183.

Some of the Pallava kings of Kāñchī, chief among whom was Mahendravarman I (600-30 A.D.),¹ a few Pandya, Western Chālukya, Gaṅga, Rāshtrakūṭa, Kalachurya and Hoysaḷa kings were staunch Jainas, and it is said of some of them that they persecuted other religionists.

The early faith of Kūṇ-Pāṇḍya or Neḍumāraṇ, a great Pandya king who lived in the eighth century, was Jainism, from the "clutches" of which, it is said, he was saved by Tirujñāna Sambandha, another Śaivite saint. The Kadamba kings of Banavāsi in Karṇāṭaka, though themselves Hindus, were "systematically eclectic and favoured Jainism as the religion of many of their subjects."² They are, to mention a few, Kākusthavarman (430-450 A.D.), Mṛigeśavarman (475-490 A.D.), Ravivarman (497-537 A.D.) and Harivarman (537-547 A.D.).³

The Western Chālukyas or the early Chālukyas as they are more often called, were also patrons of Jainism. Jayasimha I, the first king of the dynasty appears to have patronised three Jaina Āchāryas, Guṇachandra, Vasuchandra and Vādirāja.⁴ Pulakeśi I (550 A.D.) made endowments to a Jaina temple at Ālaktanagara and Kirtivarman I (566-597 A.D.), his son, gave a grant to "the temple of Jinendra," while Pulakeśi II, the latter's son (609-642 A.D.) patronised Ravikīrti, the Jaina poet who composed the Aihole inscription in which he says:—"This stone temple of Jinendra . . . was constructed by Ravikīrti, who had acquired the greatest favour of that same Satyaśraya (Pulikēśi), whose commands were restrained by the three oceans."⁵ Nīravadya-panḍita or Udayadeva-panḍita as he is also called, house pupil of Pūjyapāda, who belonged to the Deva-gaṇa of the Mūla-saṅgha,⁶ i.e., of Digambara Jainas, is spoken of as a spiritual adviser of Jayasimha II,⁷ and of Vinayāditya (680-697 A.D.).⁸ He is said to have received at the hands of Vijayāditya (696-733 A.D.), the son of Vinayāditya, a village for the maintenance of a Jaina temple. Vikramāditya II (733-747 A.D.), the son of Vijayāditya, repaired a Jaina temple and gave a grant in connection with it to a Jaina ascetic Vijaya-panḍita by name.⁹

¹ According to tradition he was later on converted to Śaivism by the Śaiva saint Appar, himself a Jaina in the beginning of his life when he was called Dharmasena. Strangely enough there is a Jaina tradition which the temple priest at Tiruparuttikunṅam narrated as being included in one of their purāṇas called Dharmasena-purāṇa, which says that Appar returned to his old faith in the latter part of his life for which he was done to death by some Śaivites. See also Studies in South Indian Jainism, part I, p. 153, note 2.

² Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 178.

³ Ibid., p. 178.—"Kākusthavarmā ends one of his inscriptions by reverencing Bishatthadeva, one of the Jaina Tirthaṅkaras. His grandson Mṛigeśavarmā gave some fields at Valjayanṭī 'to the divine supreme Arhats' . . . upon another occasion divided the village of Kālavāṅga into three parts and distributed them as follows: The first he gave 'to the great god Jinendra', the second for 'the enjoyment of the sect . . . called Svētāpatha' (Svētāmbaras), and the third 'to . . . the Nirgranthas' (Digambaras). Ravivarmā granted a village so 'that the glory of Jinendra . . . should be celebrated regularly every year' at Pālāsika (Halsi). Harivarmā also made several grants to the Jainas."

⁴ Ibid., p. 179.

⁵ See below, p. 41.

⁶ Bombay Gaz., Vol. I, part II, p. 191.

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 179.

⁹ Ibid.; Ind. Ant., Vol. VII, p. 197; Vol. XI, p. 214.

But the "golden age of Jainism" in Kārṇāṭaka was under the Gaṅgas, who, it is said, made Jainism their "state religion." It is said of the great Jaina Āchārya Simhanandi that he was not only instrumental in laying the foundation of the Gaṅga kingdom but acted also in the capacity of an adviser to Koṅṇivarma I, the first Gaṅga king.¹ While Mādhava II (540-565 A.D.) made grants to the Digambaras, Durvīṭṭa (605-650 A.D.) sat at the feet of Pūjyapāda and Durvīṭṭa's son Mushkara (650 A.D.) made Jainism the "state religion." Gaṅga kings, who came subsequently, were zealous patrons of Jainism. It is said of Mārasimha III (961-974 A.D.), whose general Chāmuṇḍa Rāja erected the colossal statue of Bahubali at Śravaṇa Belgola, that he "crowned his life with the highest sacrifice a Jaina may offer to his faith, viz., death by sallekhana, or slow starvation."² Rājamalla I (817-828 A.D.) founded a Jaina cave at Vaḷḷimalai in North Arcot District.³ Nṛtimārga I, his son, was a Jaina.

Among the Rāshtrakūṭas, who were also patrons of Jainism, the best known is Amoghavarsha I (814-15-877-78 A.D.), though we know also that his father Govinda III (798-815 A.D.) gave a grant to a Jaina teacher Arikīrti, "for removing the evil influence of Saturn from Vimalāditya of the Chālukya family."⁴ It is said of Amoghavarsha I that he sat at the feet of the great Jināsena,⁵ who was the preceptor of Guṇabhadra and wrote beside the Jaina Harivamśa, the first recension of which was completed in 783-4 A.D. in the time of Govinda III, a portion of the Ādi-purāṇa, which was part of the Jaina Mahā-purāṇa, while Guṇabhadra completed the Ādi-purāṇa by writing the Uttara-purāṇa or the second part of the Mahā-purāṇa in 897 A.D., in the reign of Amoghavarsha's successor, Kṛishṇa II (880-911-12 A.D.). Among Jaina works that were written at the Rāshtrakūṭa capital, mostly under the patronage of Amoghavarsha I, mention may be made, besides Harivamśa, Ādi-purāṇa and Uttara-purāṇa, of Akalāṅka Charita, Jayadha-valāṅkī, a work on Digambara philosophy by Virasenāchārya, a mathematical work called Sārasaṅgraha or Gaṇitasārasaṅgraha by Virāchārya, and a treatise on moral subjects entitled Praśnottara-ratnamālīkā, the authorship of which is attributed to Amoghavarsha himself.⁶ In short it is said of Amoghavarsha I that he was the greatest patron of Digambara Jainism and that he adopted the Jaina faith.⁷ In the reign of Kṛishṇa II his subjects and tributary chiefs either built or made grants to Jaina temples already built, doubtless under his patronage,⁸ and the Jaina purāṇa (Mahā-purāṇa) was consecrated in Śaka 820 by Lokasena, the pupil of Guṇabhadra.

The Chālukyas of Kalyāṇi who succeeded the Rāshtrakūṭas in 974 A.D. after the last Rāshtrakūṭa was defeated by Taila II (973-997 A.D.) were not so favourable to Jainism "and at times persecuted them." Śaiva opposition was getting stronger and the kings themselves were slowly coming under the sway of Śaivism. Thus, for instance,

¹ For details of Jainism in Gaṅgavāḍī see O.J.M.S., Vol. XXIV, No. 1, pp. 49-52.

² Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 179; see below, p. 41.

³ Ep. Ind., Vol. IV, p. 140.

⁴ Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, pp. 214-15.

⁵ Ibid., p. 201.

⁶ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 179.

⁷ Bombay Gaz., Vol. I, part II, pp. 200-1.

⁸ Ibid.

Jayasimha II (1018-1042 A.D.), the successor of Vikramāditya V (1009-1018 A.D.) and grandson of Taila II, is said to have persecuted the Jainas after being himself converted from Jainism to Śaivism at the instance of his wife Suggaladevī. The story of such persecution is narrated in the Basava Purāṇa and in the Chenna Basava Purāṇa. But his successor Āhavamalla Someśvara I (1042-68 A.D.) appears to have been a good patron of Jainism as evidenced by an inscription at Śravaṇa Belgola which states that "the Jaina teacher Swāmi won the title of Śabda-chaturmukha at the hands of King Āhavamalla."¹

It has been more often supposed that the Chola kings persecuted the Jainas. This does not appear to be generally true as will be seen from a study of the Chola inscriptions in the Jaina temples at Tiruparuttikunṅam detailed below (pp. 49-57 and 61).

Tribhuvanamalla Bijjala (1156-67 A.D.), the founder of the Kalachurya dynasty, who was himself a Jaina to start with and had in his grants the figure of a Tirthaṅkara, came under the evil influence of his minister Basava, the founder of the Lingāyat sect, who prevailed on his master to persecute and even exterminate the Jainas. When Basava found that Bijjala did not fully agree with him in his campaign of hatred nor approved of the methods that he had adopted to persecute the Jainas he had the king murdered stealthily. This was followed by a period of terror and bloodshed "that spread as far as the kingdom of the Cholas and the Hoysalas."²

The Hoysalas, whose kingdom included modern Mysore, were staunch Jainas. Vinayāditya II (1047-1100 A.D.), the first historical person of this dynasty, owed his rise to power to a Jaina ascetic named Śāntideva. Śāntaladevī, the wife of Viṣṇuvardhana alias Bitti (1111-1141 A.D.), was a lay disciple of a Jaina teacher, Prabhāchandra, while Viṣṇuvardhana's minister Gaṅgarāja and Hulla, a minister of Narasimha I (1143-73 A.D.) are specifically cited as "two out of three very special promoters of the Jain faith."³ Thus there seems to be no doubt that the early Hoysalas were Jainas and that the later Hoysalas from Bitti onwards were converted to Vaiṣṇavism mainly because of Rāmānuja's personality. Bitti, who was perhaps the greatest ruler of the dynasty, was "a fervent militant Jaina down to the time when he was converted to Vaiṣṇavism by Rāmānuja," an event which came to happen by a miracle as Vaiṣṇava literature has it. Much reliance cannot be placed on the traditional account that the new convert persecuted the Jainas, being directed to do so by Rāmānuja, for we learn that his wife Śāntaladevī remained a Jaina and continued to make grants to the Jainas with the king's consent, and that Gaṅgarāja, his minister, whose services for Jainism are well known, continued to enjoy the king's favour. Moreover he himself is said to have endowed and repaired Jaina temples and to have afforded protection to Jaina images and priests. It is claimed for Viṣṇuvardhana—the name adopted by him after his conversion—that his reign was one of great toleration that continued even during the reigns of his successors.⁴

¹ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 180.

² Bombay Gaz., Vol. I, part II, p. 491.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 181.

His successors, though themselves Vaishnavites, are said to have built Jaina temples (bastis) and to have protected Jaina Āchāryas. Such are for instance Narasimha I (1143-73 A.D.), Vira-Ballala II (1173-1220 A.D.) and Narasimha III (1254-91 A.D.)¹

The Vijayanagara kings were always noted for their highly tolerant attitude towards religions and were therefore patrons of Jainism too. Bukka I (1357-1377-8 A.D.)², is spoken of for the Jaina-Vaishnava compact that he was able to effect during his reign³. This by itself speaks for the patronage that Jainism received at the hands of the early kings of Vijayanagara⁴. Bimadevi, the queen of Deva Raya I, is said to have been a disciple of a Jaina teacher Abhinava-Chārukīrti-Paṇḍitāchārya and to have installed an image of Śāntinātha at Śravaṇa Belgola. We shall have occasion to speak of the faith of Irugappa, the general of Bukka II (1385-1406 A.D.)⁵ and of the toleration of the greatest of the Vijayanagara kings, Kṛishnadeva Raya (1510-1529 A.D.) when describing the Vardhamāna temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam⁶. Almost all the rulers down to Rāma Raya made grants to Jaina temples and were tolerant enough⁷.

Such has also been the attitude of the feudatory and minor rulers under the Vijayanagara kings and of the ruling house of Mysore towards Jainism, an attitude which luckily continued down to the present day. It is said that some of the minor powers like the rulers of Gersoppa and the Bhairavas of Kārkāl "professed the Jaina faith and left monuments of importance in the history of Jaina art."⁸

It will thus be clear that whatever dynasty was master of Conjeevaram, Jainism was likely to receive support from it. There seems, however, to be no evidence of such continuous support to Buddhism. The fall of the Kalachurya dynasty in the Dekkhan was perhaps a death-blow to South Indian Jainism. But we find that it continued to flourish even after that in the Tuluva country. It has been rightly contended that for well nigh a millennium and a half, Jainism was "quite alive and active" and that "even now, unlike Buddhism, it has a considerable number of followers in the South, no less than in the North."⁹

Though both Buddhism and Jainism appear to have prospered in South India for a few centuries along with Śaivism and Vaishnavism, being tolerated by the kings, the

¹ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 181.

² The dates available for Bukka I are: 1336-1377-8 A.D. Of these, his brother Harihara I ruled from 1336-1356. The latter made Bukka his yuvarāja about 1344 A.D., from which date we have Bukka's inscriptions, though he ascended the throne only in 1357 A.D.

³ He settled a dispute between the Jainas and the Vaishnavas by issuing a decree most favourable to the Jainas which he concluded as:—"For as long as the sun and the moon endure the Vaishnavas will continue to protect the Jaina-darśana. The Vaishnavas and the Jainas are one (body); they must not be viewed as different."

⁴ A.R.S.I.E., 1922-3, p. 129; Studies in South Indian Jainism, part I, p. 127.

⁵ Bukka II appears to have been given considerable power even during the life time of his father Harihara II (1377-1404 A.D.), as is evident from his assuming imperial titles even while his father was reigning.

⁶ See below, pp. 23 and 58.

⁷ Jour. Univ. Bombay, Vol. I, part I, p. 183.

former appears to have received a check not only from Hindu reformers, but also from Jaina teachers, who seem to have been numerous in the seventh, eighth and ninth centuries. Both Tamil and Sanskrit literature clearly point to the triumph of the Jainas over the Buddhists.¹ Without proper leaders and with the withdrawal of royal support, Buddhism seems gradually to have declined after the seventh and eighth centuries A.D.² The rise of the Śaiva saints, Appar, Tiruñāṇa Sambandha, Maṇikyavāchaka and Sundaramūrti to mention a few, and of the Vaishṇava Ālvārs, Nammālvār, Madhurakavi and Tirumaṅgai to mention a few, and of the Advaita philosopher Śaṅkarāchārya, and the establishment of mutts (maṭhas) in various parts of the country by Appar, Sambandha and Śaṅkara and a few of the Ālvārs, effectively removed the remnants of Buddhism almost from South India and greatly checked the growth of Jainism. Thus Buddhism disappears in South India in a manner "unparalleled in the history of any country or time,"³ while Jainism continued to survive especially in Mysore, though it received further setbacks from the Lingāyat rising and the advent of Rāmaṇuja in the 12th century A.D.⁴

In the light of what has been narrated above it is surprising that Jainism was not extinguished in the storm of persecution and reformation which swept Buddhism out of India. Mrs. Stevenson supplies the answer by saying that "the character of Jainism, however, was such as to enable it to throw out tentacles to help it in its hour of need."⁵ Then too among its chief heroes it had found niches for some of the favourites of the Hindu pantheon, Rāma, Kṛishṇa, Baladeva or Balarāma and the like. Though it denies the existence of a creator and of the Hindu Trimūrti it believes in many of the Hindu minor gods.⁶ Thus for instance, according to the Jainas, Indra or Devendra (Saudharmendra) "belongs specially to them, but has been stolen from them by the Brahmans."⁷ Another instance, more telling than any other, is the inclusion by the Jainas of the Hindu avatār Kṛishṇa in their list of the future Tīrthaṅkaras of whom Kṛishṇa is to become the 12th, Amama by name. The fact that they were inclined in early days to absorb popular Hindu mythology is proved by their including in the list of future Tīrthaṅkaras not only Kṛishṇa's brother, Baladeva, who is to become the 14th Tīrthaṅkara Nishpulaka, but also Kṛishṇa's mother, Devaki, who becomes the 11th Tīrthaṅkara Munisuvrata, Baladeva's mother, Rohiṇī, who becomes Chitrugupta, the 16th Tīrthaṅkara, the Hindu ascetic Dvaipāyana, who set fire to Dvārakā and Kuṇjika, who in his past life was Javakumāra.

¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, p. 215.

² Ibid., p. 216.

³ The latest Census Report (1931) gives the number of Jainas for the Madras Presidency as 31,237. Madras City and South Kanara, Chingleput and Arcot (South and North) districts alone containing 25,976, the majority of the number quoted. Though Jaina traditions are fast dying and the number of Jainas is decreasing, the memory of the sickening struggle between Jainism and Brahmanism is kept alive even to-day in the fresco-paintings on the ceiling of the maṇḍapa of the Golden-lotus tank of the Mṛnākṣhi temple at Madura, which illustrate scenes of impaling and tortures to which the Jainas were said to have been subjected at the instance of Tiruñāṇa Sambandha. It is sad to note that this humiliation, in the shape of a mock-persecution and mock-impaling, is made an item in five out of 12 annual festivals at the Madura temple. For details see Studies in South Indian Jainism, part I, p. 79.

⁴ The Heart of Jainism, p. 18.

⁵ See Appendix III, pp. 186, 191-195, 200, 202-204 and 207.

⁶ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 26 ff.

The former becomes Yaśodhara, the 19th Tirthaṅkara and the latter becomes Vijaya, the 20th Tirthaṅkara.¹ An examination of the details given in Appendix III (pp. 185-235) under iconography and classification of souls will give many more instances of what Mrs. Stevenson styles as "Hindu influence."

These elements of "Hindu influence," it should be understood, cannot have been forced on Jainism but must have been absorbed either deliberately or unconsciously. Interpolations embodying Brahmanical ritual, like the observance on the part of the Jaina of the sixteen kinds of ceremonies² known to the follower of the Vedas³ and the recognition of the Brahmana class as an integral part of the Jaina caste system⁴ appear to have been made to soften Brahman opposition and to "placate the Brahmanical hatred and win them over to protect the Jainas against bitter persecution at the hands of their co-religionists (Hindus)."⁵ Probably this was the only means left under the then existing conditions of preserving the Faith so dear to them. They gave some of the minor gods of the Hindu pantheon places in their own and the gods thus included came to be called Kshetrapālas or protectors of the place and they "certainly protected the temples from Hindu fury."⁶ When, therefore, storms of persecution swept over the land, Jainism found it easy to take refuge in Hinduism⁷ "which opened its capacious bosom to receive it and to the conquerors it seemed an indistinguishable part of that great system"⁸ (i.e., Hinduism). Jaina monuments such as those forming the subject of this paper have therefore been allowed to exist side by side even with such important Hindu temples as those of Kāñchi.¹

THE TEMPLES.

The two temples at Tiruparuttikunram are among the oldest temples of the district. The older of the two is a small shrine dedicated to Chandraprabha, the eighth Tirthaṅkara. The other, which is later, is larger, being in fact the largest Jaina temple in the Conjeevaram taluk. It is dedicated to Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkara, popularly known as Mahāvīra and locally as Trāilokyanātha. The history of these

¹ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 277; see below, pp. 212-213.

² E.g., Garbhāṇḍava, etc.; for details see Ind. Ant., Vol. XXXII, pp. 460-461.

³ Asiatic Researches, Vol. 9, p. 247.

⁴ C. R. Jain, Nishkhaṇḍana, p. 102—"The recognition of the Brahmana class as an integral part of the Jaina caste system is attributed by some Jaina authorities to Bharata, the son of the first Tirthaṅkara, who, it appears, on being apprised of it, condemned his son's action in 'undisguised language.' But most Jainas are agreed in saying that it was the work of some interested persons probably about the time of the author of Ādi Purāṇa."

⁵ Ibid., p. 102.

⁶ Ibid., p. VIII; see below, pp. 202-204.

⁷ Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 199—"... in some points they considered it advantageous to approach the Brahmins, probably in order thereby to escape being persecuted by them."

⁸ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 19.

⁹ By an irony of fate, indeed, a few secluded places of considerable importance to the Jainas, like the ones under description, a few scattered shrines, statues and sculptures (some of these are now in the Madras Museum) of their Tirthaṅkaras and martyrs and other gods, and a few books and manuscripts alone remain to-day to testify to the "high purposes, the comprehensive proselytizing zeal and the political influence" that Jainism should have inspired in "her fiery votaries of old"—Studies in South Indian Jainism, p. 80.

temples is clearly recorded in their styles of architecture and in the inscriptions found in them. It is for this reason, and on account of a series of paintings in the larger of them, that they are specially interesting. Local tradition says that they owe their existence to a Pallava king and that he built them at the instance of two Jaina teachers, who lived in the village.¹ The first of the tradition is in accordance with the style of architecture of the earlier of the two, but the second part does not agree with inscriptions in the later temple which show that the two teachers mentioned were not contemporaneous with the Pallavas, but flourished some six centuries after them, i.e., in the 14th century.

THE CHANDRAPRABHA TEMPLE (Pl. i, fig. A; pl. iii, fig. 1)

The small temple dedicated to Chandraprabha lies to the north of the larger temple and is situated in one corner of a garden attached to it. The entrance, which faces east, leads into a narrow transverse passage bounded on the opposite side by a wall. Two Pallava pilasters (pl. i-B, 2) flank the entrance, one on either side of it, with their inner sides (i.e., the sides facing the entrance) flat. The lintels over them form part of a row of sunk bands placed at equal intervals, giving thereby no room for the assumption that the entrance was built in the wall later than the time of the wall itself. Thus the entrance made on the wall is as originally designed. The wall on the inner side of the passage is 10' 1½" × 8' with the corbels of the pilasters at either end flat as in the case of the pilasters flanking the entrance. The northern end of the passage is occupied by a flight of steps. These steps have been clearly inserted after the temple was built. The inner wall bears six pilasters of the Pallava type as found on the outer walls of the temple (pl. i-B, 2). The first two from each end have shallow spaces between them, while the spaces between the rest are deep. The space between the central pair forms a niche in the centre of the wall opposite the door. Presumably, therefore, the wall extended on its left to the same extent as on its right. The deep sunk central niche is 4' high and 1' 6½" wide. The first pilaster from the left has its southern side, now covered partially by a narrow wall blocking the gap between it and the outer wall of the temple, cut like the sixth, i.e., the corresponding one at the right hand end of the wall. This suggests that a passage about the width of the opening now occupied by the stairs, 2' 9", must have gone round the inner shrine as in the Vaikunthanātha or Vaikunthaperumāṇa temple at Conjeevaram. The Vaikunthanātha temple, being larger, has this passage 3' in width. The blocking of the southern end of the transverse passage has been done irregularly, the joints becoming apparent on examination. The inner wall has been so very thickly plastered with undressed chunam above the pilasters that any ornamentation it may have had here is no longer visible. Over it are placed granite beams irregularly, suggesting a later age for the superstructure. The plinth of this inner wall shows two mouldings with a sunken band between them as in the Kailāsanātha, Vaikunthanātha, Mataṅgeśvara and Mukteśvara temples of Conjeevaram.

¹ J. A. S. S., 1922-23, p. 24.

The wall under discussion is somewhat puzzling. Presumably it must either have formed the eastern wall of a shrine resembling the Mahendravarmaśvara-Gṛiha in the Kailāsanātha temple, but with its opening on its west wall or have been intended to screen the inner part of the temple from public view through the doorway. If the former surmise be admitted then the present passage would have been a vestibule corresponding to the small entrance court of the Kailāsanātha temple in front of the Mahendravarmaśvara-Gṛiha shrine, and the shrine itself would be a subsidiary one with its opening on the west, doubtless facing another bigger shrine which opened on the east. This would lead one to assume that the whole temple was planned on the model of a Viṣṇu or Śiva temple, with the sanctuary and the small shrine for Garuḍa or Nandi, the vāhanas of Viṣṇu or Śiva facing it. The temple under discussion is at present Jaina and we know of no Hindu temples later converted into Jaina ones. Neither, however, do we know of any Jaina temple with two shrines, one for the main god, say a Tīrthaṅkara, and the other for some attendant god of his like, a Yaksha. Therefore, if the present temple did contain two shrines and originated as a Jaina one, it was probably designed in imitation of say, a Śiva temple consisting of the Śiva shrine and the Nandi shrine, the latter facing the former. There is, however, also the possibility that the inner wall of the transverse entrance passage was not the back of a subsidiary shrine, but just a simple screen. In either case the main shrine would have served as the basis on which the present garbhagṛiha of the Chandraprabha shrine above has arisen, when it was closed. The latter's present measurements are probably the former's original measurements. A processional path about 3 feet wide, can be seen on three sides of the shrine above, the antarāla occupying its front, where the fourth side could be expected. This path indicates that it arose over a similar processional path below, now closed. The walls of the temple that we see from outside, standing in the garden, would thus be the prākāras or outermost walls, as in the case of the Kailāsanātha temple.

The steps at the right hand end of the transverse passage lead to an upper floor where the present Chandraprabha shrine is situated. It is built at a height of about 12 feet from the ground. It is said to-day that such a construction was necessitated, owing to the fact that cotton cultivation was once extensively carried on here, from which the village came to be called "(Tiru)paruttikuṇṇam" or "the hill of cotton" and that the image had to be placed on the second floor in order that it might not be hidden. The Jains of the locality call this temple by such names as "Ērvāṇa-sthālam," and "Malayanār-kōyil," names which are associated with this temple probably because of its elevation.

The upper floor (pl. iii, fig. 1) consists of the sanctuary (garbhagṛiha) with the usual antarāla attached to it in front, a small maṇḍapa (this is probably intended to answer the ardha-maṇḍapa) in front of the antarāla, and the narrow processional path already alluded to, which goes round the shrine. A vimāna, of brick and mortar, has been put up over the sanctuary, the workmanship of which is clearly recent.

While both the garbhagṛiha and the antarāla are of brick, the ceiling of the latter is of granite and sandstone slabs, combined irregularly, the latter probably removed from the old structure. These are arranged one above the other in the form of an octagon. The ardhamandapa in front of the antarāḷa, to which the steps from below lead, has two pillars standing on a modern brick flooring and supporting an equally modern chunam ceiling.

The sanctuary contains a big image (now coloured) of Chandraprabha, of stucco, repaired some thirty years ago, which is the principal image, and two other smaller images, one of Kunthunātha, the seventeenth Tirthaṅkara, made of white marble, and the other of Vardhamāna made of granite. All the three are seated in the pariyāṅka attitude, i.e., with the legs crossed and the palms placed one over the other on the lap. Two Devas, also of stucco, with chāmara in hand, stand behind, one on either side of the Chandraprabha image and like the latter are coloured over. The history of the Chandraprabha image seems to be unknown. The images of Kunthunātha and Vardhamāna are recent additions, that of the former being a present made by Mr. Bapu Jain of Perambur, near Madras. The image of Vardhamāna was bought in 1922 from Mr. Bhujanga Rao of Conjeevaram by the temple authorities who considered its acquisition for their temple as a work of deep merit. About 15 years ago this image was found as treasure trove under an old coconut tree blown down by a strong wind in the vicinity of the Kamākshi Amman temple in Conjeevaram.¹ The image is in a good state of preservation and represents Vardhamāna in the pariyāṅka-āsana, with the bhā-maṇḍala or the halo over his head in the form of a semi-circle. Service has been conducted in this temple only since the arrival of this image. On the pedestal of the other image, which as we have said represents Kunthunātha, the seventeenth Tirthaṅkara, are incised the following letters in modern Grantha script:—

“Kunthunāthāya namaḥ” meaning “Salutation to Kunthunātha.”

In the garbhagriha, on its two side walls, some modern paintings, recently white-washed over, show six Devis or attendant goddesses of half life-size, three on each side. All the six are standing, with conical crowns (kirita) on their heads, and are turning towards the god whom they have come to worship. The first, on the northern wall (i.e., the one farther away from the god) holds in both her hands a tray (tāmbāḷam), the second a garland with a lotus at each end, and the third (i.e., the one nearer the god) a similar garland in her right hand while her left hangs down. The three on the southern wall are engaged as follows: the first (i.e., the one farther away from the god) holds in both her hands a tray (tāmbāḷam), the second a garland in her left hand while her right hangs down, and the third (the one nearer the god) with both hands holding something not clear, but probably a garland.

Attempts were made to find out what lay inside the lower shrine by doing trial diggings from above, i.e., from the upper shrine and from the antarāḷa, but only sandy mud was revealed as far as the eye could see or the crowbar could reach. It is evident that the lower room is completely filled with this sand.

¹ I am indebted to Mr. Parivanath, one of the Temple Trustees, for this information.

The temple itself shows certain architectural details that place it among the temples that are said to have been built by the later Pallava kings beginning with Narasimhavarman II alias Rajasimha. Dr. Jouveau Dubreuil, while speaking of the later Pallava antiquities, divides them into two:—(1) Those without inscriptions and (2) Those with inscriptions.¹ He mentions this temple among the former and assigns it on grounds of architectural details to a period ranging from 720-900 A.D. He does not appear to be right in classifying this temple under those without inscriptions, for there are inscriptions all along its lower plinth and the base. Unfortunately the temple was built with the same kind of sandstone with which the Kailasanātha temple and the Vaikunthanātha temple and the other Pallava temples in Conjeevaram were built, and it has been crumbling and peeling off layer after layer as in the other temples, carrying with it the inscriptions it once contained on its surface. While it is true that I could not trace any inscription in the Pallava Grantha script either on the base or on any other part of the temple it is impossible to conclude that there were no Pallava inscriptions here. The base, where one should look for the earlier inscriptions, is badly weathered and has received many chunam coatings during the periodical repairs done by the temple authorities as in most of the other temples in Conjeevaram. Also it is submerged in the earth to a great extent.

The plinth has two rectangular mouldings, one above and the other below, with a sunk band between them. The lower moulding is of the same sandstone as that of the rest of the temple, while the moulding above is of granite. Inscriptions are found on both, but while those on the granite one are in a fairly good condition and are confined to parts of its upper side, those on the lower one are fragmentary, owing to the stone having fallen out layer after layer in many places, and run the entire length of the plinth round the temple. The inscriptions on the upper moulding appear to be two, both of the same king, Rajendra Chola I. One of them, commencing from the right of the entrance on the eastern wall of the temple runs due north and turns west running the entire length of the temple's northern wall (No. I, see below, p. 49). It is a fairly complete prasasti or glorification of Rajendra Chola's and is unfortunately incomplete. After a stage the letters become faint gradually owing to the stone getting smooth and the long line of inscription disappears.

The moulding on the eastern wall of the temple and on the left of the entrance which at once catches the eye as we face the door of the temple contains the other inscription, which consists of a few letters running in a single line from the south to the north (No. II, see below, p. 49). The letters are so very faint that they can hardly be read satisfactorily. Also the latter part of the inscription has been permanently hidden from view by a flight of steps, of brick and mortar, built against the plinth in front of the entrance. This is unfortunate as to read the rest of the inscription one would have to demolish the steps. The few words that can be read constitute the beginning of the prāśasti or glorification of Rājendra Chola I (1012-1044 A.D.).

¹ G. J. Dubreuil, Pallava Antiquities, Vol. 2, p. 9.

The inscription on the lower moulding, which we have said is hopelessly fragmentary, appears to commence on the north wall of the temple and runs all along the base of the north wall and of the western and southern walls too. While, however, a few letters are clearly seen on the northern wall which help to make out the sense, those found on the western and southern walls are so completely lost (No. III, see below, p. 49) that what remain convey no sense. The few words that can be deciphered also appear to constitute the prāśasti or glorification of Rājendra Chola I.

It is unfortunate that all these inscriptions are incomplete and tell us nothing regarding what Rājendra Chola I did for this temple. The portions that contain the subject matter are badly damaged, the stone having peeled off in those places. Though none of these inscriptions appear to date earlier than Rājendra Chola I, who succeeded Rājārāja I in 1012 A.D. and ruled the Chola kingdom till 1044 A.D., and no Pallava letters have yet been found, the inscriptions indicate that the temple was built earlier than the time of the adjoining Vardhamāna temple, where, as we shall see while describing that temple, the earliest inscription is that of Kulottuṅga I (1070-1120 A.D.)—a hypothesis confirmed by its architecture, which is in Pallava style.

The corners of the walls bear pilasters with rearing lions at the bottom (pl. iii, fig. 1).¹ The corbels above these pilasters, show a curved profile suggesting the extremity of a joist and are ornamented with horizontal mouldings called by Dr. Jouveau Dubreuil "rollers," a motif which is exclusively Pallava "very probably borrowed from the art of the carpenter." The niches (koshtas) (pl. i-B, fig. 1) on the walls are simply outlined, not deeply sunk as are those of Chola times. This is also the case with niches found on the walls of the Vaikunṭhanātha or Perumāḷ temple and the southern wall of the Maṭaṅgeśvara temple at Conjeevaram.² An interesting feature of the niches both here and in the Vaikunṭhanātha and Maṭaṅgeśvara temples is that the lintel, which is otherwise plain, has a handle-like projection in its centre pointing downwards and marking the central line of the niche below. The torāṇa which we find in the Pallava monuments of Mahendra Varman I,³ of Narasimha Varman I (Māmalla) at Mahābalipuram⁴ and later on in monuments of the Chola period such as the Tanjore and Chidambaram temples is absent here. This is strange, especially when we remember that this type of niche has to be placed, in point of time, between the niches of the Mahendra-Māmalla and early Chola epochs. So when we are expecting to find in the later Pallava niches torāṇas of more ornate and developed form leading into the early Chola type⁵, it is surprising to find here that they have disappeared. No explanation

¹ Longhurst, Pallava Architecture, Part III, pls. IV c, d; VII a.

² Ren, Pallava Architecture, pls. XIV, XV and XVII; Longhurst, Pallava Architecture, Part III, pls. VII a, VIII b.

³ Longhurst, Pallava Architecture, Part I, pl. 11 b.

⁴ Ibid., part II, pls. VI b, X a.

⁵ G. J. Dubreuil, Dravidian Temple Architecture, pp. 44-45, figs. 33 (a) and 33 (b).

for this sudden disappearance is readily available; but the similar absence of this feature in the Vaikunṭhanātha temple suggests that the two are likely to date from about the same period. As the construction of the Vaikunṭhanātha temple is established on epigraphical grounds to fall within the reign of the later Pallava King Parameśvara Varman II, the son and successor of Rājasimha to whom the Kailāsanātha temple is attributed,¹ we may safely assign the Chandraprabha temple also to this period.

In this connection it will be useful to quote the opinions of three scholars that deal with the subject of Pallava Architecture; they are Rea, Longhurst and Dubreuil. The first says that the Chandraprabha temple "is a small building with few architectural details, and no sculptures worthy of note. A peculiarity about it, due to modern additions, is the blocking up of the original shrine on the ground floor, and constructing another in the upper storey of the tower with a stair leading up to it. The temple seems of late Pallava date."² The second has the following words:—" . . . and at Tiruparuthikundram, a hamlet three miles from the city, there is a Jaina temple built in the Rājasimha style and known as the Vardhamāna temple.³ It contains a number of mural paintings which although of no particular artistic merit are interesting from an iconographical point of view. This temple is still in use as a place of worship."⁴ Dubreuil assigns this temple definitely to Nandivarman Pallavamalla, the successor of Parameśvara Varman II, who built the Vaikunṭhanātha temple, and his words on this point are:—"Certain temples that do not bear any Pallava inscription, perhaps belong to the time of the Nandivarman dynasty. Such are . . . the Jaina temple of Vardhamānasvāmī⁵ at Tirupparuttikunru near Conjeevaram."⁶ While all the three are agreed on assigning this temple to the later Pallava period, the last named writer goes a step further and definitely places it in the reign of Nandivarman Pallavamalla. In his book dealing with this subject he does not give any reasons for his conclusion but I take it that he was led to it by observing the same architectural details in this temple and on the southern wall of the Matangeśvara temple which has been assigned to the Nandivarman period (800-900 A.D.) by Longhurst.⁷ To assign the Matangeśvara temple to Nandivarman Pallavamalla is both easy and natural, for it is strikingly similar in plan to the Mukteśvara temple,⁸ which must be placed in the reign of Nandivarman Pallavamalla on epigraphical grounds. But it is not equally clear that the Chandraprabha temple belongs to the same period. It resembles the Vaikunṭhanātha temple in that the niches on its walls, instead of being occupied by figures as are those of the Mukteśvara temple, are empty, their surfaces being on a level with that

¹ Longhurst, Pallava Architecture, Part III, p. 16.

² Rea, Pallava Architecture, p. 48.

³ Dubreuil and Longhurst somehow call the temple in the Rājasimha style the Vardhamāna temple, though it is called locally Chandraprabha temple or Īroṇṇuttholam or "Malayanār Kōyil." The real Vardhamāna temple where the mural paintings are found is the bigger temple which lies to the south of the Chandraprabha temple.

⁴ Longhurst, Pallava Architecture, Part III, p. 9.

⁵ G. Jooveau Dubreuil, Pallava Antiquities, Vol. II, p. 9.

⁶ Pallava Architecture, Part III, p. 19.

⁷ Ibid., pls. VIII (a) and (b).

of the wall, the lintel bearing a central downwardly-directed projection (pl. i-B, fig. 1). The same features can be found on the southern wall of the Matañgeśvara temple. While it would be easy and perhaps even safe to ascribe the Chandraprabha temple to the Rājasimha period (674-800 A.D.), its close similarity to the Vaikunṭhanātha temple in the matter of the closed vestibule and the upper shrines, and to the Mahendravarṃśvara-Griha in the Kailāsanātha temple in the matter of the narrow processional path around the shrine, will warrant its being ranked as one falling in the reign of Rājasimha's sons, Mahendravarman III, the one who built the Mahendravarṃśvara-Griha in the Kailāsanātha temple, and Parameśvaravarman II, who built the Vaikunṭhanātha temple. The Chandraprabha temple, as has been observed already, presents more points of similarity with the Vaikunṭhanātha temple than the Mahendravarṃśvara-Griha and we therefore assign it to Parameśvaravarman II (715 A.D.). The fact that he has built a temple for Viṣṇu, thereby deviating from the path of his father and brother who have concentrated on Śiva temples, and that, though he bore the name Parameśvara, which was a name of Śiva, he was attracted to Vaiṣṇavism, would lend support to the surmise that he was probably very liberal and tolerant towards the other faiths, and may consequently have devoted a little of his attention to Jainism also.

It has already been said that the three inscriptions of Rājendra Chola I, the illustrious and tolerant son of a still more illustrious and tolerant father, Rājaraṇja I, are silent about what he did to the temple. Still they give rise to the question why they are found in this temple and not in the next temple dedicated to Vardhamāna, which is bigger and so close to it. But, as we shall see while describing the Vardhamāna temple, the earliest inscription there is one of Kulottuṅga I (No. 5, pp. 52-54), dated in his forty-sixth regnal year. The earlier inscriptions such as those of Rājendra Chola I are found only in the Pallava temple, while all the later inscriptions beginning with that of Kulottuṅga I (No. 5) and ending with comparatively recent ones are found in the Vardhamāna temple. This could happen only if the latter temple came into existence after the time that the records of Rājendra Chola I were incised on the Pallava temple. It is also evident from what has been said above that from the time that the Vardhamāna temple was erected the Pallava temple was completely neglected, at least so far as the inscribing of records was concerned.

Another question which is as interesting as its solution is puzzling, concerns the closing of the ground floor of the Pallava temple. When and why was it closed? Can it have been a Śiva temple, like the other Pallava temples of the neighbourhood, later closed by the Jains? This seems most unlikely, for rival sects do not close each others' temples; they usually destroy them. It can hardly have been closed merely as being unnecessary after the erection of the Vardhamāna temple, for had it still been in use at that time, it would almost certainly have remained as a subsidiary shrine hallowed by its antiquity and long usage. Presumably, therefore, the gap between the latest inscription on the Pallava temple and the earliest on the Chola temple implies a period between the closing of the former and the building of the latter. For this, only one possible cause suggests itself—pollution such as could not well be purged. Why the Vardhamāna temple was not erected immediately is not clear—possibly because the means were not available at once. Worship must presumably have been carried on in some temporary erection. Or possibly the original shrine of the Vardhamāna temple may have been built at once and the rest added later.

THE VARDHAMĀNA TEMPLE (Pl. ii).

Adjacent to the temple of Chandraprabha and a little to the south of it, is the second and bigger temple, where several other Tīrthāṅkaras are worshipped, chief of them being Vardhamāna (the twenty-fourth Tīrthāṅkara) or Trailokyanātha as he is locally called, from whom the temple derives its name. Service is mainly conducted here. Crole mentions this temple on page 116 of the Chingleput District Manual¹.

The temple consists of two blocks, an inner one and an outer one, the former located in the centre of the temple and the latter attached to the compound wall of the temple. The various parts of the inner block are as follows:—

An apsidal shrine dedicated to Vardhamāna (pl. ii, 1) stands in the centre with two other shrines (pl. ii, 2 and 3), one on each side of it. The latter shrines are dedicated to Pushpadanta, the ninth Tīrthāṅkara, and Dharmadevī, respectively. In front of these three shrines is a pillared hall or ardhamandapa which we may call the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa (pl. ii, 4). To this is attached in front a mukha-mandapa which we shall term the Vardhamāna-mukha-mandapa (pl. ii, 6). Adjoining the above three shrines and to the left of them is a group of three other shrines (pl. ii, 7-9) dedicated to three other Tīrthāṅkaras, Padmaprabha, Pārśvanātha and Vāsupājya, sixth, twenty-third and twelfth Tīrthāṅkaras, respectively. In front of these three shrines which we shall call the Trikūṭa-Bastī shrines is an ardhamandapa similar to the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa (pl. ii, 10). This will be referred to as the Trikūṭa-Bastī-ardhamandapa. As in the case of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa here also there is a mukha-mandapa (pl. ii, 11) attached to the Trikūṭa-Bastī-ardhamandapa which shall be termed the Trikūṭa-Bastī-mukha-mandapa. And in front of the Trikūṭa-Bastī-mukha-mandapa and the Vardhamāna-mukha-mandapa and attached to them is a pillared hall (kalyāṇa-mandapa) (pl. ii, 12) which we shall call the Saṅgīta-mandapa, a name by which it is referred to in one of the inscriptions (No. 7, see below, p. 57).

Vardhamāna, Pushpadanta and Dharmadevī shrines.—A closed shrine in which the principal Tīrthāṅkara Vardhamāna is installed, with the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa attached to it in front, is what appears to be the earliest part of the temple (pl. ii, 1). There appears to be nothing left of the original shrine, the present structure being built completely of brick and mortar. Its apsidal shape, coupled with the fact that no structural temple in South India is without a shrine over which the vīmāna arises, suggests that the earlier shrine, presumably of sand-stone, of which the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa is also built, may have fallen owing to dilapidation and that at a very late stage the present brick-work probably came into existence. According to the temple priest a base in granite, resembling the base of the present Vardhamāna shrine, was prepared for this temple in a place about 12 miles from Tiruparuttikunram, but for some unknown reason was not removed to the temple. It was lying there for many years, ever since the priest could remember (the priest is now 60 years of age), till very recently when it was removed to the Jaina temple at Karandai, about 12 miles from Tiruparuttikunram, a place that is said to have been the seat of the famous sage called Akalaṅka.¹ The other shrines stand, as narrated above, one on either side of the Vardhamāna shrine, one for Pushpadanta, also called Suvidhinātha, the ninth Tīrthaṅkara, to the right (pl. ii, 2), and the other for Dharmadevī, also called Āmbikā, the Yakshī of Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara² to the left (pl. ii, 3). The fact that the deities to whom these two shrines are dedicated have nothing to do with Vardhamāna, who is the principal Tīrthaṅkara of the temple, and that the shrines themselves seem to have been designed so that they might be crowded into the spaces on either side of the Vardhamāna shrine suggest for them a later date than that of this shrine.

¹ " Its florid architecture and the considerable artistic beauty of some of the details, notably of the sculptures in the cloistered court which surrounds it, and of the colouring of the paintings which adorn the ceilings, lead to the assumption, which is confirmed by various inscriptions on the walls, that it belongs to the period when the Chola power was at its zenith and extended even into Bengal, as well as over the entire south and Telugu and Karnata " —p. 116.

It may be suggested that the original Vardhamāna shrine was located within the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa now attached to it. But there is evidence which indicates that this was not so. At the point where the present Vardhamāna shrine joins the western wall of its ardhamandapa, the upper moulding of the outer side of this wall bears on each side of the shrine a projection, which clearly proves that either a niche or an opening originally existed between them. That it was an opening and not only a niche is shown by the moulding on the plinth. This is obscured on the southern side by the overlapping brick moulding of the shrine itself, but can be seen on the northern, where it shows a precisely similar projection.

Thus it would appear that there was an opening on the west wall of the ardhamandapa in front of the present shrine of Vardhamāna. The shrines of Vardhamāna and Pushpadanta are both apsidal, that of Pushpadanta (pl. ii, 2) being smaller than that of Vardhamāna. As proof of frequent interference with these shrines till very recently by way of repairs it may be noted that a little part of the southern wall of the brick shrine of Pushpadanta is built of irregular granite pieces loosely laid.

The shrine dedicated to Dharmadevī, the Yakshī of Neminātha (pl. ii, 3), is situated on the south of the Vardhamāna shrine and is totally different from the other two shrines in that it is very small and square instead of being apsidal. According to local traditions the image of Dharmadevī appears to have been introduced into the temple, according to one version, in the thirteenth century A.D. from the Kāmākshī temple at Conjeevaram, and according to another in the ninth century A.D., soon after Śaṅkara-chārya established the Kāmakoṭi-pīṭha in the Kāmākshī temple, both versions regarding

¹ See Appendix III, p. 216.

² Ibid., pp. 209-10.

Kamakshi temple as having originally been a Jaina shrine dedicated to Dharmadevi, the Yakshi of Neminātha. The veracity of these two versions is much disputable as the traditions themselves are of late origin, probably two centuries old. These traditions clearly suggest that the image of Dharmadevi was a late acquisition to the Vardhamāna temple. Little care seems to have been bestowed upon the small shrine in which this image is housed nor have any of the adjoining shrines been used as its model. Like them, however, it is of brick. It has been joined to the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa by making a very narrow opening in its west wall.

While the images of Vardhamāna and Pushpadanta are of wood, huge and coloured and are seated on pedestals in the paryāṅka attitude, i.e., cross-legged, with the hands placed one over the other (the right over the left), the image of Dharmadevi is small, of granite and is standing on a padmāsana in the tribhāṅga pose, i.e., with three bends in the body. She is shown with two hands, the right holding a blue water-lily (nīlotpala) and the left hanging down "like the tail of a cow."¹ Behind her legs a lion can be seen and on the padmāsana, on which she is standing, are carved in relief her two sons and an attendant woman.²

Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa (pl. ii, 4).—The ardhamandapa is a hall, practically dark, for light can pass in only through a door-way on the eastern wall of the hall facing the main shrine and through small windows, one on either side of the door, which hardly let in any light, being of pierced stone with a design composed of two intertwining creepers. It contains three rows of six pillars each, all of them in a simple style that originated in the early Chola period and is still in use (pl. i-B, 3). Two of these pillars are partly hidden by the walls of the Pushpadanta shrine, the front of which actually extends forwards into the ardhamandapa.

The outside of the north wall of the ardhamandapa which is visible from the processional path, is of granite in the region of its plinth and of sandstone above, as in the adjoining Chandraprabha temple, except the lowest layer of stone near the top moulding of the plinth, which is of granite. Four pilasters of the Chola type (pl. i-B, 4) are found on this wall. They support two lintels, one plain and the other curved, one above the other. Over this is the eaves (koṭuṅgai) fitted with granite slabs designed as drooping lotus-petals. Above this is the terrace.

The eastern wall of this ardhamandapa is just like the northern wall described above. Granite continues for the plinth and the lowest layer of the wall above it, but diminishes in the case of the latter as we proceed south. There are six pilasters on this wall (pl. i-B, 4), of which the one in the northern corner is common to this and the northern walls. Between the middle pair of pilasters is the entrance to the ardhamandapa. This door-way is decorated with a lotus petal moulding above and on either side, supported by a single snake-hood ornament (nāga-bandha) issuing from a low pedestal. This design is also found on the door-ways of the Trikūṭa-Basti, Munivāsa and the store room which will be dealt with subsequently. It appears to have been in general use at the time of Kulottuṅga III and Rājarāja III¹. A pilaster on the southern corner of the wall carries a projecting Chola corbel such as we find in the various structures of the temple, suggesting that the wall originally took a turn to the west there. The two windows already noticed have been subsequently interpolated in the eastern wall, one facing the Pushpadanta and the other the Dharmadevī shrines. The later age of the latter shrines warrants a similar later date to these windows, for they were intended to show the deities in these two shrines to the faithful that could not get admission into the ardhamandapa and had therefore to satisfy themselves by looking from outside, as non-Jainas and Europeans desiring to see the deities have to do to-day. The lintels of this wall are two, one plain and the other above it with the lotus petal double curve so frequently found in temples of this and later dates, a motif which is also found on the lintels of the verandas and the Trikūṭa-Basti shrines to be described subsequently (see below, pp. 23-26).

¹ Cf. pl. xxxii, fig. 3; see below, pp. 157-160.

² For details regarding their iconography, see Appendix III, pp. 209-10.

The southern wall of the ardhamandapa is similar to the north wall with the difference that the lower layer of the wall above the granite plinth is of sandstone like the rest of the wall above. Only three pilasters can be seen on it, the fourth being hidden by the wall of an adjoining shrine dedicated to Vāsupūjya, included in the structure called Trikūṭa-Basti. Even these three are partially hidden by the pillars of the Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa, one of which has its top broken. On the lintels of this wall, where the wall of the Vāsupūjya shrine covers it, a few lines of an inscription to be assigned to Kulottuṅga I (No. 5, see below, pp. 52-54), are visible, a copy of the hidden part of which is found on granite lintels of the Trikūṭa-Basti shrines. Below these lines and reaching up to the plinth, the first and the second mouldings of which alone are visible, are two inscriptions dated in the reign of Vikrama Chola (No. 6, see below, pp. 54-57), several lines of which are now hidden by the Vāsupūjya shrine wall. These two inscriptions are dated in Vikrama Chola's reign, one in his thirteenth year and the other in his seventeenth year. The former corresponds to 1131 A.D., and the latter to 1135 A.D. (see No. 6, p. 57) and both record grants and sales during the reign of the said king for the benefit of the temple. These two and the inscription of Kulottuṅga I (1070-1120 A.D.), the father of Vikrama Chola, were originally incised on the southern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa when there was neither the Trikūṭa-Basti nor its ardhamandapa to hide them from view. Here it has to be remarked that almost all the inscriptions in this temple are incised in prominent places, the idea being that the public should be able to see them, so that those benefited by them might receive their dues without any question. Thus the temple walls and other parts that show these inscriptions functioned as registration documents. The utmost care would therefore be taken by those that made additions to the temples to see that no inscriptions were removed or hidden. When this was however unavoidable it was customary to take copies of them². This practice was evidently widespread in

¹ Cf. Teiśūlam temple near Madras.

² T. A. Gopinatha Rao, Chola-gamāna-Charitraṃ, p. 63; S.I.I., Vol. III, p. 99.

South India, instances being known at Tiruvallam, Tiṇḍivanam, Tirupati, Tirukurṭalam, Tirumalapādi, Kuḍumiyāmalai and elsewhere.

The earliest inscriptions in the temple are the three already referred to, viz., one in the forty-sixth regnal year of Kulottuṅga I (1116 A.D.) and two dated in the reign of his son Vikrama Chola (1118-1136 A.D.). All these three were originally inscribed on the southern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa. The existence here of Kulottuṅga's inscription of the forty-sixth year of his reign proves that the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa was earlier than this date (i.e., 1116 A.D.), but how much earlier we cannot definitely say.

Kulottuṅga I appears to have developed a tolerant outlook on alien faiths¹, and many of his inscriptions dated in the early years of his reign are found in Conjeevaram², in temples there that are only a couple of miles from Tiruparuttikuṅgam. His first known inscription in this temple being dated as late as the forty-sixth year of his long reign which lasted for fifty years (1070-1120 A.D.), therefore suggests that probably till about then there was no temple here apart from the Pallava temple which has the inscriptions of Rajendra Chola I (1012-1044 A.D.). The Vardhamāna shrine probably came into existence between the reigns of Rajendra Chola I (1012-1044 A.D.) and Kulottuṅga I (1070-1120 A.D.), for we cannot conceive of a Chola temple without a definite shrine. But the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa, on the wall of which these inscriptions are found, must be assigned to the reign of Kulottuṅga I. It has therefore to be inferred that the starting point in the history of the existing structures of this temple is little if any earlier than the forty-sixth regnal year (1116 A.D.) of Kulottuṅga I.

The visibility of these inscriptions has been affected, as already pointed out, owing to later additions made to the original structure. Later copies of them have therefore been made on separate granite slabs and inserted elsewhere. In certain cases, as we shall see presently, it has also resulted in the misplacing of these inscribed slabs (see below, pp. 51, 52, 60 & 61, Nos. 4 and 20). The earlier part of Kulottuṅga's record has therefore been incised on granite lintels that have been inserted in front of the three shrines that constitute the Trikūṭa-Basti, while a copy of the earlier record of Vikrama Chola (dated 1131 A.D.) has been incised on the beams of the veranda (mukhamandapa) attached to the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa so that they would still be prominently shown. Here there is another point of interest to be noted. Inscription No. 4 (pp. 51-2) which is the copy of Vikrama Chola's inscription found on the veranda beams, embodies only one inscription of Vikrama Chola, the one dated in his thirteenth regnal year, the other one, which is small consisting of 6 lines, dated in his seventeenth regnal year, being omitted. The former is a long one and the more important of the two, and it may be inferred that the latter was probably considered not worth copying. Kulottuṅga's inscription was put on the lintels within the Trikūṭa-Basti, doubtless because the latter part of the inscription remained exposed at about the level of these lintels on its northern wall, which is also the southern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa. Light falls to-day on these lintels when the Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa door is open so that the inscription is readily seen.

¹ See Leiden grant—Burgess and Natesa Sastri, Tamil and Sanskrit Inscriptions, pp. 224-7.

² S.I.I., Vol. II, pp. 390-393.

Vardhamāna-mukhamandapa (pl. ii, 6).—This is a pial-like veranda, 8' 5" wide, and is attached to the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa in front. It extends along the latter's entire length, which is 40'. Its base (adhiṣṭhānam) bears mouldings of the form that came into general use about 1200 A.D., and an inscription found on it (No. 3, p. 50) which is dated in the twenty-first regnal year of Kulottuṅga III enables us to assign the veranda to the period of the later Cholas (1070-1250 A.D.). The ceiling of this veranda which bears some paintings, now badly damaged¹ rests, on its western side, on the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa, and on its eastern side, on beams supported by a row of pillars. These pillars are like those in the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa (pl. i-B, 3). The length of the elevated base of the veranda seems originally to have been less than the length of the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa. The veranda is approached by two flights of steps attached to its base, one towards its northern end and the other its southern end, both facing east. The northern one is flanked by a pair of Śura-Yali heads, the other by an elephant balustrade. On examination it becomes clear that the present position of the steps is different from what it was originally. The structure of the floor of the veranda at either end reveals that originally the steps led up to it there. They have evidently been removed to their present positions when alterations were made to the veranda to suit later constructions in the temple, such as for instance the Saṅgita-mandapa in front of the mukha-mandapa. At the same time the veranda was extended by about 4' by filling up the places they had occupied, rather carelessly, the arrangement of the slabs found in these spaces betraying the original position of the steps. Though both ends have been filled up, the corner of the original northern end of the base still bears a lion's head projecting parallel to the wall of the ardhamandapa and at a distance from it that exactly agrees with that of the steps. At the southern end there was evidently another such lion's head, but it is now broken. An attempt has been made to continue on the new southward extension of the base the ornamentation found on the original base. But the change from the original to the later and inferior work is very clear, especially in the carving of the frieze of lions' heads. Another point to be noted is that an inscription of the Vijayanagara king Kṛishṇadevarāya dated Śaka 1439² (1517 A.D.) commences on this extension while that of Kulottuṅga III (No. 3, p. 50) commences only on the old base. This supports the suggestion that the shifting of the steps took place between the reigns of Kulottuṅga III (1178-1216 A.D.) and Kṛishṇadevarāya (1517 A.D.), probably as suggested below (p. 27) in 1387-88 A.D. when the Saṅgita-mandapa was built. In its present form the northern end of this veranda is closed by a wall which must also have been built not later than the time of the construction of the Saṅgita-mandapa, as some of the beams of the latter rest upon it. The inner side of this wall contains a niche within which a balipīṭha is placed with an inscription on its lintel ¹, containing a verse in praise of Mallishēṇa Vāmana, one of the five sages that lived in the village, ² to whom the balipīṭha was dedicated. On a brick elevation below this niche, is placed another balipīṭha which is intended for Pushpasena, a disciple of Mallishēṇa. ³ During the construction of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa two slabs from the upper parts of the veranda were also shifted without much attention being paid to the inscriptions found on them. One of them which must evidently at first have formed the cross-beam supporting the roof at the northern end of the original veranda has been turned through an angle of 90° about its eastern (outer) end, so as to fill the space between the end of the original architrave and the extension of the original northern wall of the shrine. Several letters on this beam forming part of inscription No. 4 (pp. 51-52) are partly hidden by this extension wall. Another slab thus interfered with faces the Vardhamāna shrine. It has some letters which run in continuation of inscription No. 4 found on the other slabs. While all these contain the letters on their inner sides this slab alone shows them on its outer side, i.e., the side that faces the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, for which reason it can be said to prove that alterations were made in the veranda during the construction of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa.

¹ See below, pp. 124-125.

² See No. 10 below, p. 58.

Two inscriptions situated in this veranda, both dated in the reign of Kulottuṅga III, one dated in his twenty-first regnal year (1199 A.D.) and engraved on the lowest moulding of the base in front (No. 3, pp. 50-51) and the other dated in his twenty-second regnal year and found on the architrave of the outer side of the veranda and on the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa (No. 4) show that the veranda was already in existence at that time. The fact that the latter speaks of the erection at that time of the Trikūṭa-Bastī, but that no mention is made in either of the inscriptions of the erection of this veranda seem clearly to indicate that the veranda was not then new. The latter inscription is a copy of one of the two inscriptions of Vikrama Chola, dated in his thirteenth regnal year (No. 6), which had to be shown in a prominent place as the Trikūṭa-Bastī-maṇḍapa which was contemplated was likely to hide it from view. This inscription is dated in the twenty-second regnal year of Kulottuṅga III and is important for two reasons; in the first place it speaks of the construction of the Trikūṭa-Bastī-ardhamāṇḍapa as falling in 1200 A.D.; and in the second place it fails to add the name Karuvūr in the prāśasti of the king. As Kulottuṅga III captured Karuvūr in 1200 A.D. and included its conquest in the glorification part of his inscriptions subsequent to this event, the failure to mention it here signifies that this inscription is prior to that conquest.

Two other inscriptions, of less importance, are also incised on the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa and ought to be referred as located in the Mukha-maṇḍapa (Nos. 20 and 21, pp. 60-61). They are both of the time of Rājarāja III, the successor of Kulottuṅga III who ruled between 1216-1246 A.D., one of them being dated in the seventh regnal year of the king (1223 A.D.). These two inscriptions were no doubt engraved on the wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa eastern wall as there was no room for them elsewhere, and could more conveniently have been placed on the extension of the veranda in front of the Trikūṭa-Basti if such had existed when they were cut.

¹ No. 15, p. 59.

² See below, pp. 42-46.

³ See below, pp. 44-45.

Trikūṭa-Basti (pl. ii, 7, 8 and 9).—As narrated above the name Trikūṭa-Basti meaning the "three-peaked residence ('Basti' from the Sanskrit 'Vasati' = residence)" is given to the group of three or to speak more correctly of two shrines adjoining the Vardhamāna shrine and to the south of it.

A clear idea of these shrines can be obtained from the back of the temple, if we stand on the processional path behind them. The shrines themselves are only two and are similarly designed. Both are square, their western (back) walls projecting beyond the level of the Vardhamāna and Pushpadanta shrines. The shrine on the proper right is dedicated to Padmaprabha, the sixth Tirthaṅkara and the shrine on the proper left to Vāsūpūjya, the twelfth Tirthaṅkara. While that of Padmaprabha is completely of brick with a plinth of plain mouldings, that of Vāsūpūjya is of brick above but with a plinth of granite below consisting of the usual Chola mouldings. The uppermost of these is supported by a row of couchant lions and in the sunk band below it there are panels still further sunk, three on each side, and one in the centre of the back wall. The wall between these two shrines is of brick and encloses a small chamber in which Pārśvanātha, the twenty-third Tirthaṅkara is installed, without even a vimāna above it. As already pointed out¹, the lintels of these shrines bear a copy of the earliest inscription in the temple, i.e., that of the forty-sixth regnal year of Kulottuṅga I, the greater part of which was hidden from view when the Vāsūpūjya shrine was erected. At that time the lintels must have been very conspicuous as there was only a small detached maṇḍapa in front of them (see No. 4, pp. 51-52). The date of the shrines can be determined by a reference to inscription No. 4, which speaks of the demolition of an older maṇḍapa to the south of the Vardhamāna block to give room for the present Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamāṇḍapa. The higher level of these shrines (higher than that of the adjoining Vardhamāna shrine by 9"), was presumably taken from that of the older maṇḍapa just mentioned. It is well known that the level of a maṇḍapa in a temple is always higher than that of the shrine. Thus the old level of the maṇḍapa was preserved by the Trikūṭa-Basti shrines and transmitted to the new and consequently later ardhamāṇḍapa.

The three shrines which are accessible from within the Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamāṇḍapa show clear traces of joints where the roof of the latter rests on the lintels of the former. The temple authorities have filled up the cracks that show at the joints with thick coatings of chunam, but they are not sufficient to hide the cracks and are easily removable, though I did not venture to do so as I was reminded by the temple priest that I should make good the loss that the temple would sustain thereby, by undertaking to fill the joints with chunam.

It is likely that when the three shrines were built some of the slabs that were originally in the southern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa were removed lest they should get hidden by the new construction, or, more probably, that a copy of the said inscription, in so far as it was likely to be hidden from view, was taken on different slabs which were inserted in front of the three shrines in the places where we find them to-day.

¹ See above, p. 22.

Thus it would appear that the Trikūṭa-Basti shrines have been erected a little earlier than the present Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa, i.e., earlier than 1200 A.D., the date arrived at for the latter from a study of inscription No. 4.

Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa (pl. ii, 10).—The ardhamandapa in front of these shrines, which as already noted replaced, according to inscription No. 4, an earlier mandapa on the same site has three rows of four pillars each, eleven pillars resembling those of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa (pl. i-B, 3) and the twelfth which is near the entrance of this ardhamandapa showing different workmanship as indicated in fig. 6 of pl. i-B. It may be that the original pillar was replaced at some time later by the present one. The ground level of this ardhamandapa is higher by 9" than that of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa. Some of the pillars on its northern end touch the southern wall of the adjoining ardhamandapa and hide the inscriptions on it. The southern wall bears a granite window consisting of five square holes laid on a square, four holes for the corners and the fifth laid in the centre. The eastern wall which is a continuation of that of the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa, where the entrance is located, has two windows, one big with twisted-knot design and the other small, designed like a square with nine holes in it. At the top of the former are two medallions formed by intertwining creepers in which are seated two sages, one in each. Both are in meditation and face each other. They are seated in the virāsana pose, the one on the left with his left leg placed on his right, and the one on the right with his right leg placed on his left. The former has a book placed on a book-rack by his left side and a peacock's feather by his right. The latter has only the peacock's feather on his left side. They are believed to be the two sages, Mallishena and his disciple Pushpasena. But it is more probable they are Chandrakīrti and his disciple Anantavīrya Vāmana, two other earlier sages that flourished in the village, as the wall in which the window showing these two sages is located seems to have come into existence in the time of Kulottuṅga III (1200 A.D.). The former sages are, as we shall see presently, persons of the fourteenth century A.D.¹

The central space in the Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa is enclosed by four pillars, as is also the case in the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa, and is elevated a little by 4" (pl. ii, 5) probably for placing utsava-vigrahas as is the custom in Hindu temples, for the purpose of decorating them during temple festivals, before they are carried in procession. The temple priest however informed me that this elevation in both the ardhamandapas was for "kalaśa archana," i.e., for keeping vessels full of water and for bathing the images with it after sanctifying it by the chantings of mantras, etc.

Trikūṭa-Basti-mukhamandapa (pl. ii, 11).—A veranda similar to the Vardhamāna-mukhamandapa but measuring 20' 4" × 8' 10" and running continuously with it, but not so long, is attached to the above ardhamandapa. Its base, unlike the adjoining one, is plain and also a little higher. While the builders took care to see that at least the ceiling of the veranda was on a level with that of the Vardhamāna-mukhamandapa, they paid no such attention to the base which in workmanship is quite different from its neighbour. The steps were probably placed at the southern end of the extension where we find them to-day. These steps are flanked by a pair of elephants' trunks. On the eastern wall of the Trikūṭa-Basti-ardhamandapa can be seen three pilasters (pl. i-B, 4) of the type occurring in the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa wall, one on either side of the entrance and the third further to the north. The latter two support corbels of the Chola type (pl. i-B, 3) that project outwards. The purpose of one corbel on the left of the doorway is to support a cross-beam that marks the southern end of the veranda. But the purpose of the other on the right of the door-way is not clear, as it is supporting no beam, unless it has been inserted to match the corbel on the other side of the doorway. The base is of plain workmanship and the top of its northern end is laid over the Vardhamāna-veranda. This, coupled with the absence of any inscription on this veranda, suggests a later date for this veranda. Also the change in level and in design seems to show that it was later than Kulottuṅga III, though perhaps by a few years only, as its pillars are just like those of the adjoining veranda, of which it is only a continuation. The location of all the inscriptions elsewhere, even including those of Rājaraṇa III (1216-1246 A.D.) proves beyond any doubt that this veranda must have come into existence some time later than 1234 A.D. (the date of inscription No. 1) but before 1387-88 A.D., the date of the construction of the Saṅgita-mandapa, as some of the beams of the latter are laid over the former. The ceiling contains paintings illustrating the samavasaraṇa of Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkara¹.

¹ See below, pp. 44 and 46.

Saṅgita-mandapa (pl. ii, 12).—Part of the courtyard in front of the Vardhamāna and Trikūṭa-Basti-mukhamandapas is now occupied by a pillared hall or mandapa that has been built on to the verandas. Its ceiling is higher than theirs and bears the majority of the temple paintings described below (pp. 64-124, 133-157, 161-164). It rests on three rows of eight pillars each, while its western and south-eastern sides rest on plain granite slabs laid vertically upon Chola structures, the former on the Vardhamāna and Trikūṭa-Basti-mukhamandapas and the latter on a Chola veranda in front of a store room on the south-east. This mandapa is not only higher than the Chola verandas but also larger, measuring 61' 9" × 26' 4" in plan and extending the entire length of the Vardhamāna and Trikūṭa-Basti-mukhamandapas. The pillars are all in early Vijayanagara style (pl. ii-B, 7) and lack the elaborateness and intricacy of detail of ornamentation that characterise later Vijayanagara style, as for instance in the Kalyāṇa-mandapas of Vellore and the Varadarāja temple at Conjeevaram. Their bases are all cubical in section showing carvings such as lions, plants, creepers, twisting snakes, knots, dancing girls, dwarfish yakshas playing on musical instruments like the drum, flute and the conch, dvarapālakas or door-keepers, monkey with fruit in hand, etc. Above each corner of these bases a motif resembling a cobra's hood is designed, the area occupied by it being known as nāgabandha. This motif is however absent in two pillars, one of which, the sixth from the north in the innermost (western) row, shows dwarfish yakshas blowing the conch and the other, on the extreme north-east corner, squatting lions, in the place of the nāga-designs. Above these nāgabandhas the pillars are sixteen-fluted except in the case of the one on the extreme north-east corner which is twenty-four fluted (pl. ii-B, 9); they bear no carvings till they reach the capital except for a band or bands on some of them. Seven bear three bands, six two bands, five one band, and five others are without bands. The one twenty-four-fluted pillar however, has seven bands. The capitals are square in section. On two sides of each are carvings in a circular area in which the royal haṁsa and the conventional lotus often occur. The capitals of two pillars alone show different carvings. On one, the fourth from the north in the middle row, is a Tirthaṅkara seated facing the Vardhamāna shrine, thereby proving that the latter shrine is the most important part in the temple. On the other, the fifth from the north in the outermost row, a warrior is shown as engaged in a deadly struggle with a lion. The other two sides of each capital bear corbels in the form of lotus flowers from out of which issues a motif representing the seed-vessel, a very popular design with which most Indians are familiar, as this is found in almost all temples in South India that date from Vijayanagara times. In later times it developed into a plantain flower.

¹ See below, pp. 130-132.

The pillar on the southern corner in the middle row has been placed on the Chola veranda (pl. ii, 14) in front of the store-room and its corbel is not finished like the rest as it has to go over the lintel of the veranda. This pillar touches the Chola pillar at the corner of the veranda and shows creeper-designs on its inner side or the side facing the maṇḍapa. Yet another pillar, parallel to this, the eighth of the third row from the north, is placed on the same Chola veranda and shows so much of Chola work in it that it has to be likened to the other Chola pillars in the temple. Possibly one of the earlier pillars of the veranda was utilized for supporting the Vijayanagara maṇḍapa, without any of its Chola details being interfered with. This pillar supports the lintel of the veranda which in turn supports the beam of the maṇḍapa.

The pillar on the north-east corner (pl. i-B, 9) bears a portrait of the donor of the maṇḍapa, and has evidently been singled out for special treatment. As already mentioned it has squatting lions in place of nāgabandhas, being one of two pillars in which the latter conventional ornaments are replaced by something else. It is the only pillar that has seven bands above the base and twenty-four flutings. Of these flutings the central four facing the four cardinal points bear a well executed creeper-design. On the base, four human figures are carved, one on each side, standing over a moulding showing at each end a kūḍu or window-ornament surmounted by a lion's head as occurs also in the gopura of the temple. The side that faces north contains the carving of a woman standing in the tribhāṅga pose, naked above the waist and holding in her right hand a fly-whisk (chāmara), the tail of which can be seen on the right, while her left hand is hanging loosely (lamba-hasta) like the "tail of a cow." Kuṇḍalas adorn her ears; and her hair (which is sumptuous) is secured in a side-knot known as konḍai and is thrown a little to the right. The side facing east, shows a similar woman but holding in her right hand a lotus and placing her left on the hip in a pose known as "katyavalambita". The side facing south also shows a woman, but this figure is totally different from the other two being larger and more elaborately decorated and better executed.

She stands like the others. Her right hand hangs down loosely while her left is bent, as in the case of women carrying water-vessels on their waists, and holds between the elbow and the waist a vase with a blue water-lily inserted in it—the vase of plenty and auspiciousness in Jaina as well as in Hindu iconography. Her hair is also secured in the "koṇḍai" knot and is thrown to the right. She is naked above the waist. Among the ornaments with which she is bedecked mention may be made of patra-kundalas (rather big) in the ears, necklaces, armlets, wristlets and anklets, the last-mentioned resembling those worn to-day by the women of the Telugu country, especially in Godāvarī and Kistna districts. Curiously enough she has a yajñopavīta, the Brahmanical sacred thread. While she cannot be taken to represent any goddess known to the Jaina there is nothing preventing us from surmising that a portrait was intended. If so we can perhaps associate her with the household of Irugappa, whose portrait on the adjoining side we shall examine presently. The yajñopavīta perhaps indicates that the woman was of Brahmanic origin. (The present day Jainas have somehow adopted the yajñopavīta.)

The side facing west and consequently the shrine, shows in relief the figure of a man of about the same size as that of the woman just described. He is believed to be the builder of the Saṅgīta-maṇḍapa (pl. v, 1). This local tradition is corroborated by an inscription (No. 7, see below, p. 57) found on the ceiling of the Saṅgīta-maṇḍapa which records that Irugappa, a general and minister of Bukka Rāya II built the maṇḍapa in the year Parābhava (1387-88 A.D.) at the instance of his preceptor Pushpasena and also paved the flooring around with granite. It is said in this inscription that this maṇḍapa was intended for holding musical concerts, etc., in it, for which reason it has acquired the name "Saṅgīta-maṇḍapa" or the "music-hall."

The Irugappa referred to in this inscription can be definitely identified with the Iruga or Irugappa referred to in an inscription on a lamp-pillar in front of a Jaina temple dedicated to Kunthunātha, the seventeenth Tīrthaṅkara, at the city of Vijayanagara,³ for both the inscriptions tell us that he was the son of Chaicha or Chaichapa (the Vaichaya of our inscription), the hereditary minister and general of Harihara II. The Vijayanagara inscription further states that Iruga built that temple in Śaka 1307 (1385 A.D.), i.e., only two years before he constructed the "Saṅgīta-maṇḍapa" at Tiruparuttikunṇam.

Another inscription (No. 8, see below, pp. 57-58), partly in Grantha and partly in Tamil helps to show under which king of Vijayanagara Irugappa was a general and minister. In it he is said to have made the grant of the village of Mahendramaṅgalam in the division of Māvaṇḍūr to the temple in the year Dundubhi (1382 A.D.) for the merit of his suzerain, Bukka Rāja, the son of Arihara Rāja or Harihara. The Bukka Rāja that is referred to is Bukka II, the son and successor of Harihara II. It is known from other records that Bukka II ruled between 1377-1404 A.D.

³ S.I.I., Vol. I, pp. 136-8.

While local tradition clearly associates this figure with the person that built the maṇḍapa, viz., Irugappa, other factors point towards the correctness of such a tradition. A study of the maṇḍapas and the gopuras that arose in the time of the Vijayanagara kings brings into relief the custom then prevailing to show the figures of the builders or donors in some part of the constructions themselves, preferably on the bases of pillars. In some maṇḍapas these figures are shown in a prominent place and in others in places that will not catch the eye of the casual visitor. The reason for such a representation is not far to seek. It only reflects the mentality of the builders or the donors, reserve on the part of the unostentatious and a love to win the approbation of the world on the part of the vain. The figure of Irugappa stands in a prominent place and catches the eye of the visitor easily. The general deportment of the figure and its features mark it out as that of the person indicated in the tradition. To understand the features of the figure it is necessary to know the history of the person portrayed.

He was a staunch Jain and was serving Bukka II, in the capacity of a minister and a generalissimo, a vocation that was his legacy, his father Vaicha or Chaichapa having held similar office under Harihara II. It appears that he won for his lord several battles, the victory in which only made the transitoriness of life, wealth and pleasure too glaring to him. Highly impressive and a lover of art and letters that he was¹, the day came too soon for his renunciation which was impending. And at Tiruparuttikūṭṭam, Jina-Kāñchi as it was then known, the yearning soul discovered its mentor in the person of sage Pushpasena about whom we shall speak later (pp. 44-45). The sincerity of the sage and his asceticism won Irugappa over to him so much so that Irugappa vowed to serve the sage in any manner that he commanded. From then the general appears to have discarded the sword and devoted himself solely to service and deeds that were calculated to bring him virtue (puṇya) and secure for him liberation (moksha). Among the deeds mention may be made of building of temples² or parts of them, as for instance the maṇḍapa in the present case.

The figure shown here represents just such a person. Its spirit is one of extreme devotion, humility, asceticism, self-sacrifice and eagerness to be at the service of humanity, a precept for which Jainism is remarkable. The hair on the head is secured in a knot and the knot is thrown on the left side of the figure. In the manner of securing the hair it is suggested by the tips standing erect that locks of unbraided hair which characterise a sage or ascetic are intended. A beard and moustache are present. The hands are held in the añjali pose against the breast, a pose of devotion, humility, and worship. The under-garment which is tied in the kachcha fashion, as is done in South India to-day, extends only up to the knees being drawn up. There is nothing strange in this, for, to most South Indians the drawing up of the under garment indicates reverence or regard for the person in whose presence they stand. There is not a second garment here which is also significant, for a mode of showing respect to people that deserve it is to take the upper garment away, or tie it in the form of a sash over the under garment, leaving the breast bare. With this mode also most South Indians are familiar. Hence in the figure the upper garment is omitted, the under garment is drawn up and as if this was not enough to show the feelings of the person portrayed the hands are folded and drawn against the breast—a pose which stands in Indian iconography for humility and devotion. But the wrists are provided with bangles. This is in great contrast to the other limbs of the figure where ornaments and other decorations are conspicuous by their absence. What would be, therefore, the significance of the bangles? They only stand to indicate the status of the figure, which was that of an erstwhile man of the world in affluent conditions, who had become a disciple of sage Pushpasena by coming into contact with his superior spiritual force. This appears to be the only significance in such a rendering.

¹ He is said to be the author of a work on literary criticism called Nānārtharatnamālā.

² S.I.I., Vol. I, pp. 156-8.

The bangles also indicate that there can be no mistaking the person intended, for no mere sage or ordinary person can be shown with them. Thus it would appear that all safeguards were taken at the time of making the portrait to make the identity of the person clear. And tradition and the inscriptions in the temple give his name as Irugappa.

The Saigita-mandapa has the curved eaves (koḍuṅgai) which is found on all the other parts of the temple also. But on its north-east corner, a number of lotus petals, placed one above the other, is designed indicating that the whole is modelled on the lotus petal. All the pillars of the Saigita-mandapa bear traces of recent colouring.

At the northern end of this mandapa, just where its beams rest on the Vardhamāna-veranda is a pillar, plain with the usual sixteen flutings but supporting a Chola corbel which stands as a clear proof to-day of the shiftings and alterations made in the Vardhamāna-veranda, presumably at about the time of the construction of the Saigita-mandapa. The mandapa continues to the south of the Trikūṭa-basti-veranda till it reaches the cloister. The ceiling of this part of the mandapa is higher than elsewhere and rests on the Trikūṭa-basti, its veranda, the store-room and its veranda and the cloister on the south. Only one pillar is found which, though resembling the other pillars in the Vijayanagara style, supports a Chola corbel and has three bands and a base cut from a separate stone.

Round the temple there is the temple cloister interrupted at intervals by store-rooms, kitchen, etc. It is raised on the east with its base like that of the Trikūṭa-basti-veranda, with the usual Chola pillars (pl. i-B, 3) supporting lintels and curved eaves (koḍuṅgai).

Gopura (pl. ii, 27; pl. xxx, 1).—The gopura divides the cloister here into two as it is located in its centre. It (the gopura) is of moderate dimensions (pl. xxx, 1) and is built of granite except the top tiers which are of stucco and brick. The base is of the Chola type with six mouldings, five rectangular and one octagonal on which are found inscriptions (Nos. II and 19, see below, pp. 58 and 60). The sides of the gopura bear pilasters with corbels of the Chola type (pl. i-B, 4) but with chamfered sides as is also the case with the Munivāsa, another part of the temple which we shall describe presently. The lintels support curved eaves with four kūḍus or window-ornaments on each wide side. These kūḍus are of floral design surmounted by a lion's head as in the case of the pillar base containing the portrait of Irugappa. They are occupied each by a Tirthaṅkara seated in the paryāṅka-āsana, i.e., with legs crossed and hands placed on the lap, one over the other, the pose prescribed for meditation. Over the eaves is a line of lions' heads with mane, and at each end a projection shaped like a lion's mouth.

Over this rises a superstructure of brick which rises in three tiers. An inscription (No. 9, see below, p. 58) on the inner side of the lintel of the gopura speaks of the construction of this superstructure as due to the benevolence of the sage Pushpasena, the preceptor of Irugappa.

It is unusual to find an ascetic-sage venturing on construction work which requires finance behind. But if it be remembered that it was the same sage that ordered Irugappa, his disciple, to build the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, as the latter proclaims in inscription No. 7, it is only natural to suppose that the gopura also was financed by Irugappa and was probably built about the same time as the maṇḍapa or a little later. It may however be asked why Irugappa, if he were really responsible for this construction, should be silent about his association in this work when one would expect him to proclaim his share just as he had done in inscription No. 7. To most Indians who can realize the import of Gurukula and Guruśishya-bhāva or relationship between master and pupil the answer to this question is apparent. His reverence for his guru may have stood in the way of proclaiming himself as the author of the gopura—a course of action that could be expected of him, more so because he firmly believed as every ardent follower of the faith will do, that what all he did or achieved was at the bidding of his guru, the guide that was to lead him through and in whose hands his liberation (moksha) lay. His share in any work of merit would, in his opinion, pale before the superior spiritual force and merit of his mentor. Thus the devotee, a little vain at the outset, as proved by the personal touch in inscription No. 7, reveals himself here as a convert to humility, meekness, service and devotion and lays the humble work "that he was destined to perform as a result of the blessings (prasāda) of his spiritual guide" at the feet of his master, at the same time proclaiming to the world in unmistakable terms that it was the work of his guru, who therefore deserved the praise, while his own share was little, he merely functioning as a machine set at work by the spiritual force of the guru.

The Cloister (pl. ii, 14).—The cloister appears to have been interfered with and altered in the course of subsequent constructions in the temple. On the south-east corner it was altered to make room for the temple kitchen (maḍapalli) which shows four pillars of the Chola type placed in the middle enclosing a rectangular pit which serves to-day the purpose of a gutter, while above it the ceiling is open to allow smoke to escape (pl. ii, 26). When this alteration was effected we have been unable to ascertain. There is a veranda in front of the kitchen which is a continuation of the cloister.

The adjacent part is a store room for storing paddy, etc. (pl. ii, 15) built in the twentieth year (1236 A.D.) of the reign of Rājārāja III as proved by an inscription on its north wall (No. 2, see below, p. 50). It is not on a line with the wall of the kitchen but is drawn in by 22". The room thus enclosed has in its centre two Chola pillars, a half-cut Chola pillar on the west placed against the western wall of the room, and a Chola corbel, without its pillar, peeping out of the eastern wall of the room. The pillar of the last-mentioned corbel was probably removed from its original place when the kitchen was added as the erection of a wall between the kitchen and the store room has made it unnecessary. On the sides of the doorway may be discerned the nāgabandha with a string of lotus petals, also found on the Trikūṭa-basti and Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa doorways. This motif might therefore be taken to have come into existence in the later Chola period itself. A veranda is attached to this store room in front partially, leaving almost a third of its north wall to face the Saṅgita-mandapa, the beams of which rest both on this wall and on the veranda. The level of the store room being elevated, the level of the veranda has been likewise elevated. The exposed side of the north wall of the store room contains two inscriptions, one above recording the construction of the store room itself (No. 2, see below, p. 50) and the other on its plinth (No. 8, see below, p. 57) which records the gift of a village by Irugappa.

From the west wall of this store room the cloister runs due west. It has become very low, almost approaching the ground level but slightly raised by 3". The compound wall bounds it on the south. On the south-west corner of the temple, where the cloister takes a turn to the north (i.e., running from south to north), is a small shrine (pl. ii, 16) dedicated for Brahmadeva Yaksha (pl. v, 2), the Yaksha of Śīṭalanātha¹, on a level elevated as near the gopura. The shrine has been walled up by brick work and is clearly of recent origin. The Yaksha has his vāhana, the elephant, below his pedestal. The iconography of this image is so exactly like that of the Hindu Aiyanār or Śāstā² that one might easily take it to represent Aiyanār and not Brahmadeva if it were not for the fact that it is placed and worshipped in a Jaina temple. The cloister from east to west has eaves (koṭṭungai) of brick instead of granite. This presumably happened when the old one, which was probably of granite, fell and was renewed by the present brick one.

The cloister now continues from the south to the north and is elevated as near the gopura (pl. ii, 14), except for a distance of about 30' in the middle (pl. ii, 13), where it is on a level with the cloister between the store room and the Brahmadeva shrine. Facing this low space, in the western wall of the compound that bounds it, there was once an entrance, 6' x 3', now blocked, placed slightly, though not directly on a line with the Vardhamāna shrine, which opened into the huts and the fields behind the temple. While the Brahmadeva shrine bounds this part of the cloister at its southern corner, it has been converted into a room recently with brick to the right of the back entrance referred to above for keeping the temple sāmāns and vāhanas. The eaves (koṭṭūgū) of this part of the cloister is bigger and of granite while it is of brick work to the left of the back entrance. Surely the brick eaves is a later work that had come in the place of older ones built of granite that had probably to be renewed. The rest of the temple, viz., the Śānti-maṇḍapa, the Munivāsa, the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, and the cloister on the east bear four granite eaves.

¹ See below, pp. 202-3.

² Madras Museum Bulletin, New Series - General Section, Vol. I, part 2, pp. 14, 128-9.

Śānti-maṇḍapa, (pl. ii, 19).—The cloister now runs from west to east and has been converted into a big elevated maṇḍapa, 78' x 27' in area, now known as "Śānti-maṇḍapa." It is here that the mahābhisheka or the grand bathing ceremony of the gods of the temple is held. Its western end has been elevated by 3" above the rest of the maṇḍapa as the mahābhisheka ceremony was originally intended to be done there. The gods would be installed on the elevation while the priests attended to the baths with due ceremonies and the faithful witnessed them from the rest of the maṇḍapa which has been said is lower in level. In the centre of the elevation referred to is a small shrine (pl. ii, 18), built of brick about 37 years ago, in the time of the present trustee's father, in which a marble image of Rishabhadeva, the first Tīrthaṅkara, obtained from Jaipore is worshipped. The construction of this shrine was necessary in order to provide support for a small maṇḍapa, also of brick-work, called the "Janmābhisheka-maṇḍapa" built on the roof at about the same time. The latter was given then the name "Janmābhisheka-maṇḍapa" as the Tīrthaṅkaras in the temple, whose life-stories were enacted during the temple festivals (utsava) were carried to this part and anointed with waters, the idea being that these Tīrthaṅkaras were undergoing the anointing ceremony that they underwent as soon as they were born¹. As they were carried by the devas to Mount Meru for the above-said ceremony, a higher place was required and consequently we get the present maṇḍapa on the roof. And the priests who perform the ceremony officiate for the devas. Access to this maṇḍapa is by a flight of steps facing south, situated between the Śānti-maṇḍapa and the building adjacent to it on the east which is called "Munivāsa" or "the abode of sages."

As the ceiling of the Śānti-maṇḍapa was shaky, especially at its northern end (to the north of the present Rishabhadeva shrine) some support has been given recently by inserting two Chola corbels (pl. i-B, 3) and a Chola pillar with its corbel from some other part of the temple into the compound wall and placing over them three cross-beams, the other ends of which rest on Chola pillars (pl. i-B, 3), now hidden by the Rishabhadeva shrine. These pillars are visible from within the Rishabhadeva shrine. A similar thing has been done on the southern side of the shrine and three cross-beams are laid between the Chola pillars enclosed by the shrine and those forming the first row in the Śānti-maṇḍapa. The shrine encloses therefore two rows of three pillars. Including these the Śānti-maṇḍapa should have had at the time it was erected three rows of ten pillars each, resembling those of the temple veranda (see pl. i-B, 3). The first row contains all the ten, one of which, on the western corner, is partially hidden by the brick wall of the room in which the temple vāhanas are housed. The middle row has three of its pillars enclosed in the Rishabhadeva shrine; six of its pillars (4-9) can be seen, while the tenth on the extreme east shows only its corbel. This originally stood in a line with the tenth pillar of the first row, and was probably removed when the Munivāsa was built, as the latter's western wall made this pillar unnecessary. The third row is just like the middle row, with its tenth pillar showing its corbel from within the western wall of the Munivāsa. The tenth pillar of the first row is drawn nearer to the ninth of the same row as it stands at the corner of the Śānti-maṇḍapa.

¹ See below, pp. 65, 83-5, 119-123, 150-1.

From an inscription found on the west wall of this maṇḍapa which is also the compound wall (No. I, see below, pp. 49, 50), we have to infer that this maṇḍapa came into existence probably in the reign of Rājaraṇa III, for it is dated in the eighteenth year of the said king (1234 A.D.). The position of this inscription on this wall is interesting. It is found on the second layer of stone from the bottom (i.e., the ground level of the Śānti-maṇḍapa). While there are four more granite layers above it, not to speak of lintels and beams above, this is curiously incised so low, far below the eye-level. This suggests that the original maṇḍi or compound wall was a low one and was probably raised to its present height and shape during the time of Aḷagiya Pallavan (see below, pp. 39, 47-8). The latter's inscription speaking of the construction of the maṇḍi (No. 12, see below, p. 58), is found on the outer side of the maṇḍi and is placed sufficiently high so that it lends support to the above suggestion. Either the maṇḍi was renewed or some more layers of stone were added on to it by Aḷagiya Pallavan.

Munivāsa (pl. ii, 21 and 22).—The Munivāsa or "the abode of the sages," so named because it has five cells in a row opening towards the south, in which the souls of five sages that flourished in Tiruparuttikūṭṭam are believed to live engaged in doing penance even to-day, is a long corridor adjacent to the Śānti-maṇḍapa, 54' x 21' in area. There is nothing in the construction of this part of the temple to suggest any great antiquity. Two of the cells are intended for Mallishena and Pushpasena, sages that lived in the fourteenth century A.D.¹ For these sages to get deified and worshipped in the Munivāsa along with the other three sages some years should be allowed after their demise. Thus arguing it seems likely that the Munivāsa may have been built sometime in the fifteenth century A.D.

Though, according to local tradition, these five cells (pl. ii, 21) were intended for five sages, the central room contains stone images of Vardhamāna (pl. iii, 2) and Pārśva-nātha, the former facing west and the latter south, while the other four are empty. The placing of these two images in a place where they are inappropriate came about as follows:—In 1906, i.e., the Tamil year Parābhava, the Kṛnibhābhisheka ceremony of the temple was performed on a grand scale by the present trustee's father. The image of Vardhamāna which was till then worshipped in the main Vardhamāna shrine, and consequently an old one, was removed from there as a crack on it made it unfit for further worship and was taken to the central cell of the Munivāsa, where it is at present found (pl. iii, 2). The history of the Parśvanātha image is different and more interesting. According to the temple priest it was found in the temple well some 150 years ago where it was probably thrown for safety by the then temple authorities during the raids of the Muhammadan iconoclasts. This account receives confirmation from another detail present in one of the cells. The last cell on the right contains an underground cell which can be disclosed by removing the slabs above, which is locally called "kalāpa-kōṭṭaḍi." This was intended for keeping the temple images in safety so that the raiders could not see them. It was also believed that this underground cell had also an underground passage leading to the next garden where the Pallava temple (i.e., the Chandraprabha temple) is located. I examined the cell with a view to test this part of the account. There is surely the underground cell, hollow and gloomy, but I could not find any traces of the underground passage referred to. The Parśvanātha image was probably thrown into the well either because there was no room for it in the underground cell or because there was not sufficient time for the people to remove the slabs above and deposit the image in the underground cell as most probably the raider was almost at their door. Under such circumstances the well alone could be thought of, as its waters could hide the image from the evil look of the iconoclast for the time being. And when the raider had left the place it was probably intended to be removed from its temporary place of safety to the underground cell. Failure to do so immediately had resulted in the image being left in the well till chance disclosed it 150 years ago.

¹ See below, pp. 43-46.

The western wall of the Munivāsa faces the Śānti-maṇḍapa and is less in width than the latter by 6'. That it was put against the maḍi, and hence is subsequent to the latter, is made evident by a gap between it and the latter. Two of the Śānti-maṇḍapa pillar corbels have got into this wall, which projects into the Śānti-maṇḍapa for half of its length starting from the maḍi, and is drawn in for the remaining half of its length starting from the centre of the Śānti-maṇḍapa. The projecting portion of the wall corresponds to the region of the cells, while the drawn portion corresponds to a small corridor of about the same length as the cells, in front of the cells. The ends of the projecting and the drawn portions of the wall bear plain rectangular pilasters with small Chola corbels such as we find on the Vardhamāna-veranda (pl. i-B, 4). A similar wall flanks the Munivāsa on the east.

The corridor in front of the cells is narrow and dark though there are two stone windows on its southern wall, one facing the first cell on the left and the other facing the fifth cell on the right. The window on the left is now hidden by steps leading to the terrace built recently against this part from the processional path outside. The other faces a small garden (pl. ii, 25) situated between the wall of the corridor and the temple well. These windows are rectangular with nine square holes¹. In the centre of the wall of the corridor the doorway of the Munivāsa is located, which shows like the Vardhamāna-

¹ Cf. Trikūṭa-basti-vardhamanapa window. See above, p. 26.

ardhamandapa, Trikūṭa-basti-ardhamandapa and store room doorways the nāgabandhas with a string of lotus petals running along the course of the sides and joining them. On this wall, in places not hidden by the staircase and on the walls of a mandapa in front of the Munivāsa (pl. ii, 22) there are plain pilasters supporting Chola corbels (pl. i-B, 3) as on the eastern and western walls of the Munivāsa.

The mandapa just mentioned, which we may call the "Munivāsa-mandapa" (pl. ii, 22), is 34' x 20' in area, and is built in front of the Munivāsa corridor. It is elevated and is higher than the cells and the corridor by 3". It is covered on its sides recently by brick walls, and has two rows of pillars, an inner row with six pillars and an outer row with four.

Two pillars, one at each end of the inner row, are enclosed by brick walls, only their corbels which are like those in the Vardhamāna veranda (pl. i-B, 3), showing out. The other pillars in this row bear similar corbels but are different in design and details of workmanship as will be clear from fig. 8 of pl. i-B. They are all placed on the elevation of the Munivāsa-mandapa. The corbels of these are carved like those of the Chola pillars in the temple but are chamfered vertically into rectangular and cylindrical bands alternately reminding one of wooden chippings. The square area in the centre of the corbel bears the design of the conventional lotus either in a square or a circular background. These pillars are cylindrical with about five mouldings on their slightly enlarged cylindrical bases, a rather unusual feature. The front row has four pillars standing on the ground and not on the elevation of the rest of the Munivāsa-mandapa. The corner ones are partially hidden by the brick walls flanking the mandapa. They are eight-fluted, above plain square bases and support corbels of Chola form, but presumably of later date (pl. i-B, 5). The central two pillars bear in the square portion of their capitals the same conventional lotus design. The pillars of the front row support the lintels which are surmounted by granite eaves (kaṇṇigai), a continuation of the same of the Śānti-mandapa. The front of the base of the mandapa is plain with two rectangular mouldings, one at its top and the other at its bottom. Access to this mandapa is by a flight of steps placed between the second and the third pillars of the first row.

Thus we find that the pillars here are a curious mixture of the Chola style and a later style of which plainness and freedom from intricate carving are characteristic features. This coupled with the fact that there is nothing in this part of the temple calling for special attention, either architectural or sculptural, makes this part less interesting, had it not been for the much religious history regarding the sages that the walls of the five cells are supposed to breathe¹.

The north-east corner of the temple (pl. ii, 15) is a continuation of the cloister but is now closed for storing temple property. A modern window with iron bars is conspicuous in the brick wall. From here the cloister runs from north to south (pl. ii, 14) till it reaches the gopura. Between this and the eastern flanking wall of the Munivāsa-mandapa is a small garden (pl. ii, 25) in which a nāga-stone is placed under a tree. An interesting feature of this nāga-stone is that it resembles the Hindu nāga-stone one finds often installed under the sacred pipal tree by those desiring progeny, the ceremony being known as "nāga-pratishṭhā," with, however, this difference, that in the circular band formed by two intertwining snakes the figure of a Tīrthāṅkara seated in the "paryāṅka-āsana," i.e., with legs crossed and hands placed one over the other in meditation, is shown. This proves that nāga-worship was practised among the Jainas as well as among the Hindus and the Buddhists.

¹ See under religious history of Tiruparuttikunṇam, below pp. 42-47.

The Temple Well (pl. ii, 24) which is situated in front of this garden and from which the Pārśvanātha image in the Munivāsa was taken, appears to have been dug by a merchant called Śeṅgadīrchelvan as recorded in an inscription found on a small slab (No. 14, see below, p. 59) inserted between the Vardhamāna and Pushpadanta shrines. This merchant styles himself a Pallava. The titles that he assumes and his designation as indicated by the term Mūvendaṭṭēḷāṇ tempt one to assign him to the thirteenth century, as the surname Mūvendaṭṭēḷāṇ was assumed by royal officers under the Cholas. This assumption receives support from a study of the palaeographical features of the inscription which point to the same period.

Processional Path (pl. ii, 20).—All round the shrines there is the processional path roughly in the form of a square, broader on its northern, western and eastern sides than on its southern side, where it is narrowed down between the cloister and the wall of the Trikūṭa-Bastī. Between the cloister on the west (pl. ii, 13) and the backs of the Trikūṭa-Bastī shrines and the Vardhamāna and Pushpadanta shrines the processional path is wider than on the south side of the temple. In its centre is an old tree known as the "kōra" (pl. ii, 17) around which a granite altar has been constructed. The sides of the altar have been worked like the base of the cloister. Below the top moulding, on the northern side, is a crude sculpture in low-relief showing a sage seated in virāsana, i.e., the right leg placed over the left, with his left hand resting on the lap in meditation and right hand indicating exposition (upadeśa) or knowledge (jñāna). The quill of a peacock's feather (mayūra-pīṭhchha) rests on his left thigh, the feather lying on the ground. To the north-east of this altar, removed by 6' from it, is a granite balipīṭha in the shape of a full-blown lotus showing the seed-vessel, rising over a square base (pl. ii, 17). On its western side a crude figure representing a sage in meditation, seated cross-legged has been carved in a manner suggesting that the sage was intended to be facing the sage on the altar of the tree. An inscription on this balipīṭha (No. 18, see below, p. 60), which serves as the label of the figure sculptured, gives the name of the sage as Anantavīrya Vamana. Another similar balipīṭha with a similar sage sculptured on its western side and facing the tree, is placed to the east of the tree within a distance of 5' (pl. ii, 17). Though no label is found on this, presumably the sage on this balipīṭha was also a disciple, like Anantavīrya, of the one on the tree altar. The plinth of this altar contains two inscriptions (Nos. 16 and 17, see below, pp. 59 and 60), one on its northern and the other on its southern sides, the former containing a verse in Tamil in praise of the tree. It is said in this verse that three sages spent their lifetime under this tree which statement probably means that they did penance under the tree¹. The other inscription (No. 17, see below, p. 60) speaks of the construction of the altar by a king who is referred to as a Tamil Pallava². This sacred tree belongs to the species Ixora parviflora, a "species whose branches burn very readily and which travellers at night use as torches." It is worshipped by the Jains of the locality. The reason why these sages resort to trees for penance and the like is that in Jaina mythology several trees are spoken of as kalpaka-vrikshas and dikshā-vrikshas under which each Tirthāṅkara spent his karma and attained to the state of a kevalī or one endowed with omniscience³.

Facing this part of the processional path are two stone images, one of Pārśvanātha with the serpent-hoods raised over his head, placed in a niche behind the Vāsupūjya shrine and the other of another Tirthāṅkara, seated, whose identity is not clear. These two probably belong to the complete set of statues of the Tirthāṅkaras in the temple that Burnell alludes to in the *Indian Antiquary*⁴. The rest of the set is no longer traceable.

The temple court in front of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa (i.e., the processional path on its eastern side) contains a big balipīṭha of granite (pl. ii, 17) similar to the other balipīṭhas in the temple, and a flagstaff (dhvaja-stambha) of copper placed on a brick pedestal (pl. ii, 23), both standing in a line with the entrance of the Vardhamāna shrine and the gopura.

The Compound Wall (Prākāra).—The various structures in this temple described till now are all surrounded by a prākāra or compound wall, or maḍi as it is called in Tamil, 12' high, issuing from the sides of the gopura. Its measurements are as follows:—eastern side 145½', northern side 153½', western side 142', and southern side 144'. The western side (the one behind the shrines) has a small opening in it, as in most of the South Indian temples, now closed, which as already noticed is almost, if not directly, on a line with the Vardhamāna shrine and the gopura. The northern part of this prākāra separates the garden in which the Chandraprabha temple is situated from the Vardhamāna temple. An inscription in Tamil, found on the eastern prākāra, to the right of the gopura and facing the street outside, speaks of the construction of the maḍi, i.e., the compound wall, by Aḷagiya Pallava (see below, No. 12). The name Aḷagiya Pallava seems to be one of the titles of Kopperuñjiṅga, a feudatory of the Chola Rājaraṇa III⁵ and as he is referred to as a king in this inscription his connection with the temple would appear to date subsequent to 1243 A.D., the year that he was crowned king at Śendamaṅgalam⁶.

Tiruparuttikunṇam seems to have been the seat of a succession of Jaina ascetics who figure in some of the temple inscriptions (Nos. 7, 15-18, 22-24, see below, pp. 57, 59-62) and on small stone balipīṭhas placed over the saṁādhis of these ascetics situated in the fields in a locality known as Arunagiri-mēḍu. This place is removed from the temple by about 200

¹ For details regarding these sages see below, pp. 45-47.

² For details regarding this Pallava king, see under prākāra and below, pp. 47-48.

³ For details see below, pp. 65, 78-79, 96, 104, 118, 123, 124.

⁴ A.R.S.I.E., No. 487 of 1921; for details, see pp. 47-48.

⁵ Vol. II, p. 353, ff.

⁶ A.R.S.I.E., 1924, p. 82; 1925, p. 87.

yards on the south-west and is close to a tank. There I found an altar built of bricks in the midst of dense masses of prickly-pear. And on this altar are placed five granite pedestals in the form of a square (pl. vi, 4). Four of them, shaped like inverted lotuses and lotus flowers with petals fully drawn down so as to reveal the seed-vessel, occupy the corners of the square, while the fifth, which is bigger than the others, and is in the form of a rectangular bhadrāsana, occupies the centre. The arrangement and the size of this fifth one would appear to indicate that the ascetic over whose remains it was put up was considered by the Jainas of the locality as more important than the other four sages. Fortunately three, out of these five pedestals, including the one in the centre, bear inscriptions written in the Grantha script, the language being Sanskrit. That on the central one is a verse in praise of the sage Pushpasena, whose blessings to humanity are invoked (No. 24, p. 62). The pedestal on the north-west of the central one has another inscription which records that it was intended for the sage called Anantavīrya Vāmana, who was a pupil (śishya) of another sage called Chandrakīrti (No. 22, p. 61). A third pedestal to the south-east of the central one contains the words "the sage Pushpasena Vāmana" (No. 23, pp. 61-62). The other two have no letters on them, and if they ever had any, they must all have got obliterated. This is not unlikely, placed as they are in the open fields where they were uncared for and have consequently become much weathered. These five pedestals and the five rooms in the Munivāsa where the souls of these sages are said to rest, clearly prove that there was a succession of Jaina ascetics (yatis) at Tiruparuttikunṇam whose detailed history will be found below.

Sages and the Religious History of Tiruparuttikunṇam.—The religious history of Tiruparuttikunṇam is as interesting as its secular one, and is equally rich for the reason that a place like Jina-Kāñchīpuram, one of the Vidyāsthānas sacred to the Jainas (see above, p. 1) cannot be otherwise. A study of the local traditions, and of the inscriptions in the temple and on the samādhi pedestals reveals a regular heirarchy of sages who figure in some of these inscriptions as master (guru) and disciple (śishya). Their main work appears to have been propagation of the Digambara Jaina religion. With erudite scholarship some of these sages combined rare tact and accommodation to other faiths like Hinduism, which stood them in good stead, for they not only secured for their religion the patronage of the king of the land, but also protected them from Hindu fury. By slow degrees these sages began to acquire, apart from the religious hold that they already had, much political influence in the country.

Jaina contribution to the literature of South India is rich, most of its contributors being religious enthusiasts.¹ The most scholarly among these enthusiasts grouped themselves into various saṅghas or monastic orders or communities for an effective propagation of the faith. Each saṅgha was divided into many gaṇas and each gaṇa into many gacchhas. There are four saṅghas which characterise the Digambara church, viz., (1) Nandī, (2) Senā, (3) Devā, and (4) Simha saṅghas. From inscriptions¹ we learn that a saṅgha called the Dramiḷa saṅgha, probably the one that established itself at Madura, was the most important of all these saṅghas, and that one of its ganas,² the Nandigana was famous in the history of South Indian Jainism.

¹ From Maṇimekalai and Śilappadikāram, two Tamil epics of the Śaṅgam age we learn that the Jainas were roughly divided into two sections, the munis or ascetics such as those at Jina-Kāñchī, and the Śrāvakas or hearers, i.e., laymen.

It is not strange that we find at Tiruparuttikunṇam a regular hierarchy of gurus and *śiṣyas*³ for we learn from the Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa inscriptions, Nos. 47, 54, 105, 108 and 145, that the system of this hierarchy commenced from the time of Chandragupta Maurya (300 B.C.). It need hardly be said here that Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa where the colossal statue of Bahubali (pl. xxxvi, fig. 1), the son of the first Tīrthaṅkara stands, was likely to abound in information concerning the succession of apostles and other gurus and teachers. According to the Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa inscriptions the first guru or Yatindra was Kundakunda Āchārya⁴, then came Umāsvāmi, the compiler of the Tatvārthha-Sūtra, Griddhrapīṇchchha and his disciple Balākapiṇchchha. After him came the famous Samantabhadra (No. 105) whose name has gone down in the history of Digambara Jainism in gold letters.⁵ According to tradition his date is 138 A.D.

All the writers on South Indian Jainism and Sanskrit literature are agreed in acclaiming with one voice that Samantabhadra's appearance in South India marks an epoch not only in the annals of Digambara Jainism but also in the history of Sanskrit literature. After Samantabhadra came several munis or ascetics who continued the work of propaganda and organised the Jaina community into convenient classes and enriched the literature of the land. Chief among them were Simhanandī, who, according to tradition founded the state of Gaṅgavāḍī⁶, Pūjvapāda, the author of Jinendra Vyākaraṇa, and Akalaṅka more closely connected with Kāñchi than the others, for it is said of him that in about 788 A.D.⁷ he confuted in discussion the Buddhists at the Court of King Sāhasatunga Hima śtala at Kāñchi, and besides converting the king to Jainism secured with his aid the expulsion of the Buddhists from Kāñchi and from South India to Ceylon.

¹ Ep. Car., Vol. II, No. 35.

² Generally speaking these saṅghas were broadly divided into the Pannata, Balaṭhara, and Kotiya ganas. These ganas were subdivided into Gachchhas such as Purāṇa, Saravati, etc. The Śvetāmbaras have something like 84 gachchhas or subdivisions, most of which are to-day mere names. For details see Bühler "Indian sects of the Jainas."

³ For a list of the gates, see Appendix III, pp. 215-218.

⁴ See Jaina Gazette, 1922, Vol. XVIII, Nos. 1 and 2, "Śrī Kundakundiāchārya" by Prof. Chakravarti, for Jaina Pattāvali.

⁵ The Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa inscription, No. 44, contains an autobiographical account of the activities of this celebrated propagandist, from which a few sentences are worth quoting here to appreciate the value of his work:—

"At first, in the town of Pīṭaliputra was the drum beaten by me. Afterwards in the Mālava, Sindhū, and Thaka country, in the far-off city of Kāñchi, arrived at Kāñchaka (the modern Kolhāpur). . . I roam about, Oh! King; like a tiger in sport." The above makes it clear that Samantabhadra was a great Jaina missionary whose activities extended to Kāñchi. From his exaltation that he was roaming about in all these countries without meeting any opposition it can be deduced that he was successful in spreading Jainism in South India very vigorously.

⁶ Studies in South Indian Jainism, p. 109.

⁷ Ibid., p. 31; Wilson, Introduction to Mackenzie's Manuscripts, p. 20.

To the people at Tiruparuttikunṇam the tradition regarding Akalaṅka alone is fresh in their minds while the earlier munis and the later ascetics are almost forgotten. It is easy to understand this for the tradition regarding Akalaṅka is kept alive at a neighbouring Jaina village called Tiruppanamūr, about twelve miles from Kāñchī, where a big stone mortar in the local temple is explained by the temple priests as the one employed by Akalaṅka to pound the vanquished aliens, and a sculpture on the compound wall of the temple in front of the said mortar showing a Jaina ascetic in the attitude of preaching, as illustrating the propaganda work of the sage who told the people around that Jainism was superior to all other religions, that much virtue would accrue as a result of being a Jaina and that if any one should insist on continuing to be an alien in spite of his preachings the mortar will grind him in no time.

Nothing but their names¹ is known of the sages subsequent to Akalaṅka who flourished in or about Tiruparuttikunṇam, till we come to 1199 A.D. The temple inscriptions and those at Aruṇagiri-mēḍu fortunately throw light on some more sages. Thus for instance inscriptions Nos. 3 (p. 50) and 22 (p. 61) speak of a guru called Chandrakīrti who flourished at Tiruparuttikunṇam and whose remains have been interred at Aruṇagiri-mēḍu and a samādhi erected over them there. In the former inscription dated 1199 A.D. the gift of twenty velis of land in the village of Aṁbi to the temple is received from Kulottuṅga III, to whom the recipients made clear that the temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam deserved his patronage because there lived in it their guru, Chandrakīrti. The king not only gave twenty velis of land to the temple but also gave Chandrakīrti the title "the āchārya of Kottaiyūr" in token of his appreciation of the latter's learning and work. In the latter inscription (No. 22, p. 61), which is found at Aruṇagiri-mēḍu, the same Chandrakīrti is referred to as the spiritual guru of another sage who flourished at Tiruparuttikunṇam, the latter being known as Anantavīrya Vāmana. In the present state of our knowledge of the Jaina hierarchy we are not able to identify the Chandrakīrti referred to, and the local Jainas are unable to help on this point, and other lists found at Sravana Belgola (published) are not helpful. There is, of course, a Chandrakīrti in the list of Jaina āchāryas available from the *Āndhra-Karṇāṭa-deśa*² and he is placed there between two other āchāryas, Kanakakīrti Deva, who figures in one of the nīśidhi inscriptions from Dānavulapaḍu now exhibited in the Madras Museum, and Bhaṭṭāraka Jinachandra. It will be too much to see any connexion between our Chandrakīrti (1199 A.D.), and the one mentioned above, as the latter should be placed in the tenth century, the date of the nīśidhi speaking of Chandrakīrti's predecessor Kanakakīrti Deva being assigned on sure grounds to 910-917 A.D. Thus our Chandrakīrti is a different person who lived and died at Tiruparuttikunṇam itself.

Inscriptions No. 18 (p. 60) and No. 22 (p. 61) relate to Anantavīrya Vāmana, another sage who was a disciple of Chandrakīrti. The former is found on a balipīṭha to the north-east of the kōra tree inside the temple, and the latter on a samādhi slab at

¹ See Appendix III, p. 216.

² South Indian Jainism, part II, pp. 61-62.

Arunagiri-mēdu. While the former merely says that the said balipīṭha belongs to Anantavīrya Vāmana thereby meaning that worship was intended for him in the manner known to the temple archakas, viz., placing ablutions (balī) on the pedestal (the belief being that the spirit of the said sage will feed on it), the latter clearly records that the slab was erected in memory of the said sage who had the unique honour of counting Chandrakīrti as his spiritual guru. Nothing more is known about this sage from the temple records or from local tradition. One of the cells in the Munivāsa is assigned to him, another being assigned to his guru, Chandrakīrti.

We are entirely in the dark about the identity of Anantavīrya Vāmana. But we know that he comes after Chandrakīrti who figures in Kulottuṅga III's inscription dated 1199 A.D., and consequently should be placed a few years later than Chandrakīrti, say, the middle of the thirteenth century. A study of the list of Jaina āchāryas, as available from the Āndhra-Karṇāṭa-deśa, reveals an Anantavīrya Deva who is placed between Bhavanandi and Amarakīrti Āchārya. Though this Anantavīrya Deva might possibly be our Anantavīrya Vāmana, for there is nothing in their dates to disprove the identity, the absence of any mention in the Āndhra-Karṇāṭa list of his association with Tiruparuttikūṅṁam precludes the possibility of such an identification.

The next sage in the temple of whom we have clear information both from the temple records and from Jaina literature is Mallishēṇa Vāmana. Inscriptions Nos. 9, 15 and 24 (pp. 58, 59 and 62) speak of him. In No. 9 (p. 58) he is referred to as Mallishēṇa Vāmanasūri, the preceptor of Pushpasena-muni puṅṅava-Vāmana. In No. 24 (p. 62), which represents the samādhi of Pushpasena, he is again called the preceptor of Pushpasena and is referred to by the name Mallishēṇa. In No. 15 (p. 59) which is a verse exclusively in praise of him, he is called Mallishēṇa, his spiritual name being Vāmana. Here it should be remembered that great teachers and writers on works of religion, philosophy, etc., are termed Vāmanas, the term Vāmana going with scholarship. And Mallishēṇa, as the local tradition proves, was more known by the term Vāmana than even by his name Mallishēṇa. He was a man of letters, held in high repute in his times, and was the author of several works written in Sanskrit, Prakrit and Tamil. From one of his works in Tamil, entitled "Merumandara Purāṇam,"¹ from which I frequently draw for my understanding of some of the paintings in the temple, we learn that he knew Sanskrit and Prakrit too among languages, and Jaina and other systems in thought. The fact that he commences the Merumandara Purāṇa as "Tamiḷaḷ oṇṇu śollalureṇ," i.e., "I narrate here one in Tamil" (verse No. 2) shows that the preceding works of his should have been written in a language other than Tamil, say Sanskrit. His Sanskrit learning won for him the title of "Ubhaya-bhāṣā-kavichakravartī"² or "the poet-monarch of two languages." Some of his works known are commentaries to Sanskrit works on philosophy such as Pañchastikāya, Pravachanasāra, Samayasāra, and Syādvādamāñjarī.

¹ Edited in 1923 by Professor Chakravartī of the Presidency College, Madras.

² Merumandara Purāṇam, edited by Professor Chakravartī, Madras, 1923, preface.

Merumandara Purāṇa and Samayadivākara, which is a commentary to a Tamil work called Nīlakēṣi-tirattu.¹ While his disciple Pushpasena, about whom we shall presently speak, appears to have acquired political importance, being associated with Irugappa, he seems to have acquired importance in the literary field. The high regard that Pushpasena had for him is manifest in all Pushpasena's inscriptions here. In No. 9 (p. 58) he calls himself Mallishēṇa's devoted pupil and in No. 24 (p. 62) he calls himself, rather poetically, "the bee that hovers over the lotus-feet of Śrī Mallishēṇa." Tradition associates him with the construction of the whole temple. Though this cannot be correct it still illustrates the extreme regard and importance that the Jainas of the place had for this sage. Besides assigning him a cell in the Munivāsa, the people have built a balipīṭha for him. This they have placed in the niche on the north wall of the Chola veranda under the inscription containing a verse in praise of him (No. 15, p. 59) in order to connect the said inscription with the sage himself. Worship is offered to this balipīṭha even to-day as also to a similar one placed on a brick pedestal below it which is intended for Pushpasena, his disciple. One of the pedestals in the samādhi at Aruṇagiri-mēḍu, which is curiously enough not inscribed, is, I was told, intended for him.

As regards the date of this sage there is a silent but sure indication. Irugappa, whose inscriptions are dated 1382 and 1387-88 A.D., speaks of his devotion to Pushpasena, whose disciple he styles himself to be, but is silent about his attitude towards Mallishēṇa, the Guru of his guru. His silence can mean only one thing, and that is, that at the time of the advent of Irugappa to the temple Mallishēṇa was dead. Thus he comes after Anantavīrya Vāmana and before the advent of Irugappa, and may therefore be assigned to the earlier half of the fourteenth century.

Now we come to the illustrious Pushpasena who appears to have wielded considerable political influence in his time. The Vijayanagara kings patronised him as a result of the hold that he had over Irugappa, the general and minister of Bukka II and the sage was not slow in taking advantage of royal patronage. He prevailed on his royal disciple Irugappa to do the constructions in the temple and elsewhere (Vijayanagara city) referred to in inscriptions Nos. 7 and 9 (pp. 57-58). In the latter inscription the sage himself is cited as the author of the superstructure of the gopura for reasons explained on page 32. Inscriptions Nos. 7, 9, 23 and 24 relate to Pushpasena. Nos. 23 and 24 are found on the samādhi altar, the former giving his name and the latter invoking his blessings for the salvation of the suffering humanity. It is strange that two pedestals containing inscriptions of Pushpasena should be found in the samādhi altar while there is no pedestal there of Chandrakīrti, the first sage in our list. If we remember that there are two other balipīṭhas or pedestals within the temple itself, both uninscribed, one in front of the kīra tree and the other below the balipīṭha intended for Mallishēṇa, and that they are similar to the ones in the samādhi it is obvious that some of these uninscribed and similar pedestals should have been changed or misplaced at some time or other. Much prominence is attached to Pushpasena in the local tradition probably because of his political influence. A cell is assigned to him in the Munivāsa and worship is done to him much in the same way as is done to Mallisheṇa. As regards his accomplishments, both spiritual and literary, inscriptions Nos. 9 and 24 (pp. 58, 62) are helpful. In the former he is called Vāmana, "a bull among sages" (muniṇṇigava) and is given the title "paravādimalla" which means "a successful opponent of his enemies in discussion". In the latter his devotion to Mallisheṇa is stressed and his blessings are invoked for the benefit of the suffering, surging humanity. The fact that the śamādhi pedestal of Pushpasena is bigger than the others and that it is placed in the centre of the others and contains a bigger inscription bears testimony to the greater importance of the sage, in whose memory the pedestal arose. This pedestal appears to be the last in the collection of pedestals in the śamādhi, and this fact gives room to the surmise that probably subsequent to Pushpasena there were not similar sages in the place or, if there were any, did not acquire importance in the manner that their predecessors like Mallisheṇa and Pushpasena acquired. Otherwise their śamādhis should also be expected.

¹ For details see Merumandara Purāṇa, preface.

The Munivāsa which contains five cells has still one cell to be accounted for, the other four cells being intended for the spirits of Chandrakīrti, Anantavīrya Vāmana, Mallisheṇa Vāmana and Pushpasena Vāmana. The name of the fifth is not preserved for us to-day either in the temple inscriptions or in the local traditions. He may most probably be one who had preceded Chandrakīrti, whose name has not come down to us.

The sacredness of the temple was partly due to these sages and partly to the presence in its compound of the tree called "kōra" which has been described on pp. 38-39. A stone altar surrounds the tree and two balipīṭhas are built near it, one of which, as has been already noted, contains inscription No. 18 (p. 60). Two inscriptions Nos. 16 (p. 59) and 17 (p. 60) are found on the altar of the tree, the former on its southern side and the latter on its northern side. The former is a Tamil verse in praise of the sacredness of the tree, which is said to have given its shelter to three sages that lived under it, i.e., in the temple. It is also said to have revealed to the king of the land the methods by which to effect a beneficial rule. This is only a figurative expression, for a tree cannot be supposed to do all this, the idea indicated being that the sages who lived under its shade were responsible for the work. This raises the question "who were the three sages referred to here?"

Both the inscriptions (Nos. 16 and 17) speak of these three sages as if they spent all their time under it. It is common knowledge that these Jaina ascetics had to undergo the "dikṣhā" or initiation ceremony under trees (see below, pp. 65 and 96) and had to spend most of their time under these trees in meditation so that their karmas or attachments to the world, etc., might diminish. Thus verse No. 16 is no vain boast and if the tree here is said to have proclaimed to the world the good rule of the land by the king it only means that the king of the land met the sages under its shade and was guided in the administration of the kingdom by their superior advice. The tree according to the above verse (No. 16) also puts forth a boast that the three sages enjoyed life under its shade.

¹ Ep. Ind., Vol. VIII, p. 17—There is a habit among Jaina monks to add to their names surnames generally referring to their literary accomplishments. Such are for instance:—

Paravādimalla, Śrīpāladeva-Tratvīḍya, Ajitasena-Vāḍibharīṇḍa, Vāḍibha-Kaṇṭharava, Padmanābha-Vāḍi, ANāhala, Mallisheṇa-Maḷadūrin, etc.

Hence it is legitimate to expect some inscriptions or portrait sculptures of the said three sages under the tree or in its neighbourhood¹. And surely what we find to-day under the tree, on the plinth of the altar are the said two inscriptions (Nos. 16 and 17) and a crude sculpture on the northern face of the altar below the plinth showing a sage seated in the vīrāsana, i.e., with one leg placed over the other, a position suggestive of authority, and with his right hand in the teaching attitude (upadeśa). A peacock's feather (mayūra-pīñchchha) which was intended to remove insects like ants from harm's path can be seen on his left. The fact that this is the only sculpture on the altar establishes the relative importance of the sage portrayed. Probably he is the first of the trio (mumukshu-var) referred in both the inscriptions. But where are the other two?

Surely they ought to be expected very near the tree. To the east of the tree, within a distance of a yard is a balipīṭha with the figure of a sage, rather crudely sculptured. It appears that there were some writings on the top of this balipīṭha which have been so badly defaced that what remain now are not intelligible. But we can infer that the sage portrayed on it is one of the three sages, probably Chandrakīrti, the predecessor of Anantavīrya Vāmana who was contemporaneous with Kulottunga III (1178-1216 A.D.). But where then is Anantavīrya Vāmana?

A similar balipīṭha, situated to the north-east of the tree and removed from it by about a yard shows on its western face a crude sculpture of another sage resembling the presumed portrait of Chandrakīrti referred to above. The identity of this sage is luckily made clear by an inscription on its top (No. 18, p. 60) which serves as its label. The name of the sage intended is given as "Anantavīrya Vāmana," and he is the third sage referred to in the altar inscriptions.

It is strange that when the Muniḍsa contains five cells believed to belong to five sages, that flourished in the place, the altar inscriptions (both) should so specifically speak of three sages alone and ignore the other two. The two thus ignored are Mallishēṇa (1300-1350 A.D.) and Pushpasēṇa (1350-1400 A.D.). To ignore such celebrated sages in a temple where they were very popular, as proved by the temple inscriptions, is both impossible and a positive demerit, especially so when less important persons have figured in the temple records. The only explanation for this seeming omission is that at the time of the altar inscriptions these two sages were unknown to the temple. The inscription of Anantavīrya Vāmana (No. 18) on the second balipīṭha near the tree lends support to this theory. We had assigned Anantavīrya Vāmana to the middle of the thirteenth century (1230-1280 A.D.) relying on inscription No. 3 (pp. 50-51).

¹ Prof. Chakravarti, the learned editor of Mallishēṇa's "Merumandara Parāṇam," says that two pairs of foot-prints evidently representing those of Mallishēṇa and Pushpasēṇa can be seen to-day under the Kṛṣṇa tree (Preface, p. 1). Indeed there are none.

The second altar inscription (No. 17, p. 60) lends further support to this theory. In it a king of the Tamil land, a Pallava (Pallavar-kōn) who probably revered the memory of these three sages, is said to have collected the stones gathered by the three sages with a view to build an altar around the tree, and made a strong altar out of granite which served as a seat. The present granite altar is therefore the work of a Pallava king of the Tamil country, and the two inscriptions on it should therefore be assigned to him. The palaeographical features of these two inscriptions which compare well with those of Kulottuṅga III, Rājarājadeva III (Nos. 1-4) and Kopperuñjiṅga (No. 12), and the fact that they are free like the latter from Sanskrit words or Grantha letters which predominate in the inscriptions of Mallishēṇa, Pushpasena, Irugappa, etc., warrant the assigning of the former to a period ranging between 1178 to 1300 A.D.

Who then is "the Pallava king of the Tamil land" that comes in this period. The term kōn ("king") clearly refers to him as a king and not as a chief or any other, for otherwise we will have to take this Pallava to be an ordinary chief or officer or merchant like the one mentioned in inscription No. 14 (p. 59). He is mentioned as a Pallava, a king, and a king of the Tamil land.

In another inscription in the temple (No. 12, pp. 58-59) a Pallava is referred to by the surname "Aḷagiya Pallavan" who is said to have built the compound wall. Aḷagiya Pallavan appears to be the surname of a chief who bore also the surname Aḷagiya-Sōjan, a feudatory of Rājarāja III¹. He is also referred to as belonging to the Śēṅgeṇi family². Among the inscriptions copied by the Epigraphy department, number 487 of 1921 from Tiruveṇṇainallūr is helpful in determining the exact identity of the person indicated here by the surname "Aḷagiya-Pallavan". It associates this surname with the name Kopperuñjiṅga, who figures in a number of inscriptions in the Chidambaram temple. He had also other titles, chief of which is 'Avani-āḷappiṇḍān' or "Avanyavanodbhava"³.

Thus the Pallava king of the Tamil land is probably Kopperuñjiṅga. It is only reasonable to expect this king to extend his patronage to the temple in the manner he appears to have done (Nos. 12 and 17). The reference to him as a Pallava king of the Tamil land is significant. He styled himself a Pallava, claiming descent from the Pallava dynasty and started as a feudatory chief of the Chola king, Rājarāja III. But he took advantage of the weakness of the latter and imprisoned him in 1230 A.D. in the fortress of Śendamangalam⁴, from where the latter was freed by the Hoysala Vīra Narasimha II Viśṇuvardhana⁵. In 1243 A.D. he was crowned king⁶ of the Tamil land (the land that was previously under the sway of the later Pallavas) at Śendamangalam in the region of Cuddalore (South Arcot District) in the heart of the Tamil country and according to some other writers at Conjeeveram which appears to have attracted him probably because it was the capital of the celebrated Pallavas, from whom he claimed descent⁶.

¹ S.I.I., Vol. I, p. 87.

² A.R.S.I.E., 1890, p. 3; S.I.I., Vol. I, p. 156.

³ A.R.S.I.E., 1914, p. 82; Ep. Ind., Vol. VII, p. 165.

⁴ S.I.I., Vol. III, part I, pp. 121-3.

⁵ Ep. Ind., Vol. VII, pp. 167-9; M.E.R. No. 142 of 1902.

⁶ K.V.S. Ayyar, p. 61.

Thus the inscription in question must have been made by Kopperuñjiṅga after 1243 A.D., i.e., after he had proclaimed himself as king. He was benevolent and generous to a fault and was anxious as every conqueror or new ruler will be to please every subject of his, no matter what his faith was, because he wanted to conciliate all and to make his rule permanent and desired to live up to the traditions set up by the glorious Pallavas from whom he claimed descent.

If we grant that the Pallava contemplated here is Kopperuñjiṅga, we should also grant that his connection with the temple starts from 1243 A.D., the date of his coronation as king, and that Mallisheṇa was unknown to him as his inscription on the altar speaks only of three sages. It is not possible to expect Mallisheṇa here at this time for as we have already remarked Mallisheṇa should be assigned to the first half of the fourteenth century (1300-1350 A.D.).

Who is the merchant Śeṅgadīrchelvan, the donor of the temple well, that styles himself as "Pallavan Mūvendavēḷān" (No. 14, p. 59)? If we remember that there was a custom among the feudatories of the Pallavas, Cholas, Pandyas and the Chālukyas to name themselves after their overlords the association of the term Pallava in the case of this merchant becomes clear as indicative of his subordination to a Pallava. The other term "Mūvendavēḷān" can be explained as follows:—Most of the officers under the Chola kings, either in the civil or military line, have got the honorific title "Mūvendavēḷān" which has been interpreted as meaning that they held service under the kings. Both the terms, "Pallavan" and "Mūvendavēḷān" in this case, when combined, give room for the conclusion that the merchant who dug the well in the temple was in the service of a Pallava. Who then is the Pallava in whose service the merchant was? The answer to this question is supplied by the palaeographical features of this merchant's inscription, which compare well with inscriptions Nos. 12 and 17 pointing thereby to the thirteenth century as the probable date when the inscription was incised. And the Pallava that figures in the temple inscriptions (Nos. 12 and 17) about this period is Kopperuñjiṅga whose officer the merchant can easily be.

Before closing this study of the history of the temple there is a minor point to be explained in connection with inscription No. 10 (p. 58). In this inscription the famous Vijayanagara king Kṛṣṇadeva Rāya is said to have given in 1517 A.D. to the temple the village of Uvachchēri in exchange for another village named Kodukai which till then belonged to the temple. The point to be noted here is that the language is Kanarese, while the script is Grantha. The adoption of Kanarese shows that Kanarese was the court-language of the Vijayanagara kings and was understood by the people at the time this inscription was incised in the temple. It is also well known that the Jainas at Tiruparuttikunṇam were in close touch with the Kanarese country, where Śrāvāṇa Belgōla, Kārkāl and Yēnūr are located, for it was their sacred duty to go to these places on pilgrimage. Indeed I heard the temple priest repeat some mantras which were in Kanarese.

INSCRIPTIONS.

CHANDRAPRABHA TEMPLE.

I. On the plinth of the eastern wall in Tamil-Grantha :—

Svasti Śrī Tirumanni valāra-vi(ru)nilamaḍandaiyum Porchchayappavaiyūñ-Śirttani-chhelviyūñ-taṇ perundēviyarāgi inbuṛa neḍidiyalūliyuḷḍaituṛai(nāḍuntū)ḍar-vana-velippaḍar Vanavāsiyūñ-śuḷḷi śūḷ-maḍit-Kolippākkaiyū-maṇṇarkarū-muraṇa-Maṇṇai-k-Kaḍakkamum poruka-ḍaiḷattaraiyar-tamuḷḷiyum)āṇḡavar—Dēviyarōṅḡeliṇ muḍiyu-muṇṇavar pakka(l tēṇṇavar vaitta) sundaramuḍiyumindiraṇāramuū-tēṇḍirai Ilamaṇḍala-muḷuvadu meṇi paḍai ko . . .*

For translation of the above passage which forms part of the prasaṣti or glorification of Rajendra Chola I see South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. II, p. 92; Vol. III, pp. 468-9.

II. On the eastern plinth, to the left of the entrance in Tamil-Grantha :—

Svasti Śrīh Tirumanni valāra irunilamaḍandaiyum porṣeya . . .*

These few words constitute the beginning of the prasaṣti of Rajendra Chola I.

III. On the lower plinth of the north wall, also in Tamil-Grantha :—

. . . yarāgi inbuṛa . . . yalūliyuḷ . . . ta . . . vana-velippaḍar Vanava . . . Maṇṇai-kkaḍakkāḍak . . . e . . . yaroṅḡe . . . pakkaḷ . . . ṇṇavar vaitta sundaramuḍiyu . . . raṇāramuū . . . rai Ilama . . . muḷuvadu (m) eṇi paḍai . . .

On the lower plinth of the western wall :—Only traces of letters, badly weathered, but nothing can be made out.

On the lower plinth of the south wall :—

. . . śemporṇiruttaku-mu (ḍiyum) . . .

These few words also constitute the beginning of the prasaṣti of Rajendra Chola I.

VARDHAMĀNA TEMPLE.

In the Chandraprabha temple architecture is the main indication of date. The Vardhamāna temple, on the other hand, contains many inscriptions, some of which are valuable from an historic point of view, as they commemorate constructions and gifts during the time of nearly the whole sequence of ruling dynasties beginning with the Chola kings. Some are important from a literary or religious point of view.

A list of these inscriptions is given below. We have refrained from giving the transliterations of the actual texts of such of the inscriptions as have already been published in Epigraphia Indica or South Indian Inscriptions.

I. In Tamil, on the west wall of the Śānti-maṇḍapa. Published in South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. IV, p. 105, No. 367. Here is recorded a tax-free gift to the Nāyanār and Ālvār, i.e., the god at Tiruparuttikunṇam, also called Śemporṇkunṇu, i.e., the "Golden hill," of the village of Kannipakkam in Viṇṇēṇṇāṇṇu (district) of Kāliyūr kōttam (territorial division) by its liberal owner Vimaraiṣer (Bhīma) during the eighteenth regnal year of Rājarāja III.

* From here the inscription runs on the plinth of the northern wall.

The eighteenth regnal year of Rājarāja III will correspond to 1234 A.D. as he commenced his rule in 1216 A.D. The engraver of this inscription indulges in cutting a joke at the expense of Vīma (Bhīma), the donor. He characterises the village given as one that the donor could not by any means dispose of in sale, as it was so barren. Then the idea appears to have struck the donor that God should be willing to take it if none else were prepared to receive it, for the reason that He was its creator and as such was also responsible for its barrenness. He solemnly made a gift of the village to the God at Tiruparuttikuṇṇam and got the said record engraved on the west wall of the Śānti-maṇḍapa, an action which appears to have provoked for its absurdity even the very engraver of the said record so that the latter flings an ironical hit at the donor by calling him "the ocean in charity" and suggests by side hits here and there, like "neḍu nāl śelladē kiḍanda vidanai" that the temple might well have been spared this gift.

But the fact remains. The gift was made and was accepted for the temple, no matter if it was worthy or not.

2. In Tamil, on the north wall of the store room to the south-east of the main shrine. This has been published as No. 363 of South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. IV, p. 104. It records the gift of paddy to the Nayanār, i.e., Trailokyanātha, and the construction of a maṇḍapa or store room to store it in by a Jaina Brahman named Vīma (Bhīma) during the twentieth regnal year of Rājarāja III (1236 A.D.).

3. In Grantha and Tamil, on the lowest moulding of the base of the veranda (mukha-maṇḍapa) in front of the Vardhamāna shrine. This has been published as No. 366 of South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. IV, p. 104.

The readings of the Epigraphy Department seem to require slight emendation and as an additional line of inscription which had escaped notice hitherto has been deciphered the whole inscription is given below:—

Line 1.—*Svasti Śrī * Tribhuvanaachchakravartigaḷ Mathuraiyṇṇ Pāṇḍiyan-muḍittulai-yum koṇḍarūḷiya Śrī-Kuḷōttuṇṇa-Chōḷa-dēvar(ku y)āṇḍu 21 āvadu Maṇḍiyāṇḱilāṇ Kuḷōttuṇṇa-Chōḷa-Kāḍuvēttigaḷ rājakāriyāṇḱheydu Nāyanāraṭ-tiruvadittola-niṇṇukku vēṇḍuvuṇṇa vēṇḱkollēṇṇu tiruvuḷḷamāyaruḷa maṇḍala-chi (li)kaḷavattarām(y) tāmuṇ eṇḱaḷ gurukkaḷ Chandrukirtti-Dēvar Tirupparuttikkunṇilē iruppar akkōyilukku irubadu vēli nīlan-tiruvuḷḷamāyaruḷa-veṇṇumēṇṇu ikkōyilē Kāni. . . .*

Line 2.—tirayku Kottaiyūrāṣiriyappattamū-kuduttarūḷi Ambiyilē irubadiṇṇu vēli nīlattukku tirumukham prasādi(tta) tirumukhappadi kaḷvetṇu Tribhuvanaachchakravartti-Kōneriy-mai-koṇḍān Jayāṇḱonda-Chōḷamaṇḍalattu Kāliyūrkkōttattut-Tirupparuttikkunṇil vēriyappiḍar-gaḷukku ippa...kku vēṇḍuvagavai yigrukkēṇṇuppadāga Eyir-kōttattu A(m)biyilē irubadiṇṇu vēli nīlam irubattoṇṇāvadu mudal paḷḷichchanda-iraiyiliyā(gu) ittu ippa. . . .

Line 3.—¹ . . . ivai va-Śrī Gaṅgay . . . vanikari-Tiruchāya...ni (Hi)ṇṇaiyay. . .

¹ This line is on the line of the pavement and is badly weathered. Hence it is lost in many places.

This is a record of a tax-free gift of twenty vēlis of land situated in the village of Ambi, in the territorial division of Eyir-kōttam to the temple during the twenty-first regnal year of Tribhuvanachakravartin Kulottuṅga Chola-deva III. The gift itself arose in the following manner:—

The headman of a village or the village called Maṇḍiyam (or probably Maṇḍiyan was the name of the headman himself) who was in the service of Kulottuṅga-Chola-kaḍuvettigaḷ, i.e., Kulottuṅga himself requested the authorities (probably Kulottuṅga himself) to give twenty vēlis of land to the temple at Tiruparuttikunram in consideration of his living there and also because there lived in the temple their (his) preceptor Chandrakīrti and the authority (who in this case might be Kulottuṅga himself) gave the desired land in the village of Ambi and conferred (on Chandrakīrti) the title of preceptor or "Āchārya" of Kōttaiyūr.¹

4. In Tamil, on the beams of the Chola veranda (mukha-maṇḍapa) in front of the Vardhamāna shrine. The stones have been misplaced, the continuity of the inscription being thus disturbed. This inscription is referred to as No. 99 in the Annual Report of the Madras Epigraphy Department for 1923 but has not been published.

Line 1.—² "Svasti Śrī [II*] Tribhuvanachakravartigaḷ Mathuraiyum Pāṇḍiyan muditalaiyūn-kondaruḷiya Śrī-Kulottuṅga-Chōḷadevarku yāṇḍu 22 āvadu terkiṟ tirumaṇḍapam oḷittuchchilaiyār śeygiṟa kālattu vadaṣuvārīṟ kalvettu mēlaichchuvārīḷ pudaivavēṇḍudalil a(a)ga kalvettuṇpaḍi-Śrīmaṟ kīrttimuṇḍaḡa Tribhuvanachakravartigaḷ Śrī Vikrama-³ Chōḷadevarku yāṇḍu 13 paḍimūṇṟāvadu Śeyāṅkondachōḷamaṇḍalattu Kōliyūr-kōṭṭattu Viṟṟē . . .⁴ tilatach-Chaturvēdi-maṅgalattu Mahāsabhaiyōm nilavilai-yāvaṇakkai⁵ yeḷuttu eṅgaḷṟkkilpiḷaḡai Nenmalimaruttu nīrpūṣi neliṟaiyum bhūmi ṇāṅgaḷ pēṇvōlaikkānattukku iṟaiyi . . .⁶ chuterich-Chaturvēdimāṅgalattār eṅgaḷ pakkal nilāṅkonḍu vēttina kayattukkuṇ-kayakkālukkū vadaḡku . . .

Line 2.—⁷ "m mēḷṟkellai Kaitaduppūṟaṇa Hastinivāraṇach-Chatu(r)vēdimāṅgalattuk-kuk-kiḷakkum vadaḷṟkellai Tirupparuttikkunṟellaikkut-terku inṇaṅkellaikkutpatta nila nīrpūṣi neliṟai bhūmi mudal karambum varambum vāykkalum ēriyumāḡa kōḷṇkollaiyūn-kūḷiyūn-kāḷaru mūvaru mēḍuṇkōḍu-mēṇōkkina maramuṇ-kīṇōkkina kiṇaṟu muṇṇil mōḷivēṇṟi uḍumpō⁸ḍiyāmai naḍanda nilamellā(m) innattup-pallichchandan-Tirupparuttikkunṟāḷvārkkū iṟaiyilichchi iṟaiyilipal . . .⁹ mīḷisaiṇḍa poṇ iṟubattaiṇkāṇḡu mathurāntakaṇmāḍaikkokkum poṇ-kam¹⁰āṟṟēṟṟi iṇḍa

¹ In translating this as well as other big Chola inscriptions in the temple I have refrained from giving a word to word rendering, only attempting to give the main purport of the inscriptions, for they contain mostly the Chola kings' praise or glorification and details of formulae relating to gifts which I consider have been sufficiently explained in South Indian Inscriptions, Epigraphy Reports and Epigraphia Indica and other similar publications of the Archaeological Department.

² On the lintel of the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardha-maṇḍapa.

³ On the outer side of the central beam of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

⁴ On the inner side of the first beam of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa, at the extreme northern end.

⁵ On the inner side of the fourth beam (next to and to the south of the central beam) of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

⁶ On the inner side of the second beam (next to and to the north of the central beam) of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

dēvarpandārattu nāṅgaḷ poruḷarakkonḍu murkūriya nārperellaikkū-muṣpaṭṭa nilattukku nilavilaiya . . . ⁴ māvarudip-porutṭhelavu kāṭṭuga-veṇapperādōmāgavum kōyil vāsalār-ponḍa kaḍamai kuḍimai vēlikka . . .

Line 3.—² rku veṭṭimuttaiyaḷ nīrvilai eṇchōru sennūr mudalāmañji mudalāna aḷ-murru-muḷḷina yādonṇū-śōllavun-kāṭṭavu perādōmāgavum innilattukku eḍēnumaḷivunśōllir tiruvānāi-maruttār paṭṭadu paḍuvōmāgavum eḷuttukkurrañ-choṇkurra mudalāna kurraṅgaḷ śōllapperādōmāgavum innilattukku iraiyūn-kreyamu-maṇakkonḍu iraiyilipallichchandamāga tāṅgaḷ vēndukudiyittu nūrvittukkoḷoargalāgavum chandrādittavar ³śelvadāga virrukkuduttōm orukālā-vadu mīrukālāvadu mukkalāvadu mippaḍi saṁvadittu nilavilaiyarudiyagachchey . . . ⁵ turvēdimāṅgalattu mahāsabhaiyōm ippaḍikku Vaṅkippurattu Karunākara Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu i . . . ⁴ kku Kāñchik-Keśava Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍikku Vaṅkippurattu Aruḷāḷa Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍikku Kāñchi Śrī Kṛishṇa Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍikku Poṇṇambala . . . ⁶ rattu-Vāsava Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍikku Vaṅkippurattu Koṅkumara Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍi ippaḍi arivēṇaraiyū . . .

(Stone missing in the middle.)

Line 4.—⁸ ippaḍi arivēṇ Kaitaḍuppūr-Kovinda-Bha-

Line 5.—ṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍi arivēṇ Kaitaḍuppūr Na-

Line 6.—raiūr Chānaya-Bhaṭṭaṇḍuttu ippaḍi ari-

Line 7.—vēṇ Virpēttu Maṇalūr kiḷavanān-

Line 8.—kkaḍi Kāḷku Nāyakaṇḍuttu ippaḍi ari-

Line 9.—. . . kayāṇa Kāḷku Nāyakaṇḍuttu Tamil-vēḷḷaṇḍuttu.

This inscription is dated in the twenty-second regnal year of Kulottuṅga Chola III and speaks of the renewal of an old maṇḍapa to the south of the main shrine and further states that when the new maṇḍapa was being built it was found that a stone of the old one which contained an inscription dated in the thirteenth regnal year of Tribhuvanachakravartin Śrī Vikrama Chola-deva had to be removed from the north wall of the old structure and had to be fixed on the western wall of the new structure. A copy of this earlier inscription dated in the thirteenth regnal year of Tribhuvanachakravartin Vikrama Chola-deva, is included in the inscription of Kulottuṅga III and registers sale of land, free of taxes, by " . . . Chaturvēdimāṅgalattu-Mahāsabhā" or the village assembly to Tiruparuttikuṇṇāḷvār i.e., Trailokyanātha or Vardhamāna for twenty-five kaḷāṅju mathurāntakan-māḍai.

5. In Tamil. This is mentioned by Crole in the Chingleput District Manual, p. 437 (Appendix F), who says that this is a record dated in the forty-fifth regnal year of

¹ On the lintel of the eastern wall of the Vardhamāna-ardha-maṇḍapa.

² On the outer side of the central beam of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

³ On the inner side of the first beam of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa, at the extreme northern end.

⁴ On the inner side of the fourth beam (next to and to the south of the central beam) of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

⁵ On the inner side of the second beam (next to and to the north of the central beam) of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa.

⁶ On the corbel of the pilaster to the left of the entrance to the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa.

⁷ On the corbel of the pilaster to the right of the entrance to the Vardhamāna-ardhamāṇḍapa.

Kulottunga Chola and speaking of the digging of a channel for water exclusively for use in Tiruparuttikunram. The exact words of Crole regarding this inscription are as follows:—

"In the forty-fifth year of the reign of Kulothunga Cholan, the following order for the distribution of water is issued to the village of திருப்பருத்திக்குளம் in Vippēdu Nadu of Kaliyūr Kottam. To the east of the lands which we have presented to the gishe-gods of Teruparithikunram, to the west of the slope of the village, to the north of Manikkayan Vittam, to the east of Singamedu, probably Savilimadu to the south of the Hill, i.e., திருப்பருத்திக்குளம் a channel has been dug up; the water thereof shall be exclusively used for the Teruparithikunram."

For a long time I could not trace this inscription anywhere in the temple. The Epigraphy reports do not speak of it nor did the Jains of the place including the temple priest know anything about it. The temple priest told me, however, that about 50 years ago, when he was only a boy, a European gentleman came to the temple and wrote down notes on the temple inscriptions as his father, the then priest, read them for him. On hearing this I felt certain that the inscription must be within the temple itself and my search was eventually rewarded with success. I found it within the Trikūṭa-Basti on the lintels of the three shrines. It runs as follows:—

Line 1.—"Svasti Śrī [*] Puṅṇaḥ sūṇḍa pūṇari aḡaḥ sūṇḍa bhuviyir ponnēmiyaḷavuntan-nēmi naḍappa viḷaṅḡu jayamaḡalai yilāṅkōpparuvattuvīraṇṇuṇ-ṭiyāgamum viḷaṅḡap-pārtoḷachchi-vaṇiḍattumaiyenat-Tiyāgavalli Ulaḡudaiyālōḍuṇ vīrasūṅḡāsanattu vīṇṇirundaruliya Kō-Rājake-sari-panmarāna Tribhuvanaśchakravartigaḥ Śrī Kulōttunga-Choladevārku yāṇḍu 46 āvadu Jayaṅḡōṇḍa-Chōḷamaṇḍalattu Kaliyūr-kōṭṭattu Virpēdu-nāt.

Line 2.—"tut-Tirupparuttikunṇil nīrpāyakkalla Rishisamudāyattārku nāṅḡaḥ vīṇṇuk-ḡutta nilattukku kiḷpārkellai ilavañchevukku mēṇku tenpārkellai Māṇikkayan vaṭṭattukku vaḍakkum mēlpārkellai Yisāṅkanmettukku-kilakkum vaḍapārkellai malaittiṭṭukkutṭeṇṇum innārpārkellai yuḷḷum laikai ṇṭṭamaḡappāḍap-paḷampāḍikōlār-kamiḷṇi-kāḷumāḡak-kuḷi 3,000 mūvāyiramum idiṇḡikkal nārḡōḷ kalattinḡeḷu vaḍapārkellai ki . . .

Line 3.—"ṇḍānandana-vaṇattukkutṭeṇṇum tenpārkellai Sūḷappattikkum Śāviṇḍakṇattuk-kum Nālāḍikkum Vajudalaṅkūṇḍilḡaḷukkuṇ Rulantōṭṭattukkuṇ ponnāḷamanda Piḍārikōyilukku vaḍakku eṅḡaḷūr vellakkālilē ūṇṇut-Tirupparuttikunṇilāṇṇukkālilē ūṇṇunīr-pāyakkōṇḍa emmiḷi-saiṇḍa vilaiṇṇoruḷ Mathurāntakōṇ-māḡai paḍinaṇḍu miṭṭu idu-mudal chandrādittavarai inḷattukkiyāi emmiḷisaiṇḍa aṇṇāḍu nārḡāṇu paḍinaṇḍum āvanak.

Line 4.—"kāḷiyē kaichchelavaṇakkōṇḍu iṇai ilichchi vīṇṇa ṇamakkup-pramāṇamum paṇṇikkallilum veṭṭivittu ikkayattilun—kālilumidāṇu mēṭṭam-mīṇaiḡḡavūṇḡaḍavōmallāḍḍmāḡa-vum iṇṇaḍikkū iṇai-ilichchi vīṇṇukkuḡuttōm Tirupparuttikunṇil Rishisamudāyattārku Kaitaḡup-pūrāna Hastinivāraṇaśch-Chaturvēḍimaṅḡalattu Mahāsabhaiyōm ivarḡaḥ paṇiyāl-eḷuḍinēn Māṭṭūrudaiyān Vēḷān Tirumaṇaiḡkāḍanēn eḷuttu iṇṇaḍikkuk-Kāṇṇūr Śāśānaya-Kramavittan.

Line 5.—"eḷuttu iṇṇaḍikkū Tirundūr Gōvinda-Kramavittan-sanjñaiyāna ṇamakkū Tirundūr Śāśānaya-Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu iṇṇaḍikkū Nāṇaiyūr Śāśānaya-Bhaṭṭan-sanjñaiyāna ṇamak-kut-Tirundūr Śāśānaya-Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu iṇṇaḍikkut—Tirundūr Śāśānaya Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu iṇṇaḍikkū

Kaṇṇūr-Kōvinda-Bhaṭṭaṇ eḷuttu ippaḍikkū Sōmaṅgalattu Appaṇ eḷuttu ippaḍikkū Iruṇikak-Kramavilṭaṇ eḷuttu ippaḍikkū Naraṇyūrch-Chōḍamimalai eḷuttu ippaḍi aṇivēu Tiruvēkambach-Chaturvēdi-maṅgalattu-Paramātma Bhaṭṭasya ippaḍi aṇivē . . .

On the north wall of the Trikuṭa-Basti—

Line 1.—rāchchāṅkō . . . vaṇ pākka . . .

Line 2.—san-Tiruppanāṅkādaṇ . . . eḷuttu

Line 3.—aṇivēu Kramakkilavaṇ eḷupāḍiya ri ne yū(lu)ttu ippaḍi aṇivēu Kramakkilū . . .
(rest missing).

Line 4.—aṇivēu Virpēttu marakkāṇ Aṇṇāmalai sakaraṇaṇeḷuttu ippaḍi . . .

Line 5.—ṇ Virpēttu . . . (ki)ḷavan Nāgattadigaḷ Kāḷka Nāyakaṇ eḷuttu ippaḍi . . .
(rest missing).

The above inscription records the sale by the Hastinivārana Chaturvedimaṅgala-Mahāsabhā to the Ṛishi-samudāya of Tiruparuttikuṇṇam of 3,000 kuṭis of land for irrigation purposes and payment of fifteen Mathurāntakan-māḍai to the same samudāya in return for the privilege of using the spring water on the river bed of Tiruparuttikuṇṇam by cutting a channel and running the spring water into it. This is dated in the forty-sixth regnal year of Ko-Rājakesari Tribhuvanachakravartin Kulottuṅga Chola-Deva. The regnal year and the expression Rājakesari establish that the Kulottuṅga referred to here is the first of that name as the others that we know of did not have such a long reign nor was the expression Rājakesari attached to their names in inscriptions containing their praśasti or glorification. Kulottuṅga III did indeed reign for a long period but his latest regnal year known from inscriptions is the thirty-eighth.

6. In Tamil, on the north wall of the ardha-maṇḍapa attached to the Vardhamāna shrine. This can be read only from within the Trikuṭa-Basti, the maṇḍapa of which hides it from view. It fills up the whole wall and is in twenty-six long lines. The beginnings of these lines are unfortunately covered by a small projecting wall in front of the subsidiary shrine of Vāsupūjya built on to the wall containing the inscription. The existence of this inscription had been completely lost sight of as the temple authorities had given the wall a thick chunam coating with a view to preserve it from crumbling. The stone of which this wall was built is of the kind found in the adjoining Pallava temple and like this comes off layer by layer if exposed to sun and rain. Fortunately the inscription is well preserved as the Trikuṭa-Basti-ardhamāṇḍapa had given the wall the needed shelter and the recent chunam coating had further protected, as well as mostly obliterating it. The twenty-six lines found on the wall contain two records, dated in the reign of Vikrama Chola-Deva, the successor of Kulottuṅga I, whose inscription is found on the lintels of the three shrines in the Trikuṭa-Basti. They run as follows:—

Line 1.—. . . ttiraḷ puyattirunilamaḍandai . . . ppakkāṇamarai mārvaṇ-taṇadenappe[ṇṇuttirumagaḷo]ṇṇa [ṇiyiruppak] koṇ-viruppōdu nāvagattiruppa aḷilabhuvanamu . . .

Line 2.—āmiśainṇa pattiśai toruṇḍigiriyōḍu ſeñkōl naḍappakka . . . vaṇ bilattiḍaik-kiḍappa Kuḷattiḍait-Teluṅga-Vimanuṇ vīlaṅgal mimiśai ēṇavūṇ- Kāṇḍabhūmi . . . vattu vempāḍai tāṅgi Vēṅgai maṇḍalatti)āṅginitirundu vaḍa-ḍiśai yaḍippaḍuttaruṇṇi-tenṇiśai . . .

Line 3.—diyuḡam pōlakkaḷaittalai ſiṇṇappavandaruṇḍi)veḷḷaṇka)ruṇ pōṇṇipuliyaṇai pārtti-var ſūḍa niṇṇaimaṇimakuṇṇamurāi)mai)ḷi) ſūḍi maṇṇuyirkkellāmiṇṇuyirttāy-pōṇṇaṇai parappi-ttaṇittai pu(pā)rttu.

Line 4.— . . . kōyirkōṇṇava . . . maṇiṇḍa(nā)voḍuṅga muraṇṇuḡal mṇaṅga viśaiyamum puḡaḷu-mēlmēlōṅga vāḷi vāḷi māṇilaṇkātut-tirumaṇipōṇṇoḍeḷuḍu-pattāṇḍil varu-murāi mṇṇe maṇṇavar ſamandu tirai mirāṇduchchorinda . . .

Line 5.— . . . mpuriyu ſemponṇam(ba)ḷu . . . māḷigai gōpuravāṣal kūḍa . . . ḡaḷum ulaguvāṇkōḷḷu-māṇavāḷavikkam nēmikkulavarai ndaiyakkuṇṇamōḍu niṇṇoṇṇappa-ṣṇmponṇmēynda baḷivaḷar piṇamum viṣumpoḷitalaiikka vīlaṅṇu poṇṇmēyṇḍirumilanda . . .

Line 6.— . . . m peyar viḷḷa)veṇṇumuyar Pūraṣṭādi Uttiraṣṭā . . . ni . . . aṇṇuḍakkūttarimbar vāḷa veḷundaruṇḷvadaṇku tiruttērkkōyil-ṣempon mēyṇdu parattirāḷ muttiṇ payilvadam parappi niṇṇaimaṇimāḷigai neḍuntirut-tanaḍu tiruvaḷar . . .

Line 7.— . . . parikalamudalā-ṣe(m)poṇkaḷ)ḷ)paḡattōḍu parichchiṇṇamum . . . ḷavillāda vōḷi pāḷa-ṣamaittup-pattāmaṇḍiṇ Chittirai-tiṅḡal-Attam peṇṇav-Ādittavarattu tiruvaḷar madi-Traiyoḍaṣip-pakkai-tiṇṇaḷ)paḷavumiṇḍu ṣamaittaruṇḷi ſēḷiyar veṇṇura . . .

Line 8.— . . . chi neṇḷalumurakak(n) kartiṇai yīḍaik-Kaṇaḍar veṇṇiḍakko . . . ṇḡarotuṅga Koṇṭaḷar ſāya marṇettiśai maṇṇaruntattamakkaṇeṇa tiruchchevāḍi muṇṇaimaiyiṇi-ṇaṇṇutterivayartilatati-Ti(yā)ḡapataḷai puriḷkaḷa(l) nā(ma)ḍappiḍi puṇṇitaḡṇavati Tiribhuvāṇa-muḷuḍu . . .

Line 9.— . . . aṇṇeḍuma . . . tti-ṇuṇ tiruṇḡaḷirundeṇa māḍar maḍama-l pūḷattarunḍhati araṇiyar kaṇṇiṇ Rarani-Muḷuḍuḍaiyāḷṇvaṇ tirumaṇ mārvaṭtaruḷuḍuṇiruppach-chempon vīraṣiṇḡaṣanattu viṇṇirundaruḷiṇa Kōp-Parakēṣari padmarāṇa Tribhuvāṇa.

Line 10.— . . . yāṇḍu 13 paḍimūṇṇavāḍu Āvaṇi māṣattu Viṇaḷa)ḷ)kkaḷamai peṇṇa-vaṇiḷattiṇaḷ Jayāṅḡaḍa-Ṣōḷamandalattuk-Kāḷiyūṇṇ- Kōṣṭattu Viṇṇēḍu-naṣṭu vaḷachāṇḍraṇ-kuvā-laiya-tilata-Chaturvēḍimaṅḡalattu Mahāṣa . . .

Line 11.— . . . tu eṇḡaḷūr kiḷṇiḍaḡai Nēṇmali marattu niṇṇūṣi neḷviḷaiyum bhūmi nāṅḡal peṇṇuḷaiḷ-kāṇattukku iṇai yīḷichchi viṇṇaḍaṇṇuk-kiḷ(pā)ṇkellai Tirupparuttikkuṇṇellaikku mēṇṇum tenṇāṇkellai ſēvalai mē . . .

Line 12.— . . . ṇḡaḷ viṇṇukkuḍutta niḷattir kayattukkuṇ-kayakkāḷukku . . . kkuṇ mēḷpāṇkellai Kaitaḍupṇūṇa Haṣṭiṇvāraṇa-Chaturvēḍimaṅḡalattellaikkuḷ-kūḷakku muva . . . āṇkellai Tirupparuttikkuṇṇellaikkut-tenṇum iṇṇāṇṇerellaikku utpaṭṭa niḷaṇṇ . . .

Line 13.— . . . kavakkāḷum ēriyum ērikōḷuṇ-kollaiyūṇ-kūḷiyūṇkaḷ . . . (va)ru mēḍuṇ-kōḍu mēṇōkkina maramuṇ-kiḷṇōkkina kiṇaṇ muṇṇiḷ poḷiṇṇiṇṇi nḍu . . . yāmai naḍanda niḷamellā mēṇṇaḍi Kāḷiyūṇṇ-kōṣṭattu Viṇṇēḍu-naṣṭuppaḷḷi . . .

Line 14.— . . . chchi iṇaiyīḷiḷiḷichchandamāḡa viṇṇaḍaṇṇuchchamāṇdu e(mmi) liṣaiṇda vilai poṇ paḍiṇaiṇkōḷaṇṇu ipṇoṇ paḍiṇaiṇkōḷaṇṇu Maṭhuraṇṭakan-māḍaikkū (o)kkum poṇṇāḡa māṇṇēṇṇi it-Tirupparuttikkuṇṇiḷ Rishiṣamudayattar iṇḍaḍ-Devar pa . . .

Line 15.— . . . kalañjum poruḷarakkonḍu murkūriya nārperellaikkū . . . tta nilattukku nilavilai- yāvaṇāṇṣaidu kuḍuttōṇ-kuḍuttapaḍiyāvadu idukku iduveya . . . (f) māvarudipporuḷ-chelavāvadāgovum idu valladu vēru poruḷ māvarudipporuḷ-che . . .

Line 16.— . . . vum kōyil vāṣalār ponda kuḍimaippādu vēlikkā . . . (f)ti muṣṭaiyaḷ nīroḷai echchoru kūyru mudalāṇa ṣeñṇir māṇji mudalāṇa ālmara . . . llaṇa viyādonṇū-ṣollavū-kaṭṭavū(m) perādōmāgavū(m) iovirra nila . . .

Line 17.— . . . ũ cheyavār tiruvānai maṇṭṭār paṭṭidu paḍuvō(māga)vum eḷuttukkuyrañ-ṣorkuyra-mudalāṇakuyraṅgaḷonṇū-ṣollap-perādōmāgavum . . . ṇilattukku iraiyū kreyamumarakkonḍu iraiyili paḷlichchandamāga . . .

Line 18.— . . . kkaḍavōmalladōmāgavū-m-tāṅgaḷ vēṇḍuṇkūdiyi . . . muvittuk-koḷvārāgavum Chandradittavāra chelvadāgavēṇṇu oru kālāvadu mirukālāvadu mukkalāvadu ippaḍi sāvavadittu nilavilai yaṇḍiyāgachcheydu kuḍuttōm murkūri . . .

Line 19.— . . . kalattu Mahāśabhaiyōm ippaḍi yaṇḍēṇ Kāñchi . . . tuk-kaṭikaiyāṇa Kāḷku Nāyakāṇa Tamil Vēḷaṇ eḷuttu ippaḍikku vaḷi ṣāṇṇil Kāñchi Kēṣava . . . neluttu ippaḍikku Vāṅkiy-Arulāla Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippaḍikku Vāṅkippuṇattuk-Karṇyākara Bhaṭ-tan . . .

Line 20.— . . . (ip)paḍikku Pala . . . p(pu)rattu Vāsava Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippaḍikku Vāṅkipu(rattu)k Konkumāra Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippaḍikku Kāñchi Śrī Kṛishṇa Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippaḍikkup-Ponnappuṇattuk-Gōvinda . . . eḷuttu ippadiyaṇḍēṇ Olukkaiṇṭṭattuk paṣakattu Śrī Kṛishṇa Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippa(di) . . .

Line 21.— . . . (vā) kkaḷaṇṭaru(m) . . . ttu ippaḍi yaṇḍēṇ Kaitaduppū . . .
(vi)nda Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu ippaḍi yaṇḍēṇ Kaitaduppūril Na(rai)yūr Śāṣanaya Bhaṭṭan eḷuttu . . .
. (yaḥchakkiravarttiḡaḷ Śrī Vikrama) Choḷadēvarṇu yāṇḍu paḍinēḷāvadu Jayāṅkōṇḍa-Cholamaṇḍa . . .

Line 22.— . . . Kaitaduppūḍṇa Hasti-niv)araṇach-Chaturvēdimāṅgalattu sa . . . āṅkagachchamaindu niṅga Tirundūr Śāṣanatiki Bhaṭṭanum Naṇḍiyūr Śāṣirāma Bhaṭṭanū-Ḳūḍalūr Chipoṇataiyū . . . ṇa Kramavittanum Kaṇṇaṇṇūvi yīṇmēḷ varuvāṇ Kramavittanū Naṇḍiyūrd-Deyvanāyakak-Kramavitta . . .

Line 23.— . . . māḍitta Bhaṭṭanum iṇa . . . vōm nilavilai yāvaṇakkaiye . . . k Kāḷiyūr-kōṭṭattū Virpēdu-nāṭṭup-paḷlichchandanu Tirupparuttikkunṇil Āramba Nandikkuk . . . ālumāga nāṅgaḷ viṇṇukkudutta nilamāvadu kiḷpāṅkellai Śempāṇkūḍaiyāṇ ki . . .

Line 24.— . . . kōḷ paḍiṇaiṇdu ida . . . rku kōḷ paṭṭonḍadu mēḷpa . . . lai yidu veytuṇḡi vaḍakku nōkki kōḷ paḍiṇaiṇḍum iduvey tuṇḡi vaḍapāṅke(lai k)ḷ irubattiraṇḍum idaṇ kiḷakku kōḷ mūṇṇu kiḷpāṅkellai iduvey tuṇḡi kōḷ . . .

Line 25.— . . . yum ikkayattin ēṇu(kiḷak)ku nōkki viḷaṅṇu mukkoḷ kalamū-kō . . .
luṇ-karaiyūmāgā-kōṇḍu kiḷakku nōkki eḷubaiṇ kōḷ nilam nīrpāykaikkuk-kayakkalākka koḷla . . .
(va)rāgavum ikkayamūṇ kalamuṣṭappa nilam ivargaḷukku Sabhaviṇṇiyōgattukkāga viṇṇukkudut .

Line 26.— . . . ṇ aṇṇāḍu nārkaṣu . . . ko-tu irubadumāvaṇakkaiyē . . .
kaichchelakkāṭṭēṇṇik-kaiḷḷonḍu virru . . . vāṇāṇ-cheydu kuḍuttōm iṇv-Āramba . . . Iṣāṇiya Bhaṭṭaṇuḷḷitta iṇvāṇaivōm iṇṇilamivargaḷ anubhaviḷka yīḍaduppanṇilattukku . . .

The first record which ends in the course of line 21 registers a sale of land, free of taxes, by the Hastinivāraṇa Chaturvedimaṅgala Mahāsabha, i.e., the Hastinivāraṇa village assembly, on behalf of certain individuals, to the assembly of ascetics looking after the affairs of the god at Tiruparuttikunram (i.e. the temple) for fifteen kaḷaiṇṇu during the thirteenth regnal year of Vikrama Chola-Deva.

This would appear to be the record, the gist of which was re-engraved on the beams of the Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa during the twenty-second regnal year of Kulottuṅga Chola III (see No. 4 of list).

The second record registers a sale of land to the Chaturvedimaṅgala Sabha by certain individuals for being distributed or given (sabhāvinīyoga) for Ārambha Nandi (a festival in the temple)¹ in Tiruparuttikunram, during the 17th regnal year of Vikrama Chola Deva.

7. In Grantha, on one of the sides facing the east of the central beam supporting the roof of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa in front of the Vardhamāna shrine. This has been published in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. VII, p. 116. A transliteration of it is given below as it is short and very important speaking definitely about the construction of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa :—

"Śrīmat-Vaichaya-daṇḍanātha-tanayas-samvatsare Prābhava saṅkhyāvān Irugappa-daṇḍa-nripatiḥ Śrī-Pushpasenājñāyā | Śrī Kāñchi-Jīna-Vardhamāna-nīlayasyāgre mahāmaṇḍapa-m saṅgitārtham achikarachcha śīlayā buddham samantāt sthālam. ||"

This inscription records that Irugappa, the son of the general Vaichaya and himself a general built in Prabhava (1387-88 A.D.) at the instance of Pushpasena a mahā-maṇḍapa in front of the temple of the Jina Vardhamāna in Kāñchi for holding musical concerts and paved with slabs (granite) the space all round.

8. In Tamil and Grantha, on the base of the north wall of the store room. This has been published in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. VII, p. 115. It runs as follows :—

Line 1.—"Svasti Śrīḥ[] Dundubhi varsham Kārttigai mādatil Pūrvapakshattut Tiṅgaṭkilaṁaiyum Paurṇaiyum peṇṇa Kārtti*

Line 2.—kai nā! Mahāmaṇḍalēśvaram Arihara-rājakumāran Śrīmat Bukkarājan dharmmam āga Vaichaya-daṇḍanātha-putran

Line 3.—Jainōttaman Irugappa Mahāpradhani Tirupparuttikkunṇu Nāyanār Trailōkya-vallabharkku pūjakkū

Line 4.—śālaikkum tiruppanikkum Māvandūrp-parṇil Mahēndramaṅgalam nārpāṇ-kellaiyum iṇai ilipallichchandamāga chandrāditya varaiyum naḍakkat-taruvittār Dharmmōyāṇ-jayatu. ||

This helps to show under which Vijayanagara king Irugappa was a general and minister. It records that the village of Mahendramangalam in the division of Māvandūr (evidently Māmaṇḍūr, five miles from Conjeevaram) was granted to the Nāyanār (i.e., the god) Trailokya-Vallabha of Tiruparuttikunṇam by the minister Irugappa, the son of the general Vaichaya (Chaichapa) and a staunch Jaina, in the year Dundubhi (1382 A.D.) for the merit of the Vijayanagara king Bukka-rāja, son of Arihara-rāja (Harihara II).

¹ See below, pp. 174, 181.

9. In Grantha, on the lintel of the gopura. A reference to the purport of this inscription will be found in the Annual Report of the Epigraphy department for 1922-23 under No. 98. The text is as follows:—

Line 1.—“Śrī Malliṣeṇa-yati-Vāmanasūriśiṣyaḥ Śrī Puṣhpasena-muniṣṇigava-Vāmanāryaḥ. |

Śrī-Gopurottarayugam Kamalānivāsam Śrīmān achīkaradidam Paravādimallaḥ.” ||

Its translation will be as follows:—

“The sage Puṣhpasena Vāmana, who was a disciple of the sage Malliṣeṇa, and who bore the surname Paravādimalla, i.e., a successful opponent of his enemies in discussion, built the superstructure of the gopura, which was, as it were, the abode of Kamalā (i.e., Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth).”

10. In Tamil and Grantha, the language being Kanarese, on the base of the veranda (Vardhamāna-mukha-mandapa) in front of the Vardhamāna shrine. This has been noted as No. 188 of the Annual Report of the Epigraphy department for 1901. As it has not yet been published we give it below:—

Line 1.—Dhātu varuṣham Puṣhya-śuddha-pādyatīlu Śrīman Mahārājādhirāja-Rāja-parameśvara-Śrī Virapratāpa-Śrī Vīra-Kṛṣṇa Rāya Mahārāyaṇa Jayina-sthāna-Buddha-sthānadak kurukkaḷ uḍaiyārgaḷṇke nīrūpa nimma devasthānukke cheluva Kodugai eṇba girāmavaṇu Musirupākka pretināmavāta Tirumalaidevipurata Agrahārakke grāmagrāsam āgi pālisi nimma grāmakke pradiyāgi Cheṇṇamaṇḍayakka-tammaiyāḡ-Ōḇiḷa-Uvachcheri eṇbakgrāma.

Line 2.—vaṇu nimma devasthānukke palittevu nīvu ā grāmavaṇu kaṭṭikkonḍu ā grāmavaṇu nimma devar śāsana ākki kombadu ak-Kodugaīyēṇba grāmavaṇu ā Tirumalaidevipurata aggrahārata mahājenan(ga)ḷṇke śilāśadaya ākki koḍuvadagi nimma Uvachcheri eṇbak-girāmavaṇu nimma devar tirunāmakshettirām āga śilāśadanam ākki kombadu āsthānigaṇu nīrūpa (pra)sidhe sidhevu Śrī Virūpakṣa. ||

It records a gift to the temple on Thursday, the 8th of January, 1517 A.D. (Saka 1439, Dhātu) by the Vijayanagara king Śrī Virapratāpa Śrī Vīra Kṛṣṇarāya Mahārāya (i.e., Kṛṣṇadevarāya) of the village of Uvachcheri in exchange for another village named Kodugai which belonged to the temple and which was required to be given to the residents of an agrahāra named Tirumalaidevipura also called Musirupākka.

11. In Tamil and Grantha, on the base of the gopura on its inner side facing the temple court-yard. This has been published in South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. IV, p. 105, as No. 368. It records a sale of land and site for the benefit of the temple and is dated Śaka 1440, Bahudānya, i.e., 1518 A.D., while the famous Vijayanagara king, Śrī Virapratāpa Śrī Kṛṣṇadeva Mahārāya was ruling the land.

12. In Tamil, on the compound wall on its outer side, to the right of the gopura.

Line 1.—“Svasti Śrī [*] T

Line 2.—ttirumadiḷ A

Line 3.—ḷagiya Pulla

Line 4.—vaṇ.

"This compound wall (was built by) Aḷagiya Pallavan."

13. In Tamil and Grantha, on a slab on the pavement of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa. The inscription is incomplete, the slab still bearing traces of the chunam that used to be pounded on its surface. What now remains reads as follows:—

Line 1.—" . . . [Śrī ma]n-ma.	Line 6.— rasimha devar.
Line 2.— hā maṇḍaleśu.	Line 7. }
Line 3.— ra-Irāṣāti rāsa-(i).	Line 8. }
Line 4.— rāṣaparamēśura-Śrī.	Line 9. }
Line 5.— Virapratāpa-Śrī Na.	Line 10. }

The name of the Vijayanagara king Vīra Narasimha is found here. What he is recorded as doing cannot be ascertained as the inscription is hopelessly obliterated by the heavy pounding to which the stone appears to have been subjected. The Narasimha referred to must presumably be either the brother of Kṛishṇadeva Rāya or Sāḷuva Nṛsimha.

14. In Tamil, on a granite slab (broken) on the pavement embedded in the narrow passage between the walls at the back of the Pushpadanta and Vardhamāna shrines. It reads as follows:—

Line 1.— Śvasti (Śrī) [*] ...Kach...yil.	Line 4.— Pallavaṇ Mūvē.
Line 2.— uṇṇigaṇ Śēṅga.	Line 5.— nda Vēḷāṇ sai.
Line 3.— dirhchelvaṇṇa.	Line 6.— vitta kiṇaṇu.

"The well constructed in....Kachchi (Kāñchi) by a merchant called Śēṅgadirchelvan, who bore the titles Pallavaṇ and Mūvēnda-Vēḷāṇ."

15. In Grantha, on the lintel of a niche on the north wall of the Chola veranda in front of the Vardhamāna shrine (Vardhamāna-mukha-maṇḍapa). It runs as follows:—

Line 1.— Śrīmantam jagatāmekam mitram mitrasamadyutim.
Line 2.— Vandeham Vāmanāchāryam Mallishēṇa-muniśvaram.

"I salute the teacher Vāmana also called sage Mallishēṇa, who is the only friend (important or reliable friend) of all the worlds and who is radiant like the sun."

16. In Tamil, on the southern side of the square platform or altar built round the kōra tree. It is a verse in praise of the tree itself and runs as follows:—

Line 1.—Svasti Śrīh [] Taṇṇaḷavēṇ kuṇṇāḍṇyarādu taṇ-Kāñchi munvaḷattu mummūṇivar mūḷkiyadu maṇṇavaṇ taṇ śēṅḍol.*

Line 2.—uḷaḷāṇ kāṭṭuṇ-Tenparuttikkunṇamar(n)da kōṇkār dharumak-kurā.

"The kōra tree that neither grows higher nor goes lower in its height, that was reared in early days in cool Kāñchi, that was enjoyed by the three sages that lived in the village, that revealed the beneficial rule of the king of the land, that was situated in Tenparuttikkunṇu, that was full of sweet pollen and that was Dharma (virtue) incarnate."

17. In Tamil, on the northern side of the altar built round the kōra tree. A verse, the beginning of which is missing :—

Line 1.—“ . . . madit-Kachchit-Tirupparuttikkungradan̄i chila mali . . .
munumuyivar śēritirunda mēlpār . . .

Line 2.—“ . . . kayaittin śilaiyār cheyday taru-Tamīḷ-Pallavar-kōy tāy.”

“It was the benevolent Tamil Pallava king that built the seat (here it refers to the altar built round the tree) with strong granite stones, the seat or altar that was already formed or designed or the stones of which were already gathered by three sages in Tiruparuttikun̄am in Kachchi which had compound walls (mali).”

18. In Grantha, found on a balipīṭha to the north-east of the kōra tree. It reads as follows :—

“Svasti Śrīmad-Ananta vīrya Vāmana-muniśvarasya.”

“This is of (i.e., belongs to) the lord of sages, Śrī Ananta-Vīrya-Vāmana.”

19. In Tamil, on the base of the gopura, on the left as one enters the temple. It reads as follows :—

On the upper plinth.

Line 1. Jina Kañchi Tirayaḷōkkiyanātha Śrīvamiyār pūśaikku māniyam.

Line 2. Paṅkāl mēdu paḷḷam ku 350 Pañcamappaṭṭai ku 300.

Line 3. Paḷappaṭṭadai ku 800 Chūṇam ku 340 | . Annaiyārkuṇmal.

Line 4. ku 50 Kōyilampatti ku 90 Śigappu kuṇmal kuḷi 60.

Line 5. valadu kōyil kuḷi 10 āga saruvamāniyam ku 2000.

Line 6. yīnda irayāyiram kuḷi nilannu enreṇṇaik.

Line 7. kum saruvamāniya dhaṇmamāga yādāmōrvarum aki(jū).

Line 8. tam paṇṇāmal paṇipāḷayam paṇṇavum.

On the lower plinth.

Line 9. iṇda dharmmakku ahitam paṇṇinapēr Gaṅgātīrattilē Bruhmātagagō-hatti paṇṇina dō-ittilē pōṇa(va).

Line 10. kkaḍavargal || Svadattādiviṇṇam paṇyam paradattānpālanaṁ | paradattā-pahāreṇa svadattannishphalaṁ bhavet ||.

Line 11. Svadattām() vā yo haretī vasundharā(m) Shashthirvarshasahasrāṇi vṛish-thāyām jayate-kshataḥ ||.*

It records a sarvamānya gift of 2,000 kuḷis of land for purposes of worship to the god Trailokyanātha at Jina-Kañchi.

20. In Tamil and Grantha, on the eastern wall of the ardhamandapa of the Vardhamāna shrine, on the northern corner, near the balipīṭha of Vāmana. The stones here are misplaced. The inscription to be detailed below runs on two old sand-stone slabs, one fixed by the side of the other but on a lower level. It is clear that these stones were disturbed at some time, probably during the construction of the Saṅgīta-mandapa. These stones are numbered 1 and 2.

No. 1.

No. 2.

Line 1. Svasti Śrī [*] (Tribhuvana Cha) kravattigaḷ Śrī Rājarā.

Line 2. ja devaṅku yā (nḍu)

"Hail prosperity. In the . . . regnal year of Rājarājadeva, the monarch of the three worlds . . ."

The rest is obliterated, the stone being badly weathered.

The Rājarāja that is referred to in this inscription is the third of that name who is said to have ruled from 1216 to 1246 A.D.

21. In Tamil and Grantha on the eastern wall of the ardhamandapa of the Vardhamāna shrine, on the southern corner of the wall:—

Line 1. Svasti Śrī [*] Tribhu (va)na cha . . . ttigaḷ Rājarā-devaṅku yāṇḍu 7 eḷavadu . . . ka China Kāñchipurattu . . .

Line 2. ḍa Tirupparuttikkunṇi . . . Śrī Mūlasthanadeva-Udaiyārkkuttiruppaḍimāṭ . . . kam Rishisamudāyattārkkuṇ . . . Hastade . . .

Line 3. . . . āna chandrādityava . . . tākkaya . . . āluṇḍaluvūttāy Śrīlō . . . yū-ḍiyil saṇa . . . chayvaṇa . . .

Line 4. ru (tī) kkuṇṇi . . . la . . . lu . . . ippaḍikku Ne

Line 5. . . . ḍu (cha) vēḷāṇṇu uḷḷitta . . . (i) . . . iṇa . . .

The rest is damaged badly. The inscription seems to record some grant dated seventh regnal year of Rājarāja III (1223 A.D.) probably of land for the temple expenses to be incurred on behalf of the central or main god of the temple and for the Rishi-samudāya or the group of ascetics who were empowered to administer the temple affairs. The donor's name is not clear in the inscription, only two letters, Śrī and Lō, being now legible. These two letters appear to be the beginning of the donor's name.

There are a few inscriptions relating to the sages mentioned in some of the temple inscriptions which are to be found incised on the balipīthas, mounted on the brick altar at Arunagiri-mēḍu, supposed to be the samādhi of the sages that were connected with the temple¹. These inscriptions are given below.

22. In Grantha, on the base of a small balipītha, north-west of the central samādhi on the altar:—

First side—Svasti Chandrakīrtti.

Third side—vīryya-Vāmana.

Second side—muni-śiṣhyoyam² Ananta.

Fourth side—munīśvarasya ḥ.

"This (samādhi) is of (belongs to) the lord of sages, Ananta-Vīryya-Vāmana, the disciple of the sage Chandrakīrtti.

23. In Grantha, on the petals of a lotus-shaped balipītha, placed to the south-east of the central pedestal. It reads thus—

First side—"Śrī Pushpa

Second side—sena Vā

Third side—mana munih"

¹ See above, pp. 39-40.

² Should be corrected as iśkyarya.

"The sage Śrī Pushpasena Vāmana."

This pedestal is evidently intended as a samādhi stone of Pushpasena.

24. In Grantha, on the base of the central balipīṭha. It runs as follows:—

I side—

1st line—Śrī Mallishēṇa-padapaṅkaja

2nd line—chañcharikas-Śrī-Pushpasena-muni-Va

3rd line—mana-Sūrimukhyah | Malam (dya tsa va) duḥkhajaj

II side—

shāñjanāṇḍam Sūryyendutārakamaṇḍa

III side—

ra sukha (ya) bhūyat ||

"May the sage, Śrī Pushpasena, the foremost among the learned, the bee that hovers over the lotus-feet of Śrī Mallishēṇa, bring prosperity to the afflicted persons . . . as long as there are the sun, the moon and the stars."

25. In Tamil, on a slab in the fields to the east of the temple, within a furlong's distance. The slab bears also the carving of a triple parasol (mukkoḍai)—

1. Paḷla.	4. kuḷi.	7. lukku.
2. paḷḷa.	5. 800.	8. saṇuva.
3. dai.	6. kōyi.	9. māniyam.

A sarvamānya gift to the temple of 800 kuḷis of land in Pallapaḷḷadai (probably name of the locality). This inscription confirms one of the details of the gift recorded in inscription No. 19.

PAINTINGS.¹

According to the custom prevailing among the Jains "to carve ceilings with the principal incidents in the life of the Jina, to whom the main shrine or a corridor cell is ¹ Examples of South Indian Jaina painting are many, dating from early times such as seventh century A.D., down to modern times. The most important as well as the most interesting from the artistic standpoint are the fresco-paintings on the ceiling of the Jaina cave at Sittanavāṭal, dating from the seventh century A.D., and assigned to the Pallava Mahendravarman I. As proved by me in my paper "The Royal Artist, Mahendravarman I" read at the First Bombay Historical Congress, 1931, the subject of the Sittanavāṭal ceiling paintings is the samavasaraṇa or heavenly structure (see below, pp. 104-115), of which what remains to-day "is the Āśatikā-śāṭam or the tank-region with the faithful (śākyas) pleasing themselves by gathering lotus flowers, while animals such as elephants and bulls and birds and fishes are frolicking about pleasing themselves as best as they can." It has been proved that these paintings compare well with the Ajanta ones in the matter of draughtsmanship (Ind. Ant., Vol. LI, pp. 45-7).

Next in time and importance come the paintings at Tirumalai, North Arcot district, ascribed on the evidence of inscriptions to the eleventh century (Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, p. 229; Smith, History of Fine Art in India and Ceylon, p. 344). They are on walls and ceilings there, and traces of still older paintings covered up by the existing works are also found. Besides several designs, purely conventional and spiritless, there is a representation of the samavasaraṇa structure here also in the form of the usual wheel about which Smith says that it "possesses little merit as a work of art and is interesting rather as a proof of decadence than for its own sake" while its "contrast with the Ajanta designs is worth noting" (History of Fine Art in India and Ceylon, p. 344).

Among later examples, of which there are many, almost every Jaina temple of importance in the south having paintings on its walls and ceilings, mention may be made of those in the Jaina maṭha at Śrāvana Belgola illustrating scenes from the lives of certain Tīrthaṅkaras, as do the Tiruparuttikulam ones, and of Jaina kings (Coomaraswamy, History of Indian and Indonesian Art, p. 119; Narasimhachar, Inscriptions at Śrāvana Belgola (Ep. Car. II, pl. xlviii).

dedicated,"¹ the ceiling of the mukha-maṇḍapa and the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa in the Trailokyanātha or Vardhamāna temple bears a series of coloured paintings which, as has already been remarked, illustrate the life-stories of three out of the twenty-four Jaina Tīrthaṅkaras.²

Though art-critics have much to say against this practice of "colour washing" from the point of art, as conventionalism plays a great part in such paintings, it has nevertheless to be welcomed as it gives an easy means of reading the life-stories of the gods of the Jaina pantheon, without being forced to listen to narratives from the people who may know them or to look into the Jaina purāṇas, the majority of which are unfortunately still in manuscript form. This practice of colour washing and painting, which Mrs. Stevenson calls "the modern craze",³ has evidently taken the place of the craze for stone carvings which was customary from the early centuries, beginning perhaps with the Pallava king Mahendravarman I, and perhaps points to a decadence in sculpturing and architecture. Viewed from the point of usefulness, these paintings should certainly be welcomed and this practice has spread to Hindu temples also. Even a non-Jaina is so impressed with the various incidents illustrated in these that he seldom forgets them or fails to identify them again. They form as it were visualized books of Jaina mythology and iconography presenting their details in an easy and interesting manner. The idea underlying this practice, as explained to me by one of the painters at Trichinopoly who was then working in the Māṭṛbhūteśvara temple, is economy. This work is cheaper than that of stone carving, which is much more laborious. And the paintings, I was given to understand, were to be renewed if the colours faded. Failure to renew them has resulted in the fading and disappearance of many at Tiruparuttikunram which has encouraged us to place them on record before they get completely lost.

The paintings are arranged in convenient groups, two running from north to south and two from east to west on the ceiling of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, and one group running from north to south on the ceiling of the mukha-maṇḍapa. They are contained in rows of panels, one after another, with a narrow band between every two rows for labels to explain the incidents. Those rows which contain the life-stories of Rishabhadeva, the first Tīrthaṅkara, and Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara, and his cousin Kṛishṇa have the explanatory labels filled in below; but the letters in most of them are so completely lost that the remaining letters convey no sense. Fortunately, however, a manuscript entitled "Śrī Purāṇa" in Tamil-Grantha, now lying in the Madras Government Oriental Manuscripts Library¹ deals in a very elaborate manner with the lives of the 63 Śalākā-purushas (Trishashṭi-śalākā-purushas), among whom are included the 24 Tīrthaṅkaras, and has helped me a great deal to understand the scenes and the labels below them. The remaining rows illustrate the life of Vardhamāna or Mahāvīra, the twenty-fourth and the last Tīrthaṅkara; the bands below them have curiously enough no writing and no explanatory labels. The same Purāṇa and another Purāṇa entitled "Vardhamāna Purāṇa,"² to which my attention was kindly drawn by Mr. Mallinath, the editor of the Madras Jaina Gazette, made my task of identifying the scenes easy. In describing the paintings those that illustrate the life of Rishabhadeva will be taken first, then those of Vardhamāna, as they follow Rishabhadeva's on the ceiling of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, and lastly those of Neminātha and his cousin Kṛishṇa. Rishabhadeva's and Vardhamāna's run from north to south, and Neminātha's and Kṛishṇa's from east to west.

¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, p. 161.

² Ādinātha (Rishabhadeva), the first Tīrthaṅkara, Śāntinātha, the sixteenth Tīrthaṅkara, Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara, Pārśvanātha, the twenty-third Tīrthaṅkara, and Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tīrthaṅkara are regarded as the principal Jinās. They are more frequently mentioned than the others, and their statues are more numerous. See Ind. Ant., Vol. II, pp. 139-140.

³ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 284.—Mrs. Stevenson, while speaking of the famous Jaina temple at Palitana condemns modern Jaina architecture and this practice of colour painting which she calls "the modern craze for crude colour washing and paintings" which is "a terrible vulgarity that often disfigures modern Jaina temples and is seen at its worst in places like the temple city of Palitana, where the older buildings throw the modern craze for crude colour washing and paintings into terrible relief."

Without understanding the meaning of the term Tīrthaṅkara it is impossible to follow the Jaina thought contained in these paintings, much less their iconography. The term Tīrthaṅkara seems to have originally meant the Being that has found a "ford" (tīrtha) through this world (samsāra), i.e., one who has "made the passage" across the ocean of worldly illusion (samsāra) and has reached that "further shore where he is, and will for ever be, free from action and desire."³ But many Jainas are agreed in giving a different explanation to the term. They say that a Tīrthaṅkara is one who forms or "is the founder (with a very large F) of the four orders (tīrthas) that collectively constitute the Communion or Saṅgha."⁴

I

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHADEVA OR TRAILOKYANĀTHA.

From Vol. I of the Śrī Purāṇa we learn that this teacher passed through a succession of ten preliminary births:—1. Jayavarman. 2. Mahābala. 3. Lalitāṅga. 4. Vajrajaṅgha.

¹ Oriental Manuscripts Library, Descriptive Catalogue, R. No. 869.

² A manuscript copy of this is preserved in the Adyar Library, Madras.

³ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, pp. XV and 241.

⁴ A main tenet of Jainism is that man's personality is dual, material and spiritual and that the aim of man should be to subjugate by his superior spiritual nature the material nature in him. If matter is brought under control the spirit becomes free and perfect. And it is such a spirit that is called Jina (the conqueror) or Tīrthaṅkara. These free souls are of two kinds, the Siddhas who are again subdivided into Tīrthaṅkara-siddhas or those who preached the dharma in their embodied condition, and Sāmānya-siddhas who did not preach or propound the truth, and the Arhats or those that had attained kevalajñāna but have not discarded the kārmāṇa body or the last vestments of human body. The state of the latter corresponds to that of the firmamukha of the Brahmanical philosophy. Besides these there are sages or human souls that differ from other men in that they move in a higher spiritual condition. They are called munis or sādhus. Three classes of them are to be seen:—(1) Āchāryas or heads of groups of saints; (2) Upādhyāyas or teaching saints; (3) Sādhus or all other ascetics that are endowed with 28 qualities. The above five classes of souls are called pañcāparameshthīs or the five supreme or important ones. To these five the Jainas offer their prayers many times every day in the following manner:—

"Namo arahantāya, namo siddhāya, namo āyariyāya, namo upādhyāyāya, namo laye sabba-sāhāya"

"Salutations to the arhat, to the siddha, to the āchārya, to the upādhyāya, to all the sādhus in the world."

For details on this subject see Indramandī, Pañcāparameshthi-pūjā.

For division of the souls in Jainism see Appendix III, pp. 185-187.

5. A king whose name is not given. 6. Śrīdhara. 7. Suvidhi. 8. Achyutendra. 9. Vajranābhi, and 10. an Ahamindra-deva or god. At his eleventh birth he was born as Rishabhadeva and entered the womb of Marudevi, the wife of Nābhi Mahārāja, the fourteenth Manu, in the form of a bull. No sooner was Marudevi delivered of the child than Saudharmendra, the king of the devas,¹ followed by his wife, Śachi or Indrāṇī and the gods came to the king's palace to pay their obeisance to the divine child. The gods then placed him on the back of Airāvata, the white elephant of Saudharmendra, and proceeded to the celestial mount, Mahā-Meru, where, in a richly decorated pavilion he sat crosslegged while the gods poured celestial waters over him. Every Tirthankara, as soon as he is born, is bathed with the celestial waters in this manner, the ceremony being known as Janmābhisheka.² The child was then brought back to the city of Ayodhyā, where he was born, and was handed over to Marudevi and Nābhi, to whom the greatness of the child was explained. He was named Rishabhadeva and grew into a youth, when he married two women, Yaśasvati and Sunandā. The former bore him a daughter named Brāhmī and 100 sons beginning with Bharata, who later on founded the Ikshvāku lineage of kings.³ The latter bore him a son and a daughter. Being requested by his father to put on the crown and rule the three worlds he did so, and ruled in such a way as to deserve the title of "Trailokyānātha" which his father conferred on him at the time of his coronation. While thus ruling he was reminded of his divine mission by the Laukātika-devas.⁴ He then realized that he should no longer be attached to worldly illusion (samsāra) and repaired to the forest, where seated under trees he practised for years asceticism and meditation, periodically coming to the cities to partake of food.

Many kings who wanted to imitate him in his austere course and repaired with him to the forests soon returned as they were still worldly and as such were unable to get over hunger and thirst. After years of strenuous penance (tapaścharaṇa) he became a Kevalī or one who had obtained omniscience.⁵ The gods then raised the samavasaraṇa or heavenly pavilion,⁶ where the twelve conferences comprising the whole creation met to hear eternal wisdom (dharma) from him. When a fortnight remained in his life the samavasaraṇa dispersed and he went about preaching truth till the day of deliverance approached when he took to self-contemplation (śūkla-dhyāna), i.e., when the soul reached every part of the universe and is yet contained within the body, and adopting its last form called vyuprasta kriyānivṛtti which signifies total cessation of all organic activities, he passed into nirvāṇa in the space of time required to articulate the vowels a, i, u, r, l.

¹ See below, p. 231.

² See below, pp. 82-84, 121, 122 and 130.

³ See below, pp. 79, 80, 85, 89 and 92.

⁴ See below, p. 94.

⁵ Right knowledge (jñāna) is of five kinds:—1. Mati or sensitive knowledge which means knowledge of the self and the non-self by means of the senses and the mind, 2. Śruta, scriptural knowledge which is derived from the reading or preaching of scriptures, or through an object known by sensitive knowledge, 3. Avadhi, visual knowledge or direct knowledge of matter in various degrees with reference to substance or subject-matter (dṛavya), space (kāśa), time (kāla), and quality of the object known (śāśva), 4. Manah-paryaya, mental knowledge which is direct knowledge of another's mental activity about matter, 5. Kevala, or perfect knowledge or omniscience which is knowledge of all things in all their aspects and at all times.

⁶ For detailed description see below, pp. 104-115 and 130-132.

and entered the abode of gods who have attained nirvāṇa at the top of the universe. It is said that his body disappeared like burnt camphor, only some hairs and nails remaining. The nirvāṇa is the fifth kalyāṇa or auspicious event in the life of every Tirthāṅkara and the devas celebrate it. Indra (Saudharmendra) collected the nails and hairs of the Tirthāṅkara and creating a mock-body of Rishabhadeva cremated it and with its ashes besmeared his body, the devas following him.

Painting No. 1 (pl. viii).—This illustrates the first birth of Rishabhadeva, vis., that of Jayavarman. The story relating to the scenes here painted may be summarized as follows:—Jayavarman was the eldest son of King Śrīsheṇa of Indrapurī and his queen Sundarī and had a younger brother Śrīvarman by name, whom his father favoured much, proclaiming him as the heir-apparent. Any other prince thus slighted would have resented this unkindly act—but not so Jayavarman. Far from coveting the throne for himself he was filled with the spirit of renunciation, that spirit of "world-flight (vairāgya)" that propelled him to seek refuge at the feet of a saint called Svayamprabha, who duly admitted him into the order of saints and taught him to observe twelve kinds of austerities, both internal and external. Jayavarman was earning much merit by such observances and nearly became a saint himself, when, one day, he heard an uproar in the sky as of people moving about and, looking up saw a Vidyadhara, Maṭṭdhara¹ by name, crossing the sky with his retinue and with all pomp. Suddenly his love for worldly pleasures and pomp revived and he found himself, in the midst of his penance, envying the position of the Vidyadhara and wishing to become one like him. Thus contemplating he stood near an ant-hill, when out came a cobra and bit him in the leg so that he died of snake-poison.

The details shown in the painting are as follows:—

1-a. ஜம்பு-தீவு-பாரசீக-மண்டி-நாடு-விய-வந்த-பாரசீக-மன்னர்

ஸ்ரீ-சென-மகாராஜா . . . சிவன் . . . |

Jambū-dvīpā-para-Vidēha-Gandhīlā-vishaya-Sīṃhapurādhipati Śrī-shēṇa-mahārāja . . . yivar . . . |

"Śrīsheṇa-mahārāja, ruler of Sīṃhapura situate in the country of Gandhīlā, in the Western part of Vidēha, a division of Jambū-island (Jambū-dvīpa) the continent in which we live² . . . he . . . "

As indicated by the label King Śrīsheṇa is shown sitting with his wife Sundarī, while an attendant is fanning the party gently in front. The king who has a kirita on his head is smelling a flower held in his left hand.

1-b. shows Śrīvarman sitting in court. Evidently he has been proclaimed by his father as the heir-apparent. The label has completely disappeared, but the identification is obvious.

1-c. சிவன் கதிஷ்ணுதிய ஸ்ரீ-சென-மகாராஜாவுக்கு விகா யுவராஜ[ஐயம்*] கொடுப்பது . . . வை
நாமஜித்தரால் - ஸ்ரீயம் உபயோகப்படுத்தித் தந்த சிவன்.

¹ See below, pp. 67, fn. 2, 178.

² For details of Jaina Cosmology, see Appendix II, pp. 175-179.

Yivar-kanishṭhanāgiya Śrī-Varmmāvinukku piṭa yuvarājyaṁ) koḍuppadu . . .
vairāgyattal-Svayamprabu-pārvattil dikshittadu yivaḍam*

"The father making his (Jayavarman's) younger brother Śrīvarman the heir-apparent (yuvarāja). Here is he (Jayavarman) disgusted with worldly life, getting initiated (into the life of an ascetic) by Svayamprabu (Svayamprabha)."

Jayavarman is shown sitting naked on the left before Svayamprabha, also naked, with his hands placed together in añjali. He has placed his crown and ornaments by his side. Svayamprabha who is seated on an elevated altar under a tree has his right hand in the upadeśa or teaching position and is addressing the supplicating Jayavarman, who is seated also under a tree on an altar lower in level than that of his guru Svayamprabha.

I-d. யிவர டா(ஸ)புரிசுவரீபத்தில திராசிப்ப . . . நீபத்தில் வகட்குஞ்ஞயினர்.

Yivar paṭṭa)darika-samipattil nidānippa . . . mīpattil sarpa-dashṭaṇḍiyinar.

"While contemplating near the badari tree (zizyphus jujuba) . . . he was bitten by a cobra."

Jayavarman is shown naked, standing under a tree, which according to the label is a badari tree, near an ant-hill, from out of which the cobra rises with outspread hood.

Painting No. 2 (pl. viii).—This illustrates the next birth of the Tirthaṅkara, viz., the life of the Vidyadhara king Mahābala. Jayavarman died of snake-bite as already related, and was born as the son of a Vidyadhara king, Atibala, the king of Alakāpuri (the city of Kubera according to Hindu mythology) and of his wife Manoharā. He became in course of time the Vidyadhara king and was called Mahābala.¹ He had four ministers who favoured four different creeds. They were Mahāmāti, who was a materialist, Sambhinnamāti, who held that things were only ideas, and as such unreal, Śatamāti who believed in the theory of voidness and Svayambuddha, whose religion was Jainism. Chief among these was Svayambuddha who viewed the king's interests as his own and was therefore much respected and loved by the king. As the king was silent on the question of his faith, Svayambuddha was anxious to ascertain the king's thoughts on the subject and to make him a convert to Jainism, if he were not one already.

Fortunately he had opportunities to meet and converse with two clairvoyant sages (chārāṇa-parama-rishis) called Ādityagati and Ariṇjaya, from whom he heard the previous existence of his king and also learnt that after ten births (bhavas) he was to be born as the illustrious Rishabhadeva, the first Tirthaṅkara. And in order to enable Svayambuddha inspire confidence in the mind of his king and to claim thereby special attention of the king to his own doctrine in preference to those of his colleagues, the sages narrated to him two dreams that the king had during the night and their significance, commissioning him to explain them to the king when he met him. In the first dream the king found himself thrown in deep mud by his other three ministers, from out of which Svayāmbuddha extricated him. In the second he saw a burning flame (agnijvalā) which gradually diminished till it was extinguished. Svayāmbuddha was overjoyed and the next day did accordingly and explained to the king the significance of the two dreams. The sudden diminishing of the flame of fire, he said, meant that the king would live only for a short period, say for a month more, while the first dream proved in an allegorical manner the superiority of the Jaina faith to all other faiths. On hearing this the king realized that worldly existence and pleasures were transitory and that as his days were numbered, he had to get some spiritual elevation of his soul. Entrusting the kingdom to the care of his son, he repaired with Svayāmbuddha, who had now become his spiritual counsellor, to a sacred mountainous region where there was a temple for the Jina (Siddha-kūtaśaityālaya),¹ and subjecting himself to eight kinds of austerities² worshipped the Jina (Jina-pūjā) and prepared himself for *sallekhana*³, the end that is sought by all the truly great, till death snatched him away on the appointed day for a better birth and a better world. And in his next birth he was a god called Lalitāṅga.

¹ Though the fruit of asceticism usually is birth in the heavens, Jayavarman's subsequent birth as a Vidyadhara was as a direct result of his ambition to become one, when he happened to see the Vidyadhara Mahābala going in the sky with his retinue and coveted his position.

2-a. கல்வகம்விட்டு ஜம்புவந்தியாபரவிசேதன மஸ்திராவிஷய விஜயாதிவஜ்ஜெதா
கூரஸெருணி கலகாபரநாயகி லேசஸமுகன்டனும் விஜயாபரநாஜாகாமி
ஸா || உ ||

Tat-bhavam vittu Jambū-dvīpa-para-Videha-Gandhīlā-vishaya-Vijayārtha-parvatōttaraśreṇi-Ālakāpurādhipati Mahābalan-nyūm Vidyādhara-rāja-vāyinaṁ || உ ||

"After leaving that bhava (that of Jayavarman) he was born as a Vidyādhara king by name Mahābala, who ruled over the city of Ālakāpura situated to the north of Mount Vijayārtha, in the territory or country of Gandhīlā, in the western part of Videha, a division of Jambū-dvīpa."

Mahābala is shown sitting with his wife by his side and listening to his minister Svayāmbuddha seated before him on the right. An attendant-woman on the extreme left is gently fanning the party from behind. Svayāmbuddha has got his right hand raised in an attitude of addressing or teaching, more probably the former. He has a turban on his head of the type that chettis of South India use even to-day on ceremonial occasions like wedding, etc. There are writings, done in black, in the middle of the painting itself behind Svayāmbuddha, which run as follows:—

ஸ்வயம்புத்த பரிசாரண வாரிசேஷிகளிடத்தில் [3*] தராவதுக்கு ஆயத்த
சேவசேகரமென்றதிக்கு உவகெடுக்குறது.

Svayāmbuddhan Śrī-Chāraṇa-parameshtigaḷiḍattil [Ma] hābalannukku āyashyan māsāmātramenggarindu upadēśikkuradū.*

"Svayāmbuddha narrating to Mahābala what he had learnt from the Chāraṇa-parama sages, vīs., that the king was destined to live for a month more."

¹ See Appendix II, p. 177.

² See below, p. 69.

³ A process of death by slow starvation whereby liberation of the spirit from the body is sought for the sake of merit (dharma).

He is accordingly shown in the painting as explaining to the king what he had heard and advising him to strive for spiritual elevation and the like.

2-b. தீமகாஸனது வெணநாமமுமடைந்து ஸ்வயம்புத்திரயோடு வியூகந் [4*]
வெணசூராயத்திவ் ஐந்தாழிக யிவடம்.

Mahābalan vairāgyam-aḍaiṇdu Svayambuddha-maṇtriyoḍu Siddhakūṭa¹]chaitya-layattil āshṭāṇhika yivadam.

"Mahābala got the spirit of renunciation and went with his minister Svayambuddha to the temple of the Jina situated on the peak called Siddhakūṭa, where he worshipped the Jina and observed "āshṭāṇhika-vrata" or eight kinds of austerities."

The eight austerities (vratas) are holy meditation, adoration of the Great Tīrthaṅkaras, of the Liberated Ones, of Saints, of Preceptors, and of ordinary ascetics or Sādhus (collectively termed pañcha-parameshṭhi), recitation of the great obeisance mantra, and the cultivation of the spirit of detachment from the physical body.²

The temple with the Jina seated in the centre is the chaitya-ālaya in Siddhakūṭa and the two men in a worshipping attitude standing on the right of it are the king and his minister. The king wears a crown and his minister a close-fitting cap or turban. Another figure on the extreme right is sitting and is worshipping the Jina likewise. This probably represents the king divested of his kingly attire, who is, therefore, shown here twice, in his later stages, when it is said, he was observing the eight vratas referred to.

Painting No. 3 (pl. viii).—This illustrates two lives, the life of Lalitāṅga and the life of Vajrajaṅga.

3-a. தீமகாஸனது கல்மீவம் விட்டு னாம்பராதகழ்த்து றஜிசாமவென்னும் வெவமுயினர் பிவர ஶ்ரீஸ்வயம்புத்திரே யிவடம்.

Mahābalan tat-bhavam vittu Iṣānakalpattu Lalitāṅgan-eyyum Devaḥ-āyinaṛ ivar strī Svayamprabhai yivadam.

"Mahābala left that birth and became in one of the sixteen kalpas or heavens called Iṣāna-kalpa a deva called Lalitāṅga. His wife Svayamprabhā is [shown] here."

Both the deva and his wife, who wear crowns on their heads, are shown seated and in utter ease as required of them. The devas know nothing of labour or sweating for livelihood; fun and frolic with occasional mental troubles like jealousy at the greater brilliance and beauty of another deva characterize their lives. Though women are not admitted in the higher heavens like Sarvārthasiddhi ³, etc., they find a place in the lower ones, of which Iṣāna-kalpa is one. They do not conceive like mortals but form platonic and companionate marriages and spend their time in ease and happiness. Thus Lalitāṅga came to have 4,000 companionate wives; but his favourite was Svayamprabhā who is shown in the painting. The deva-body being a compound and consequently not eternal, there was a termination of the deva-life of Lalitāṅga who came next to be born as Vajrajaṅga, the son of a mortal. His wife followed him six months later.

¹ Cf. C. R. Jain, Śiṣhābhāṣya, p. 12.

² See Appendix II, p. 183.

³ See Appendix II, p. 184.

3-b. Illustrates the life of Vajrajaṅgha.

ஜம்பூத்ரிப பஞ்சவீதிபுரம் பஞ்சமாவதி விஷய உத்தரபுரத்தில் வஜ்ஜ
ஜம்பூதேவநாஜாவாசிஞர். சிவர்க்கு ஸ்வயம்புரம் ஸ்ரீமதியென்னும் ஸ்ரீயாமி
ஞன்.

Jambū-dvīpa-pūrva-Videha-Pushkalāvati-vishaya-Utpalakhetapurattil Vajrajaṅgha-mahārāja-vāyinaḥ. Yivarkku Svayamprabhāi Śrīmatī yēṇṇam strī-yāyinaḥ.

"He (Lalitāṅga) was born as Vajrajaṅgha, who became the king of the city of Utpalakheṭa-pura, in the country of Pushkalāvati, in the Eastern Videha of Jambū-dvīpa. Svayamprabhā (was also reborn and) became his (Vajrajaṅgha's) wife under the name of Śrīmatī."

Both the king and his wife Śrīmatī are shown sitting on a common seat, the latter behind the former.

3-c. வஜ்ஜஜம்பூதேவநாஜனும் ஸ்ரீமதியும் உத்தரபுரம் ஸ்ரீமதியென்னும் ஸ்ரீயாமி
ஞன் தாபதி ஸ்ரீமதியென்னும் தங்கன் வஜ்ஜஜம்பூதேவநாஜனும் கெழ்க்குறது.

Vajrajaṅgha-mahārājāṇum Śrīmatiyum Damavara-chāraṇaridattil mantripurohitasenāpati-śreṣṭhigaḷoḍu taṅgaḷ pūrvabhavaṅgaḷaik-keḷḷkkuṇadu.

"King Vajrajaṅgha and his wife Śrīmatī hearing from the chāraṇa sage, Damavara, their previous existences along with their minister, priest, general and merchant or treasurer."

The story relating to this scene is as follows:—Vajrajaṅgha was invited by his mother-in-law (the mother of Śrīmatī) to come to the rescue of her son, Puṇḍarika, into whose weak hands the kingdom was entrusted by his father. He started for the city of his brother-in-law with his wife, accompanied by a big army.

On his way, he met two chāraṇa sages called Damavara and Sagarasena, whom, after worshipping, he requested to narrate his previous births. Damavara stated that in the first birth he was Jayavarman, in the second Mahabala, in the third Lalitāṅga, and in the fourth Vajrajaṅgha. On being asked about Śrīmatī's previous births, the sage said that in her first birth she was called Dhanaśrī, in the second Nirpamika, in the third Svayamprabhā and in the fourth Śrīmatī. Similarly the king requested the sage to narrate the previous existences of his minister, preceptor (purohita), general, and merchant or banker (śreṣṭhi) which the sage did accordingly. Meanwhile, while these births were being narrated, four beasts, a tiger, a boar, a monkey and a mongoose were standing very near the party, without fear for men and were also listening to what the sages were narrating. This made the king curious to know about them also and the sages were this time requested to narrate what they knew about those animals and why they were standing so near them fearlessly and listening to them. The sages narrated their previous births also:—

The mongoose was in its previous birth a merchant called Lolupa who was selling food. He was collecting bricks (iṣṭakas) in the hope of finding gold in them, as the first brick he collected contained gold within. He got these bricks from the king's men in exchange for food. Within a short period he had collected almost all the bricks available, that there was nothing left when the king of the land required bricks for building a temple for the Jina. It so happened that Lolupa had to go to another city to see his daughter. While departing he gave strict instructions to his son to collect more bricks. But the son failed to do so and the father, on returning, kicked him on his head. The king learnt this as also the reason why he was kicked. He sent for Lolupa and inflicted on him torturous punishment (chitra-danḍa) as a result of which he died, and in his next birth was born as a mongoose.

The tiger was in its previous birth a merchant called Ugrasena who was leading a loose and questionable life. Besides he was in the habit of removing things and provisions from the royal household unauthorized. One day he was caught red-handed and was severely punished by the king. After death, which soon overtook him, he was born as a tiger.

The boar was in its previous birth a vicious youth called Harivāhana. He was leading so bad and cursed a life that all his neighbours avoided his sight. His father remonstrated with him but in vain. One day Harivāhana turned away in fury from his father when he was chastising him for his evil ways and was advising him, and in a mood of frenzy knocked his head against a rock, as a result of which he died, and was born as a boar.

The monkey was in its previous birth a merchant called Nāgadatta who was leading a bad and miserly life. Unable to deceive his mother who wanted to take precious gems (ratnas) from his father's shop for his sister on the occasion of her marriage, and unable to prevent her from taking them nor bear the sight of so many gems going away for nothing, he died of great sufferings of heart and was born as a monkey.

The sages concluded that these beasts remembered their past births and were therefore listening to the exposition of Dharma by them, without fear for mortals.

The king and queen went to the kingdom of Puṇḍarikā and after setting things right there returned home. Soon after, both died of suffocation due to smoke penetrating into the room where they slept, and after death were again born in the world.

In the painting the king and queen can be made out sitting with hands folded in worship, listening with devout attention to what two sages on the right are narrating. Though the label speaks of only one chārāṇa sage, Damavara, the other sage Śāgarasena is also shown sitting behind Damavara and similarly engaged. The animals referred to, viz., boar, monkey, tiger and mongoose are to be seen below the party, the monkey and the tiger below the sages and the boar and the mongoose below the king and queen.

Painting No. 4 (pl. viii).—Illustrates the next and the fifth birth.

. . உத்தரீ ஹோமஸ-குழியில் உபநிசத்தாநி அரணவாரவீணிகளிடத்தில் ஸரீரீ-கங்
கெழ்க்குறது சிவடம் ||

கீரி பன்மீ குங்குபுலி சிந்தனது ரீமங்கனம் உரதாஸுமொடி உரணுத்தினல்
அ(ங்)கெ சூயு-காசினர் சிவடம்.

. . . Uttamabhoga-bhūmiyil dāmpatigaḷāgi chāraṇa-parameshṭigaḷidattil dharmman-keḷkkuraḍu yivadam.||

Kīri paṇṇi kuraṅgu pūli yinda ṇālu mṛigaṅgaḷum dānānumōda-puṇyattiṅāl a(i)ge Ārya-rāgiṅār yivadam.

"The king and queen are born in Uttama-bhoga-bhūmi and are listening to an exposition of dharma from two chāraṇa sages. Those beings that were tiger, monkey, boar, and mongoose in their previous births are now Āryas as a result of listening while they were beasts to an exposition of dharma."

After death Vajrajaṅgha and Śrīmati were born as twins in the bhoga-bhūmi known as Uttarakuru¹. Their names now are not given in the Śrī Purāṇa. The term bhoga-bhūmi is a compound of bhoga (enjoyment) and bhūmi (land) and denotes the region where, like in the heavens, the residents have not to labour for their livelihood. The regions where men have to work for their livelihood are called karma-bhūmis or work-lands. The bhoga-bhūmis come after the heavens, and are far superior to our earth in respect of pleasures that the people can enjoy. Birth in the bhoga-bhūmi is in the manner of the flesh in so far as a conception does take place there. But the full development of adolescence is attained within a period of 49 days from the day of birth. But the parents never live to behold the faces of their progeny for they die the same instant that the children are born, the mother dying of a sneeze and the father of a yawn. The children are always born as twins—a male and a female together. When they grow up they become husband and wife. They do not sleep, do not perspire and excrements are not formed in their bodies. Their eyes never wink and are always open. They eat once in three days, the quantity taken being never more than the weight of a plum. The female conceives but once, and that only at the end of her life. The *kalpaka-trees*² satisfy their requirements and consequently the ideas of property or appropriation never arise in these regions. All the three principal causes of crime—woman, land and gold—are wanting there. The residents of the bhoga-bhūmis are intelligent and virtuous; they are proficient in the fine arts, singing, dancing and other accomplishments. After death they are reborn in the heavens.

Vajrajaṅgha and his wife who were now born as twins in the bhoga-bhūmi grew up in seven weeks' time, became husband and wife and enjoyed long and pleasant life till, after the lapse of a long period, their souls departed from the material bhoga-bhūmi bodies and became embodied in the ethereal vestments of the heavenly regions once more.

The four animals too were born in the bhoga-bhūmi.

One day they met two chāraṇa sages from whom they heard an exposition of the truth (dharma) and the best system of thought (sāṃyaka-darśana). The four beasts, tiger, monkey, boar and mongoose which listened to the chāraṇa sages in their previous births in company with Vajrajaṅgha were born as Āryas, the highest among men and are shown in the painting on the right as again listening to the chārāṇa sages while the twins are also shown as listening to them from the left.

¹ See below, pp. 177-178.

² See below, p. 78.

Painting No. 5 (pl. ix).—Illustrates two lives, the life of Śrīdhara and the life of Suvidhi, the sixth and the seventh births.

5-a. . . . ன்னும் டெவனாயினார் யிவடம் ||

. . . . ṇṇam Devaṇḍyīṇār yivadam ||

"Here . . . became a Deva named . . . "

The painting though much obliterated together with its label retains sufficient detail to enable us to distinguish a pair of figures and in the label the word "Deva". This word makes it clear that the persons represented in the painting should be Śrīdhara, a deva and his wife for, according to the Śrī Purāṇa, the bhoga-bhūmija was born after death as a deva called Śrīdhara.

5-b. ததுவரம் விட்டு ஜம்பு-தீப-பூ-பூ-தல் வதுவிஷய வஸுவரீகமரத்தில்
வஸுவியி யென்னும் ராஜாவாயினார். யிவ / ஸ்ரீ ஸதோமனெடு யிவடம் உ ||

Tat-bhavam viṭṭu Jambū-dvīpa-pūva-Videha-Vatsa-vishaya-Susīmā-nagarattil
Suvidhi yeṇṇum rāja-vāyīṇār. Yivar strī Manōramai yivadam உ ||

"Leaving that birth (Śrīdhara's) he was born as Suvidhi, king of the city of Susīmā in the territory of Vatsā, in the Eastern Videha of Jambū-dvīpa. His (Suvidhi's) wife, Manoramā, is (shown) here."

The king and queen are shown sitting like similar pairs occurring in the other rows.

5-c. யிவர் வஸுவரனெவராதுத்தால் ஸதோமனெடு யிவடம் உ ||

Yivar saṁsāra-vairāgyattal munivarar-iḍattil dharmmaṁ-kēṭṭu dikshikkuraḍu yivadam உ.

"Here he (Suvidhi), being disgusted with worldly life, goes to a great sage from whom he learns dharma and performs dikshā."

According to the Śrī Purāṇa, the king was tired of worldly life, which he learnt was transitory and went to a great sage from whom he heard an exposition of dharma. He is shown in the painting twice, first on the left as departing evidently to a forest followed by an attendant and secondly as sitting under a tree with hands placed together in worship in front of a naked sage also sitting under a tree who has got his right hand in a teaching attitude.

Painting No. 6 (pl. ix).—Illustrates the two next lives, the life of Achyutendra, a deva, and the life of a monarch (chakravartī) called Vajranābhi.

6-a. Illustrates the life of Achyutendra.

. . . . டு வதுபூககஜ . . . னார் யிவடம் உ ||

. . . . ḍu Achyutakulpa . . . ṇār yivadam உ ||

Not only has the painting been almost completely rubbed out but also the label below. But the few letters that remain speak of Achyuta-kalpa, one of the 16 heavens, in the light of which we can identify the scene as one showing the Achyutendra, the next birth of Suvidhi.

On the termination of earthly life, Suvidhi's soul appeared in the sixteenth heaven, the Achyuta-kalpa referred to; he became the lord (Indra) of this heaven and enjoyed the distinction of being the Achyutendra. He was invested with miraculous powers and enjoyed untold power and pomp. The four Āryas or princes who had been the lion, the pig, the monkey and the mongoose respectively in their earlier existences were also born in this heaven, as a result of the various austerities that they had practised and became friends of the Achyutendra, constituting as it were a single family.

In all probability, as in other paintings, the persons that are represented are the Achyutendra and his wife, if he had one¹.

6-b. Illustrates the life of Vajranābhi.

ஜம்பூத்ரிப வகுத்து விடுத்த வகுத்துவசீ விஷய வகுத்துவினை உமாத்தில்
வஜ்ரநாபியென்னும் வகுத்துவினாமினா|| நிவர்க்கு வஜ்ரநாக்கன் என்மர் உ

Jambūdvīpa - pūrva - Videha - Pushkalāvati - vishaya-Pundarikini-nagarattil Vajra-nābhi-yennum chakravartti yāyinār || Nivarkku vājra-nākkal enmar. உ

"He (Achyutendra) became a monarch (chakravartī) by name Vajranābhi in the city of Pundarikini, situated in the country of Pushkalāvati in the Eastern Videha of Jambūdvīpa . . . || He (Vajranābhi) had eight brothers."

Achyutendra died and was born again in the world, this time as a mortal. As a mortal he was the greatest among the mortals, for he became a mighty monarch under the name of Vajranābhi. He was blessed in his brothers who were eight in number. They were respectively called Subāhu, Mahābāhu, Pīthan, Mahāpīthan, Vijayan, Vaijāyantan, Jayantan and Aparājitan. The first four were in one of the previous births Vajrañgha's minister, general, priest and merchant respectively, while the latter four were the lion, pig, monkey and mongoose. In addition to his brothers there was a merchant-friend of his, Dhanadeva² by name, whom he looked upon as a pillar of support for himself. Aided by this merchant-friend of his and by his brothers, the king was ruling over an extensive kingdom and was hailed as a chakravartī or universal monarch. After a time all the ten, i.e., the king, his merchant-friend and his eight brothers got disgusted with worldly life and commenced observing penance (dīkshā) and the austerities prescribed. And Vajranābhi was enabled by his penance to leave embodied existence and enjoy the condition of a class of devas, called Ahamindrādēva³.

¹ The Sri Purāṇa is silent on this.

² His previous births in succession were: 1. Śrīmatt, 2. Deva. 3. Keśava, son of Suvidhi. 4. Pratindra in the sixteenth heaven.

³ See below, pp. 77-78.

In the painting Vajranābhi is sitting between two of his queens, one on either side. Two attendants stand outside, on the right, waiting to minister to his wants. As the life of Vajranābhi was considered important it is done elaborately in the paintings and five more rows (Nos. 7-11) are devoted to it. The next two (Nos. 7 and 8) show the king's eight brothers and his merchant-friend who, as has already been said, helped him to rule the land.

Painting No. 7 (pl. ix).—Shows a procession of men on palanquin and elephants which continues into the next row (No. 8) also.

7-a. . . . மெல்லியார் பல்லக்கு மெல் பொறது சிவடம் ||

. . . . Śreshtiyār pallakku mel poradu yivadam ||

" Śreshti (merchant) going in a palanquin."

A palanquin is carried by men, and from the label, we learn that the king's merchant-friend, Dhanadeva-Śreshti is carried in it. The letters in the label giving the name of the merchant have unfortunately been rubbed.

7-b. அபராஜித ஆ(யா)னை மெல் பொறது சிவடம் ||

Aparājitan ā(yā)ṇai mel poradu yivadam ||

"Here (is shown) Aparājitan going on an elephant."

The elephant is driven by a mahout, and Aparājita is seated within a howdah on its back.

7-c. வைஜயந்தும் ஜயந்தும் ஆ(யா)னை மெல் பொறது சிவடம் ||

Vaijayantanum Jayantanum ā(yā)ṇai mel poradu yivadam. ||

"Vaijayantan and Jayantan are here (shown as) going on an elephant."

A mahout is shown seated on the neck of the elephant as in the previous panel (7-b). The brothers, Vaijayanta and Jayanta are within the howdah.

Painting No. 8 (pl. ix).—Here is a continuation of the procession.

8-a. . . . ம் சேதாஸாதமையும் ரதத்தின் மெல் பொறது சிவடம் ||

. . . . m Mahābāhuṁ radattiṇ mel poradu yivadam ||

"[Subāhu and] Mahābāhu [are shown] here going in a chariot".

Two persons are seated in a chariot shaped like a double-pavilion and they are, as indicated by the label, Subāhu and Mahābāhu, two other brothers of the king. The chariot is driven by a charioteer, whose form can be made out in front of the brothers. A flag and parasol can be made out above and in front of the chariot. Apparently they were carried by attendants who are now rubbed out in the painting.

8-b. பிதா ஆ(யா)னை மெல் பொறது ||

Piṭhan ā(yā)ṇai-mel-p-poradu ||

"Piṭhan going on elephant."

10 A

An elephant is shown here as being driven by the mahout and as carrying a man who is seated within a howdah on its back and who, as indicated by the label, is Piṭhan, another brother of the king.

8-c. சேதராஸீரனும் விஜயனும் குதிரைமேல் பொறது யிவடம்.

Mahāpīṭhanum Vijayanum kudirai-mel poradu yivadam.

"Here [are shown] Mahāpīṭhan and Vijayan going on horses."

Two men are shown on horseback, one on a red horse and the other behind him on a black one. They are, as the label proves, the remaining brothers of king Vajranābhi, Mahāpīṭha and Vijaya. Three attendants are accompanying the party in a row, the one in front holding a festoon, the second in the middle holding a half-spread umbrella and the third who comes last of all holding a flag.

Painting No. 9 (pl. x)—

. . . ஸ்ராதாக்கொடும் டகடெ(வ) . . . கெழக்க . . .

. . . Bratakkalodum Dhanade(va) . . . kelkka . . .

" . . . going to hear . . . with brothers and Dhanade(va) . . . "

Being disgusted with worldly life and being painfully aware of the miseries attendant on it, Vajranābhi renounced everything and repaired to sage Vajrasena, accompanied by his eight brothers and his merchant-friend besides 16,000 kings in order to obtain at his hands dikṣhā or consecration after listening to an exposition of dharma by the said sage. The Śrī Purāṇa says that the sage was Vajrasena Tirthankara. It is not clear if Vajrasena is really the old father of Vajranābhi himself who renounced kingship, after entrusting the kingdom to Vajranābhi and who took to the life of an ascetic. According to C. R. Jain, Vajrasena Tirthankara was the father of Vajranābhi.¹

The king is sitting in a chariot drawn by horses. His brothers and merchant-friend precede him on horseback while some attendants go in front of him and some others follow him. Some of these attendants hold in their hands lances, the heads of which are done in white.

*Painting No. 10 (pl. x).—*This painting is rubbed out, especially its lower half, and nothing remains of its label, not even the border lines of the labels, nor even a few letters. Still the scene represented is obvious. It is just a continuation of the procession consisting of Vajranābhi, his brothers and merchant-friend that had started in painting No. 9 for dikṣhā. The members of the procession that formed the front are shown here. Such for instance are, from right to left, horsemen, one of whom blows a trumpet, men on elephant-back, one holding a flag and the other beating a drum, a horseman and two attendants with flag and festoon respectively. Surely the scene is intended to portray the paraphernalia that are always associated with royalty when it is moving.

Painting No. 11 (pl. x).—

II-a. . . . ரவ . . . த்தில் வஜ்ரநாபிவகுவதி— டகடெ(வ) . . . ஜாக்களுட
னும் . . . க்க . . . டும் திடுகெது கைக்கொண்டு கவலா . . . யிவடம் உ ||

¹ Śrī Purāṇa, p. 44.

the other heavens or to the earth as they are ever filled with "the innate delight of the soul." Sexual craving being unknown to them their heaven as also the other super-heavens are free from the presence of women. They all lead very long lives in the enjoyment of peace and the term of their lives is reckoned not in years but in oceans of years (sāgaras). Thus they are supposed to live for thirty-three oceans of years without experiencing premature death. They require food once in 33,000 years, the quantity of food taken being much less than in the lower heavens and breathe only after thirty-three fortnights. They are all of handsome appearance, their bodies being endowed with symmetry and resplendence. The size of an Ahamindra is only one cubit. These Ahamindras are all gifted with unusual wisdom, and mutual love and jealousy, unlike the lower heavens, find no place in Sarvārthasiddhi.

Painting No. 12 (pl. x).—Both the painting and its label are so badly obliterated that while nothing remains of the label to elucidate the scene intended a few figures that can be made out on the extreme right of the painting itself warrant only a conjectural interpretation. The standing figures, barring the one on the extreme right, probably represent the brothers and merchant-friend of Vajranābhi who, as has been narrated above, became also "Ahamindras" like Vajranābhi. But as the figure on the extreme right represents a woman I am not sure if the above identification can be correct, for as has already been said the Ahamindra heaven is devoid of women. But no other event is recorded either in the Śrī Purāṇa or the Ādi Purāṇa as happening between the last scene narrated in painting No. 11 and the next painting (No. 13). There is little scope for any scene other than the one I have suggested as probably intended here. If this is correct, then the woman can be explained as serving a negative purpose, i.e., she is only intended to show by way of contrast that though she is denied admission into the Sarvārthasiddhi heaven the residents of the heaven experience divine joy and bliss, a joy that beats to shame the joy that an ordinary mortal can experience in the company of his lady-love.

Painting No. 13 (pl. x).—ഭോജനദാനം || ഭാജനദാനം || വാസ്ത്രദാനം ||

"Bhōjanāṅgam: Bhājanāṅgam: Vastrāṅgam:".

Three trees are found in the painting and they are, as the labels prove, three out of the ten kalpaka-vrikshas or "wish-trees" that catered to the needs of humanity till the time of Nābhi Mahārāja, the fourteenth Manu, who became the father of Rishabhadeva. The three trees that are shown are named bhojanāṅgam, "food-giving," bhājanāṅgam, "vessel-giving," and vastrāṅgam, "cloth-giving." The other trees that are not shown here but the intended presence of which we can infer are, according to the Śrī Purāṇa, madyāṅgam, "drink-giving," turyāṅgam, "music-tree," bhūṣaṇāṅgam, "ornament-giving," mālyāṅgam, "flower garland-giving," dīpāṅgam, "lamp-giving," grihāṅgam, "house-giving" and jyoti-rāṅgam, "light-giving."

These trees are appropriately shown here as the story leads on to an account of the fourteen Manus¹ or sages or saviours who arose from time to time and kept on enlightening the people. The last of these Manus was Nābhi Mahārāja till whose time the kalpakavrikshas catered to the needs of mankind. It was given to Nābhi to become the father of the first Tirthaṅkara.

¹ See below, pp. 223-225.

Painting No. 14 (pl. xi)—

. . .	மே மனு	. . .	10th Maṇu.
. . .	மே மனு	. . .	11th Maṇu.
. . .	மே மனு	. . .	12th Maṇu.
. . .	மே மனு	. . .	13th Maṇu.

The foundation of civilization was laid by wise men who arose from time to time. These are the Manus or saviours who are fourteen in number. They are also called *kulakaras*¹.

The left half of the painting is completely obliterated. On the right half we can discern seven Manus sitting in a row on a long platform serving the purpose of a pedestal. They all have their right hands lifted up to the level of the face which suggests that they probably hold in them flowers which they are in the act of drawing near their noses to smell. Such a representation is common in these paintings especially where seated figures otherwise unengaged are shown. Three, out of the seven, have one of their legs hanging down from the seat, while the rest have both legs on the seat, crossed in a typical Indian style. The last three bear the labels "Tenth Manu, Eleventh Manu, Twelfth Manu, Thirteenth Manu," thereby proving that the four figures on the right represent the Manus, Abhichandra, Chandrabha, Marudeva and Prasenajit. The fourteenth Manu, Nābhi,² being the most important among them,³ as one destined to become the father of the first Tirthaṅkara, does not find a place here but is separately and more elaborately dealt with in the succeeding paintings.

The obliterated portion of the painting might naturally have been supposed to have contained pictures of the first six Manus; but this space is much less than that occupied by the six later Manus, there being room for only three of them. This must either mean that the other three were left out of the painting altogether, or that some of the standing figures of men in painting No. 12 (pl. x) are intended to represent them. The only objections to this are that the figures in painting No. 12 are all standing in clear contrast to the later seven Manus represented here as sitting, and that one of the former represents a woman as remarked already (p. 78).

Painting No. 15 (pl. xi).—Shows scenes from the life of Nābhi Mahārāja, running from right to left. The life story of this Manu is here painted elaborately not only for the reason that he was the father of Rishabhadeva but also because he is said to have established the line of the Ikshvākus, who took their name from the fact that he taught men the use of sugarcane, ikshu being its Sanskrit name. This is also claimed for his son.¹ Though the painting is much defaced sufficient details still remain to indicate the scenes.

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 223-225.

² Wilson, Vishnu Purāṇa, Vol. II, pp. 100-103—Nābhi, his son Rishabhadeva and Bharata, the latter's son, find a place in the Hindu purāṇic lists, where Nābhi is said to be the son of Agnidra, king of Jaśbī-dvīpa, son of Priya, vrata, king of Antarvada. Also see Ind. Ant., vol. xxx, p. 248.

³ Asiatic Researches, vol. 9, p. 259.—Nābhi allotted to men the means of subsistence, viz., asi (sword), maṇi (letters, lit. ink), ṛishi (agriculture), vāṇijya (commerce), and painpālana (attendance on cattle).

The label below the panel on the extreme right runs as follows :—

ஜம்பூதீப ஸாக்கேதரத்த சூய்வணத்த திருவெய்யாநகரத்த அரமணை
(நை)யில் நாவீரமஹாராஜனும் மருதெ(வெ)ய்யாரும் யிருக்குறது யிவடம் உ

Jambū-dvīpa-Bharata-kshetrattu Ārya-khaṇḍattu-tiruv-Ayodhya-nagarattu aramāṇai (nai)yil Nābhi-mahārājāyum Maruṭe(de)vīyārum yirukkuṇḍu yivadam u

"Here (are shown) Nābhi-Mahārāja and his wife Marudevī sitting in their palace in the beautiful city of Ayōdhya, in Ārya-khaṇḍa of Bharata-kshetra in Jambū-dvīpa."

In the light of the label it is evident that the two crowned figures shown represent the king on the right, and his wife on the left, facing each other.

The next panel, in the centre, shows Marudevī sleeping on a swing while two of her attendants, one on either side of her, are moving the swing to and fro. The label below runs as follows :—

மருதெய்யார் தி ஞாலயித்த பதினாறுவழக்களைக் காணுகுறது யிவடம் ||

Maruṭe(de)vīyār nidrā-samayattu paṇḍāru svaṇṇaṅgaḷaik-kāṇukūṇḍu yivadam ||

"Marudevī is here (shown as) having sixteen dreams, while sleeping."

These dreams are drawn up in the next row (No. 16) and will be described under No. 16.

The next panel, the one on the extreme left, shows the king and queen facing each other as while conversing. The label runs as follows :—

. . . மருதெய்யாருக்கு . . . நைச் சொல்லுகுறது யிவடம் ||

. . . Maruṭe(de)vīyārūku . . . naiḥchollukūṇḍu yivadam ||

"Here (is shown) . . . narrating to Marudevī".

Though the label is obliterated it is easy to find out what the painting above originally showed. According to the Śrī Purāṇa, Marudevī went to her lord immediately after waking up from her sleep and narrated to him in detail all the sixteen dreams she had and the king explained to her their consequences (phalas) or significance².

Painting No. 16 (pl. xi).—Marudevī's dreams³ are shown here with their respective labels below, excepting the first four, which together with their labels are completely obliterated. The sixteen things that she saw in her dreams are as follows :—

(1) An elephant, (2) a bull, (3) a lion, (4) the goddess Lakshmi⁴ as being bathed by elephants, one on either side, (5) two flower garlands, (6) the full moon in all its

¹ See below, p. 92.

² See under painting No. 16, pp. 81 and 82.

³ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 22.—These dreams are to-day often graven round the silver treasures in Jain temples and Jain women love to recall them, for it is given to all the mothers of the great Jain saints to see them.

⁴ Another version is that she saw a ship instead. As the painting has been completely rubbed out here we are unable to make out what was painted.

radiance, (7) morning sun (Bāla-Sūrya), (8) fish, (9) two filled pots or vases (kalāśas), (10) a lotus pond, (11) the ocean, (12) a lion-throne or siṃhāsana, (13) a vehicle or chariot of the gods on which they fly everywhere, (14) Nāga-bhavana or palace of the Nāgas or a seat designed like a snake, (15) a heap of precious stones, and (16) flames of fire¹.

The king to whom these dreams were narrated by his queen, said that they all foretold the birth of a very great being who was to become a Tirthaṅkara. He also explained that these dreams had some significances² individually, which are as follows:—

- (1) The elephant signified that the child to be born to them would become great.
- (2) The bull signified that the child would become the lord of the world.
- (3) The lion meant that he would become mighty and strong.
- (4) The goddess Lakṣmī signified that the child would be taken to Mount Mandara and be bathed with celestial waters by the gods. This bath, called Janma-abhisheka, is considered very sacred and is denied to all except those that are born to become Tirthaṅkaras.
- (5) The flower garlands meant that the child, after becoming a Tirthaṅkara would expound Dharma or the Sacred Law to the world.
- (6) The full and radiant moon signified that he would please, just as the moon, one and all.
- (7) The sun meant that he would be resplendant and glorious.
- (8) The fish meant that he would taste all the pleasures of life.
- (9) The two filled pots meant that he would become the lord of all the treasures or nidhis.
- (10) The lotus-tank indicated that he would be endowed with good qualities and a beautiful appearance.
- (11) The ocean meant that he would acquire that knowledge which should be essentially acquired by a Tirthaṅkara. This knowledge is referred to in the Śrī Purāṇa as kevala-jñāna or omniscience and one who acquires it is called kevali.
- (12) The lion-throne meant that he would ascend it as the monarch of the whole world.
- (13) The vehicle of the devas indicated that he would descend down to the world from heaven and be born.
- (14) Nāga-bhavana meant that he would acquire all preliminary knowledge technically called avadhi-jñāna or visual knowledge.
- (15) The heap of precious stones meant that he would himself be a heap of all the good qualities, known and unknown to mankind.
- (16) Flames of fire meant that he would burn by his potentiality all the actions (karma) that follow the doer.

On the queen adding that the bull, which she saw in her second dream entered her face, the king explained that the Tirthaṅkara had entered her womb that day and that as he chose to enter in the form of a bull (riṣabha), he should be called "Rishabhadeva."

¹ For a slightly different account of the dreams and their significances see C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, pp. 76-9.

The labels run from left to right as:—

. . . மலை || அகநாடு || வானவழி || சிவவழி || பூசுணை-கொண்டை || கடற்குடி || வான-
கூடு || வானவழி || செவ்வழி || காமவழி || நகுநாடு . . .

. . . Malai || Chandran || Sūryyan || Matsyam || Pūṇakūṇḍham || Tatākam || Samu-
dram || Sinhāsana || Devavimānam || Nāgālayam || Ratnarāśi . . .

" Garland || Moon || Sun || Fish || Filled vase || Pond || Ocean || Lionthrone || Vehicle of the Devas || Nāga-shrine || Heap of precious stones . . . "

These dreams are represented in the painting from left to right.

While the first four dreams are completely obliterated, including their labels, we can hardly make out anything more of the others whose labels are preserved than the sun and moon, pond, ocean, vehicle of the devas, Nāga-shrine resembling the vehicle of the devas and a circular heap standing probably for the "ratna-rāśi." On the extreme right of the painting are visible flames of fire, the sixteenth and the last dream, the label of which has disappeared.

Painting No. 17 (pl. xi).—This illustrates the birth of the Tirthaṅkara and the events closely preceding and following his birth.

17-a. செவ்வழி குறது யி(வ)டம் உ

. Dēvastrigaḥ kuṛadu yi(va)dam.

" Deva-ladies (attending) here."

Marudevi, who is seated on an elevated platform on the extreme left is attended by three Deva-ladies, one of them (probably Śacī) sitting on the same platform in front of Marudevi and the other two standing. All the three are eagerly looking in the direction of Marudevi as if to express their willingness to minister to her wants. As already noted Deva-ladies attended on her during the period of her pregnancy.

17-b. ஸ்வாமி பிறக்குறது யி(வ)டம்

. Svāmi piraṅkuṛadu yi(va)dam.

" Here (is shown) the birth of the Svāmi (God)."

The central panel shows Marudevi giving birth to the divine child. Two attendant women (probably they are Deva-ladies) are supporting her, holding her hands and she is delivered of the child behind a screen which hides her from the waist downwards. According to the Śrī Purāṇa (Vol. I) she carried the child in her womb for nine months, without however showing any of the signs of pregnancy, and when the period was over she gave birth to Rishabhadeva, also called Trailōkyanātha (Lord of the three worlds) in the month of Chitrā, Kṛishṇa-Navamī, Uttirāḍha-Nakshatra and Brāhma-Yoga. At the time of his birth the name given to him was Sadyo-jāta.

17-c. Shows an event which immediately followed the birth of the Tirthaṅkara. Saudharma-Indra, the Indra of the first heaven¹, started for Ayōdhyā with his wife

¹ See Appendix III, p. 231.

Śachī and retinue to pay his homage to the child and to carry it to the peak of Mount Mahā-Meru to bathe it with celestial waters and make it, thereby, divine. All the devas reached the palace and stopped in the court-yard while Śachī following his instructions, went to the room where the child was born. She worshipped the child, and after producing sleep on Marudēvi removed it and placed by her side a magic child (mock-child) instead. The child was then handed over to Saudharma-Indra who immediately placed it on the back of his elephant Airāvata and started with his retinue for Mahā-Meru.

In the painting, Śachī is shown twice, first as facing the room, where Marudēvi gave birth to the Tirthaṅkara, evidently to take the child from there, and secondly as returning and delivering the child to her husband, who is followed by another deva called Īśānendra, the Indra of the second heaven¹ who spreads a white umbrella, an emblem of dignity.

Painting No. 18 (pl. xi)—

வெவெருது ஸுரதியை வெவாசுவகதினமெல் எழுந்தருளு(ள்) விசுவக் கொண்டு . . .
சுகம் பண்ண சேத . . . சேருவது-தத்துக்குப் பொறது . . .

Devendran Svāmīyai Airāvatuttin mel eundarulu (i) vittukkondu . . . shakam panna Maha . . . maru-parvatattukkup-poradu . . .

"Devendra proceeding to Mount Mahā-Meru to perform (Janmābhi) sheka (of the child), placing the god on the back of Airāvata."

Saudharma-Indra mounted his vehicle, Airāvata and placing the child on his lap started on a procession towards the sacred mountain, Mahā-Meru, where the child was to be bathed with the celestial waters. This ceremony, which every Tirthaṅkara has to undergo at the time of his birth, is described as Janma-abhisheka. He was preceded and followed by other devas, chief among them being Sanatkumāra and Māhēndras² who spread chāmaras or fly-whisks before the child and Īśānendra who held a white umbrella over him. There were other devas also who held flags and festoons and joined in the procession. In the painting, the white elephant carrying Devendra with the child on his lap and Īśānendra holding an umbrella behind is shown on the extreme right while the various other devas who formed a procession are marching in front, some walking, some on horseback and some on elephant-back, the last mentioned beating a drum.

Painting No. 19 (pl. xii).—Here the Janmābhisheka of the child takes place in the left half (a) after which the party returns to the city of Ayōdhyā. A brief description of the ceremony and its preliminary settings must be told here in explanation of the painting, which is unfortunately largely obliterated. Mahā-Meru mountain situated in the centre of Videha,³ which is said to be the pedestal (Jina-Janmābhisheka-piṭha) on which the child was to be bathed is flanked by four celestial gardens (vanas) called Bhadraśāla, Nandana (this is the garden known to Hindu mythology as situated in Svarga, the world of Indra), Saumanasa and *Pāṇḍuka*⁴ and surrounded on all the four directions (east, west, south and north) by niches or temples of the Jina (Jinabhavanās). The dimensions of the pedestal are rather exaggerated for the height is said to be 1,000 yojanas and the breadth 10,000 yojanas and that it was situated very high in the sky, about 99,000 yojanas above the earth. Devendra and the procession circumambulated this mountain and reached one of the gardens called Paṇḍuka, in the centre of which was situated a maṇḍapa, built of precious stones, over a polished rocky surface shaped like the disc of the moon, the dimensions of which were 100 yojanas of length, 50 yojanas of breadth and 8 yojanas of height. To such a maṇḍapa, the child was led and was gently deposited in its centre by Devendra. The child, being a divine one, was able to sit cross-legged like grown-up men, facing east. To face east when a ceremony is performed is considered not only as auspicious but as the correct procedure.

¹ See Appendix III, p. 231.

² Pl. xxxvii.

³ Trilokasāra, v. 607.

When the child was thus seated, two of the principal devas, Saudharmendra (the Devendra of Hindu mythology) and Īśānendra performed the Janmābhisheka of the Tirthaṅkara by emptying over him celestial waters collected in pots (kuṇḍhas) from the milk ocean, each standing on either side of the child, while the other devas witnessed the event with reverence and deep interest. After the ceremony was over and the child was sufficiently wet, Śachi, the wife of Saudharmendra took the child in a motherly way and rubbed away all the water-particles from its body and lovingly decorated him with flowers and ornaments. Once again Saudharmendra lifted the child and placing it on his lap, himself sitting on the back of Airāvata, returned to Ayōdhya, in the same processional manner in which he proceeded to the mountain, preceded and followed by the other devas, holding flags, festoons and umbrellas and other insignia appropriate to the occasion.

19-a. . . . யின்மெலெ எழுந்தது(ரு)னியித்து வெணயெடுகேபோரெதெயுரகன்
. . . . சீரவினெய்கம்பன் னுருதது யிலடம் உ||
. . . . Yimēle eṇḍaru (ru) ni vittu Saudharmma-Īśānendrargaḷ . . .
mābhishekam paṇṇukuraḍu yivadam ||

"Saudharmendra and Īśānendra are here performing Janmābhisheka seating him on . . ."

In the painting four high towers or gopuras are shown, one above the other. Probably they are situated on the mountain Mahā-Meru, at equal heights. To the right of the top-most tower can be seen, though faintly, Rishabhadeva sitting cross-legged, being bathed by two gods, one on either side of him. Four other gods stand to the right with pitchers in their hands.

In what looks like a chamber below, with a canopy over it can be seen a big vessel placed on the ground and a vimāna by its side. Two devas stand on the right of the vessel, one of them appearing to stoop over it. Probably they are taking celestial waters from the big vessel in which they are evidently stored for bathing the child.

19-b. ஜந்மபிஷேகாநந்தரம் ஸ்வாமியை டெவெந்தரது மொராவதகிந்மெல் வைத்துக்
கொண்டு டெவர்க்கொடுக்கட எயொயிராவதா துக்குப் பொறது யிலடம் உ

Janmābhishekānantaram Svāmiyai Devendran Airāvatattiṇ mel vaittukkoṇḍu Devarkkaḷoḍuṅkūḍa Ayōdhyapurattukkup-poradu yivadam உ

"Devendra is here shown returning to the city of Ayōdhyā after the Janmābhishēka was over placing the Svāmī (Rishabhadeva) on the back of Airāvata, followed by the other devas."

In the painting the child is shown seated in a howdah on the back of the elephant with Devendra behind him. It is crowned and ornamented and smells a flower held in its left hand. Īśānendra is seated further behind and is holding an umbrella over the child. The mahout who is sitting on the neck of the elephant in front of the child is carrying a goad in his left hand while a flag rests on his right shoulder. Three other devas are walking in front with flags in their hands.

Painting No. 20 (pl. xii).—All along Marudevī and the people at Ayōdhyā were in a state of drowsiness from which they were enabled to recover on Śachi removing the sleep she had wrought, when the procession had entered Ayōdhyā. Śachi explained to Marudevī what had happened. Saudharmendra placed the child on a throne and danced with joy, after which he undertook the namā-karṇa or naming the child. All the people agreeing, the child was named Rishabhadeva¹. The work of the devas being over for the time being they all took leave of the child and Nābhi Mahārāja and departed to their various worlds.

The painting runs from right to left and shows the procession returning to the city. On the extreme left we find a pavilion in which is seated Rishabhadeva who is worshipped by some devas near by, while Saudharmendra with his hands placed together in worship and knees bent is dancing with joy. The label below is completely defaced only the letter Q (re) remaining.

Painting No. 21 (pl. xli).—Rishabhadeva gradually grew into a handsome youth and was the yuvarāja or the heir-apparent to succeed to the throne after his father. His father greatly desired that his son should marry and become the father of illustrious sons who would continue the Ikshvāku lineage of which he was the founder. The son was for a long time averse to marriage as he knew what worldly life meant. But owing to the repeated persuasions of his father who requested him to marry to teach to the world what the life and duties of a grihastha or householder were and how life would be and what it meant to one who would, in course of time, detach himself from such a worldly existence (nivṛtti-dharma), he married two women, Yaśasvatī and Sunandā. The former bore him hundred sons beginning with Bharata, who was the foremost Kshatriya in the dynasty of Ikshvāku and a daughter named Brāhmī. To the latter were born a son, Bāhubali², and a daughter named Sundarī³.

¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 135.—It may be noticed that Rishabhadeva and his father Nābhi and son Bharata occur in the Hindu Purāṇic lists, where Nābhi, who is reckoned as the fourteenth Manu by the Jains, is mentioned as the son of Agnidra, King of Jambū-dvīpa, who in turn was the son of Priyavrata, king of Antarveda. The kings of various other nations also derived their descent from him. See Wilson, Purāṇa Purāṇa, pp. 162, 163 and 164 ff.

² See pl. xxxvi, fig. 1; a colossal statue of his on the top of the Vindhya-giri hill at Śravaṇa-Belgola is even now worshipped by the Jains under the name of Gommatesvara.

³ For details about the progeny of Rishabhadeva and his previous dharmas, etc., see C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, pp. 90-94.

Rishabhadeva taught his sons and daughters the various arts or kalās and sciences or śāstras. His father, Nābhi Mahārāja, desirous of seeing him rule the kingdom crowned him, hailing him as "the monarch of the three worlds" or Trailokyanātha and as the first king of the Ikshvāku dynasty or kula. As he was hailed Trailokyanātha on this occasion this name got perpetuated and the Tirthaṅkara came to be called so.

And Rishabhadeva proved a model monarch and was ruling the land righteously and skilfully by dividing the kingdom into five convenient parts for purposes of administration and establishing governors or representatives over them.

One day, while he was in the midst of his court, witnessing a dance performed by one of the dancing girls called Nīlāñjana, he saw her drop down dead and immediately disappear. The king understood that the time for her to die had come and that death awaited everyone that was born. This made him melancholy and contemplative and he began to dissociate himself from those bonds that tied him to the world and to the so-called pleasures that the world was believed to have in store. In a short time he was disgusted with life and was only abiding his time awaiting the divine call, for he believed, as every other Tirthaṅkara or for the matter of that every prophet or founder of faiths believed, that he had a mission to perform.

21-a. . . . ஸ்வாமி கருணம் உண்ணிக்கொள்ளச்சொல்லி நாகிரிமாநாஜனு
கெஞ்சுமது சிவடம் உ ||

. . . Svāmiyai kalyāṇam paṇṇik-kollachcholi Nābhi-mahārājan kēṅkuṇadu
yivadam. உ ||

"Nābhi Mahārāja is here requesting the Svāmi (Rishabhadeva) to marry . . ."

The scene is obvious. The prince is standing in front of his father Nābhi who is seated in a pavilion and is addressing his son on the lines indicated by the label; the prince is requested to marry to show to the world grihastha-dharma or the life of a householder. The prince was sent for by his father who, though he knew his son's real thoughts and inclinations concerning life, and also his mission, put very cautiously before him the proposal for marriage thus:—

"O Lord, thou really are the Father of the three worlds, for Thou art the Preceptor of all living beings. I am thy father merely like an accompanying cause. Be pleased to recognize the need for the establishment of the marriage sacrament, so that humanity may not misdirect themselves in that regard, and come to grief, through sheer inability to follow the example of great Celibates." And Rishabhadeva assented by silence, accompanied by a smile and the monosyllabic "om." The two persons on the left of Nābhi, other than the attendant who is gently fanning the king, are princes of a rank lower than that of Rishabhadeva, friends of the heir-apparent who are overjoyed on hearing the marriage talk between the father and the son and the subsequent assent of the prince to the proposal. They are visibly demonstrating their joy at the news, one of them actually plunging himself into a dance while the other is preparing himself by stretching his hands and so forth to follow suit. It is said that the prince had some play-mates, who were none other than some devas who were born in the world to keep him company and to delight him in all ways. So assuredly these two are his friends, though.

in the painting they are shown as holding in their hands festoons or banners which they need not hold. But their presence can however be justified, for it is said that though they were the prince's playmates they could not help being his attendants also, feeling as such their inferiority in his presence. So there is nothing strange in their being associated with banners or festoons which are but marks to show respect to the hero. The ornamental knots on their heads reminding us of similar designs called koṇḍai found on the head of child Kṛishṇa (cf. paintings Nos. 69—72) mark these figures out as the friends of the heir-apparent rather than as ordinary attendants or courtiers of the king.

21-h. . . . வென் . . . விடியாநரசரஜக்காண்ட . . . அழைத்து . . .

. . . . ven . . . Vidyādhara-rājakkāṇḍa . . . alaittu . . .

" . . . ven . . . taking or inviting . . . with Vidyādhara kings . . . "

The story shown in the above scene is as follows—After obtaining the assent of the prince for marriage king Nābhi set about hunting for a suitable wife for his son and in his quest he was aided by Saudharmendra. Their combined efforts were crowned with success and their choice fell on two accomplished and lovely girls, Yaśasvati and Sunandā by name, the sisters (but according to another version the daughters) of two brothers who were ruling the Vidyādhara kingdom called Kachchha and Mahākachchha. The brothers who were apprised of the intention of Nābhi readily agreed and the marriage was arranged. The ladies came to Ayodhyā, the capital of Nābhi, being escorted by their valourous brothers and were given to Rishabhadeva in marriage.

In the painting the prince is marching ahead followed by the two brides while an attendant deva holding an umbrella goes in front of the prince. The prince who is dressed and decorated much in the same way as in fig. a betrays himself as the bridegroom (a bridegroom of the Indian type) by displaying a certain amount of shyness and feigned unconcern by looking away from his brides. All the three, i.e., the prince and the brides carry in their right hands the auspicious flower, the lotus. That in the hand of the prince is a big one while those in the hands of the brides are small. The attitude of the prince may also be explained as indicating the disinterestedness of the prince who consented to marry to oblige more his father than to derive any pleasure out of it. He is shown here as receiving his brides and escorting them to the marriage pandal or maṇḍapa (kalyāṇa-maṇḍapa) where the marriage ceremonies had to be undergone before they could be declared to be husband and wives. This custom of the bridegroom escorting the bride is common in India especially among the South Indian Brahmans¹.

¹ In fact among the Brahmans there appears to be no end to these escortings which, however, take sometimes the form of processions in which the bride's and the bridegroom's parties mingle; and it is a matter of deep interest to note that the attitude of the bridegroom in these processions, seated or standing as he ought to be with his bride by his side, will be invariably one of extreme delicacy, shyness and consequent feigned indifference towards the bride by his side, the feigned nature of which is more than ever betrayed by the stiffness of the bridegroom's pose in keeping his person and particularly his face away from the bride by his side. His relatives and friends whom particularly he wants to assure by his feigned unconcern that he is not in the least overjoyed or elated at the prospect of the pleasures of wedlock are not deceived but see through him and to his utter discomfort cut jokes at his expense within of course the hearing of the bride, the last person in the world that the bridegroom would wish should hear them.

Though the label contains the term "Vidyādhara Raja" which would mean that the prince is taking the brides to the marriage hall accompanied by the Vidyādhara kings, who happen to be in this case the brides' brothers, Kachchha and Maha-Kachchha, the fact that no other figures than those of the prince, the brides and the attendant with the umbrella in front of the party are to be found in the painting goes to prove that the Vidyādhara kings were not drawn at all, there being no room for them in the painting.

Painting No. 22 (pl. xii).—Both the painting and its label are badly damaged more particularly the label, of which nothing remains. Still the scene is obvious. The marriage ceremonies are carried on here in Brahmanical style, for during Brahmanical ceremonies the fire is lit and offerings like ghee (djya), flour and rice (purodāśa and lāja) are poured into the flames. The idea underlying these offerings is that Agni, the fire-god, being the agent of the devas carries to the respective devas the offerings of their devotees¹. The yajamāna or person who has the ceremony performed either by himself or by a priest on his behalf, must always be present and is supposed to direct it himself. If his wife is to share in the merit she must be present also.

In the painting the prince and his brides (badly damaged) are seated on the right on a raised platform and under a pandal, two supports of which (ordinary sticks) can be seen. The fire is lit and is placed on a raised seat placed between the sticks that support the pandal which probably is intended for the hōmakūṇḍa or homa-pot, in which fire should be kept before the ceremony is begun. Two priests can be seen on the left of the fire, one of them sitting very near the fire and pouring into it the offering (probably ghee) collected in a ladle, and the other sitting behind him and probably assisting him by chanting the necessary mantras, as is indicated by his pose with the right hand raised up to the level of the mouth with the tips of its thumb and the first finger joined so as to form a ring—a pose of the hands that is frequently adopted by chanters of mantras to indicate the different grades of sound technically called svaras. Three other figures are seated behind the priests and come next to the priests in importance, being the allying parties (sambandhins) that were chiefly responsible for bringing about the marriage. The first two in this trio, sitting immediately behind the second priest, are the Vidyādhara kings, the brothers of the brides representing the brides' party, while the third who is seated behind the couple must be Nābhi Mahārāja, the father of the prince representing the bridegroom's party. They are all in kingly dress, the crowns on their heads marking them out as the persons we have suggested above. While Nābhi Mahārāja has got his right hand raised as if he was speaking, the Vidyādhara kings who are alike are sitting close together and have their hands in their laps. All are intently watching the ceremony. The space in the panel on the extreme left which shows nothing now presumably contained other members of the party that had come to attend the marriage.

¹ Thus we can see in ceremonies priests who enjoy the confidence of the yajamānas doing śoma or the ceremony involving the consigning to the flames of ghee, flour, etc., to the accompaniment of chants. In such cases the yajamānas for whom the priests officiate should be present accompanied by their wives if the merit said to accrue from the performance of the particular ceremonies is to be shared by the performers with their wives, and without their wives if the merit is to go to the yajamānas alone. The rituals forming part of the ceremonies demand the performers' presence, as their agent, the priest, has to take instructions from the yajamānas before he should proceed further.

Painting No. 23 (pl. xiii).— . . . ஓக . . . கிதது யிவடம்.

. . . laka . . . kīradu yivadam.

" . . . laka . . . being here."

As the painting and its label are badly damaged, the few letters of the label that still remain being unintelligible, it is only possible to give a conjectural interpretation. In all probability the scene intended is one of the marriage festivities that followed the religious ceremony described under No. 22 (pl. xii). As is always the case with marriages in South India the prince's marriage was followed by entertainments and musical performances in which nautches played a great part. On the right a nautch is proceeding, the dancing girl dancing in front with her hands lifted above her head and legs bent, suggesting that she is swaying her legs to the accompaniment of music and the beating of time. A party of three men form the rest of the nautch and do the singing and drumming part of the work. The foremost among the three seems to be singing, the next beating time and the third (the one on the extreme right) beating the drum with both his hands. The drum hangs from his neck and can be discerned in front of his waist. This is a typical nautch with which most South Indians are familiar. The party that is entertained can be found on the left of the painting. This part has suffered particularly badly, but what remains of it shows two seated figures each fanned by an attendant. These figures probably represent Nābhi and his son or the Vidyādhara kings for whose delight the nautch would have been arranged by the bridegroom's party, as this marriage took place in the city of the bridegroom.

Painting No. 24 (pl. xiii).— . . . கரடுயால் . . . க்ருப்பொழியிடம்.

. . . nāḍiyāl . . . kṛupporadu yivadam.

" . . . by order . . . going to-here."

The label is not helpful in explaining the scene. But in the light of the account of events found in the Śrī Purāṇa it becomes clear.

As the kalpa trees had by now disappeared and spontaneous growth was not yielding sufficient food for the people whose number was nevertheless increasing, people did not know what they should do for their livelihood. They therefore went in a body to Rishabhadeva and falling at his feet requested him to find a way for them out of the impasse. Rishabhadeva was moved by deep sympathy for them and was planning in his own mind how best he could serve them. Just then Saudharmendra, the lord of the devas, divining his thoughts entered and announced himself as ready to carry out the plans of Rishabhadeva for the benefit of mankind. Rishabhadeva taught the people first agriculture, particularly the cultivation of sugarcane (ikshu) and other crops and then various crafts and arts. He then laid the foundations of civic life, housing the people in suitable houses, palaces and the like, and taught them also how to co-operate with one another for mutual benefit. He then divided the country into provinces, the provinces into various districts and the districts into towns and villages and appointed kings and chieftains to govern these provinces and regulate civic life so that they could become general and permanent factors of government. Among the occupations and crafts that he taught men mention may be made of letters, warfare, cultivation, trade, carpentry, goldsmith's work, music, dancing and painting. He then did what is called varnāśrama-vyavasthā or the classification of people into castes or classes. There were three castes that were founded by him which are :—

- (1) Kshatriyas, who were the warriors,
- (2) Vaiśyas, who were the traders, and
- (3) Śūdras, who earned their living by manual labour or handicraft, and by service under the Kshatriyas and the Vaiśyas. These were at first called jaghanyaja (small), later avara (lowest or last), and finally śūdras. Later on those that had wrestling as their profession were also counted as Śūdras.

There were no Brahmans then and the classification of the Brahman caste as such takes place later on during the time of Bharata, the illustrious son of Rishabhadeva. Thus it will be seen that the above classification was on the basis of occupation and not on blood, all enjoying the liberty to pursue literature and education if they liked.

With regard to the origin of the Brahman caste which is assigned to the time of Bharata, the Jains have an interesting story. Bharata one day invited the male residents of Ayodhyā to see him in his palace. He had so arranged that a small path alone was left for them to pass along, unless they chose to go over extensive and neatly trimmed grass meadows, that were found on either side of the narrow pathway. The idea was to single out those who were very tender-hearted and who would prefer walking in the small path rather than in the extensive grass meadows lest they should injure the souls that abode in the blades of grass. Those that did not tread on the grass he called Brahmanas because of their knowledge of Brahman, i.e., the divinity of life. This action of his was condemned by his father and the Brāhmaṇa class found no place in the Jain caste system till the time of the *Ādi Purāṇa*¹, the author of which Jināsena² lays emphasis on this distinction "to placate the Brahmanical hatred and win them over to protect the Jains against bitter persecution at the hands of their co-religionists (Hindus)."

In all his work Rishabhadeva was assisted by the lord of the devas who is usually referred to in the Jain Purāṇas as Indra and sometimes as Saudharmendra. In all the cases where he is referred to as merely Indra we should understand that the person referred to is the Indra of the first heaven (kalpa) who derives his name from the heaven of which he is a resident and the lord; the name of the first kalpa being Saudharma he comes to be called Saudharmendra³. It should also be borne in mind that Śacī, the wife of Indra or Śakra in Hindu mythology, who plays a great part in the janmābhisheka ceremony of the Tirthaṅkaras (pp. 83-84) and who is an associate of Saudharmendra in all his activities is Saudharmendra's wife⁴. Saudharmendra is also referred to in many places in the Jaina Purāṇas as Devendra or the Indra who is the lord of the devas. Thus wherever either the term Indra or Devendra is used Saudharmendra, the lord of the first kalpa known as Saudharma is meant.

¹ Ādi Purāṇa is part of the Jain Mahā-Purāṇa. Commenced by Jināsena in the latter half of the eighth century A.D., it was completed by his disciple Guṇabhadra in about 897 A.D. See Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. I, part II, p. 407.

² For details see Appendix III, p. 231.

In the painting we can discern seven men standing turning to the left where evidently Rishabhadeva was shown seated. Though the left half of the painting is obliterated we can infer the presence of Rishabhadeva by the attitude and the dress of the seven persons that are standing in front of him. That they are common-folk is clear from their ordinary attire consisting of an under-garment, an upper cloth (aṅgavastra) which covers their breasts and a turban of the type that we find most cheṭṭis of South India using to-day. Six of them are in an attitude of worship or supplication with their hands folded in the añjali pose against their breasts, while the seventh, the last in the row standing on the extreme right of the group, though similarly dressed and in a similar attitude looks away from the left, the direction in which the other six are looking. The action and the attitude of the first six and the seventh are significant. While the first six indicate by their attitude that the party had come to request the prince to show them a way by which they could find means for their livelihood, the kalpa-trees having disappeared and spontaneous growth not yielding sufficient food for the people whose number was increasing, the seventh who has also come on a similar mission but has got his face turned away from the prince on whom the attention of the other six is rivetted is looking at the figure of a crowned person, who is no other than Saudharmendra, who, as has already been narrated, announces himself before the prince, when he was so engaged, as one ready to carry out the projects of the prince. The figure of Saudharmendra can be made out on the extreme right of the painting as that of a tall person with a conical crown on his head, the usual kiriṭa, with his right hand in a pose indicating vismaya or wonder or gratification and with his left hand hanging loose by his side. The hand which is in the vismaya pose may also be taken to be in an attitude indicating that he is singing the praises of Rishabhadeva as he is entering the assembly hall in Ayodhyā where the prince was then seated. The attitude of the seventh in the group suggests that he had caught sight of Saudharmendra who was just then entering the apartment but had not yet been seen by those who were nearer to Rishabhadeva.

Painting No. 25 (pl. xiii)—

25-a. . . . கிரீடம் சூட்டுகுறது யிவடம் உ

. . . . Kiritam sūttukuraṭu yivaḍam u

" . . . here (is shown) the placing of the crown [on the head of Rishabhadeva]."

As nothing remains in the painting of the scene that the label indicates we can do no more than give a brief description of the coronation of Rishabhadeva as found in the Śrī Purāṇa.

As a result of the reforms that the prince had introduced which were zealously and skilfully carried out by Saudharmendra the people were happy and prosperity reigned everywhere in the land and all the people were grateful to him and never wearied of singing his praises. Some time after this, Saudharmendra came to Ayodhyā with his devas and his wife Śachī and made the necessary preparations for the coronation of Rishabhadeva as the king of the land in succession to Nābhi Mahārāja, who was himself very anxious that his illustrious son should take up the reins of government so that the land could have a better lord and so that he could rest and pursue a life of austerities that would lead him on to spiritual uplift. The event was made the occasion of great celebrations in which the devas under the leadership of Saudharmendra participated. After doing the abhisheka ceremony, i.e., pouring celestial waters on the head of the prince, in which all the devas took part, beginning with Saudharmendra, Saudharmendra requested Nābhi and several other kings of this world to do likewise, after which Nābhi was required to perform the actual coronation ceremony which consisted of placing the crown that he had himself worn for a long time on the head of his worthy son. This Nābhi gladly did, naming his son "the Lord of the three worlds," a cry, which the devas took up and kept up for such a long time that the vibrations of their cries still lingered in their heavens when they reached them after the coronation of the prince was over. After enjoying dancing and other festivities at Ayodhyā the devas departed for their respective worlds.

25-b. ஸமவாஜ கராவம்ஸம் முதலாகிய வம்ஸ திண்பெயர் பண்ணுகிறது சிவடம்||

Bhagavān Kuruvaṁśam mudalāgiya vaṁśanirṇayam paṇṇuguradu yivadam||

"Bhagavān (the Lord) is here (shown) doing the classification of families like kuruvamśa, etc."

கராவம்ஸாதிபதி கராவம்ஸஜய சிவ(டம்)||

Kuruvaṁśādhipati Kuru rājan yivadam||

"King Kuru, the lord of the family of the Kurus."

Rishabhadeva sent for four great Kshatriya warriors, namely, Somaprabha, Hari, Akampana and Kāśyapa and appointed them to rule over a thousand chieftains each. He gave Somaprabha the new name Kuru and called him the first member or the founder of the Kuruvamśa; then he called Hari, gave him the name Harikānta and made him the first member of the Harivamśa; then he called Akampana and changing his name into that of Śrīdhara made him the first member of another family which he called the Nāthavamśa. The last to be called was Kāśyapa who was named Maghavā and was hailed as the starter of the Ugravamśa. These kings were then sent to their respective provinces. Thus in Rishabhadeva's time there were five vaṁśas, the above four, and the Ikshvāku family of which Rishabhadeva was the founder,¹ all created by Rishabhadeva himself. It is said of the Ikshvāku vaṁśa that it arose in this way: the first thing that Rishabhadeva taught his men on the disappearance of the kalpa trees was the use of the sugarcane juice (ikshurasa) which earned for him the title of "Ikshvāku." Subsequently this term came to be applied to his family. The Sūrya and Chandra vaṁśas arose out of the Ikshvāku vaṁśa somewhat later, being founded by two of the grandsons of Rishabhadeva, the former by Bharata's son Arka Kīrti, and the latter by Bāhubali's son, Soma Kīrti, also called Mahābala.¹ While Kuru and the other three were mahārājas there were also several adhirājas created who were smaller chieftains. They were allowed to rule over 500 feudatory chiefs each and were placed under the above mahārājas. The first adhirājas to be appointed by Rishabhadeva were Kachchha, Mahākachchha and other kshatriya princes.

¹ According to other authorities Nābhi Mahārāja is the founder of the Ikshvāku family.

On the left we can make out the figure of Rishabhadeva seated on a throne. He is evidently determining the classification of vaṃśas as indicated by the label. The figures of four kings (their dress and the kirita on their heads mark them out as such) standing on the right of Rishabhadeva represent the four starters of the families, Kuru, Harī, Nātha, and Ugra respectively. The first in this group of four is King Kuru, the lord of the Kuruvamśa, as borne out by the label below. The labels of the other three are much obliterated; so also the last king, the one standing on the extreme right of the painting. Their attitude with their hands folded against their breasts in añjali or worship is indicative of their submission to Rishabhadeva both as their leige-lord and as their benefactor. They are ready to take charge of their respective provinces after receiving the necessary instructions from him. The añjali pose is also indicative of their extreme reverence for him, which was shared by one and all of his subjects, not to speak of the beings in the heavens, the devas.

Painting No. 26 (pl. xiii)—

. . . (A) கருவம்ச . . .
 . . . [Ni]lāñjanai . . .
 " . . . Nilāñjanai . . . "

When a great part of the life of Rishabhadeva was spent, one day he was witnessing a dance in his court, sitting on his throne, among his sons beginning with Bharata, and among various kings like Kuru and others. This dance, it is said, was arranged by Indra of the first heaven, i.e., Saudharmendra who had brought for the dance Nīlāñjanā,² a celebrated dancing girl of his world whose clock of life had only a few minutes left to run. At a signal from Indra she danced before the Lord and entertained the audience with her celestial dance. She probably knew the reason why she of all others had been asked to dance at that particular moment, and "she danced as she had never danced before. The presence of the World-Teacher in the closing moments of life filled her with courage and contentment and joy; she knew that her end was quite safe, and cared for nothing else." All at once, while in the midst of her swift and serpentlike movements, she staggered, reeled back, and stopped, and in the next instant she dropped down dead. The last spark of life had left her frame. This incident reminded all assembled, more particularly the king, that life was not stable and everything was subject to decay. The spirit of vairāgya or detachment or world-flight filled the mind of the king. He made up his mind there and then to say good-bye to the world and to the good things of the world and set his face towards the work ahead—the grand object of becoming a World-Teacher.

¹ Cf. C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, p. 106.

² Nemichandra, Trilokavāra (Varaṇāśka-adhikāra), gāthā 496.

In the painting we can make out Nīlāñjanā, who is dancing in the centre between two other nymphs who keep her company, while those producing the accompaniment to the dance consisting of the musician, the drummer, etc., are on the right. Only one of them can be made out, a singer as is evident from his raised hand. The party that was being entertained including the king must have occupied the left of the painting which is now obliterated. But the top of a vimāna or pavilion in which the king was evidently seated can be made out.

Painting No. 27 (pl. xiv).—The Jains believe that there are devas of a special kind called the Laukāntikas or Lokāntikas who do menial service for the other higher gods.¹

When they came to know that Rishabhadeva was beginning to get tired of life, the eight chief classes of these devas felt that the time had come for them to discharge their work and so went to him and requested him to save the world which was groping in unreality by pouring on it nectar-like Dharma or the spiritual law. Rishabhadeva too felt that the time for such work had come and hastened to place the administration of the kingdom in safe hands so that he could start observing the necessary austerities. After crowning Bharata as king and Bāhubali as the yuvārāja and after dividing among his other sons a number of territories, he felt that he had no more worldly mission to discharge. From that time onwards he detached himself thoroughly from the world and repaired to a forest called "Siddhārtha-vana" where he hoped to seek dīkshā.

27-௩. அரிஷ்டனு | அய்யாபாடனு | துஷிதனு | மகா-கர்த்தவனு | அருணன் குவந்தி | ஆதித்யனு | சாரஸ்வதனு முதலாகிய ஸௌகந்திகர் எண்மரும் ஐமவானுரு யிது திக்ஷா காலமென்று சொல்லுகுறது யிவாடம் உ.

Arishṭan | Apyābādhan | Tushitan | Gardatōyan | Aruṇan | Vanhi | Ādityan | Sārasvatan mudalāgiya Laukāntikar eṇmarum Bhagavadānukṛṭu yidu Dikshakālam-eṇu sollukuraḍu yivāḍam u.

"Arishṭan, Apyābādhan, Tushitan, Gardatōyan, Aruṇan, Vanhi, Ādityan, Sārasvatan—these eight Laukāntika-devas are here telling him (the Seṣāmī) that it was time for dīkshā".

¹ Umāsvāmī Āchārya, Tattvārthasūtra-Sūtra, ch. IV, sūtras 24-25 :

(1) Brahmalokālayā Laukāntikāḥ, (2) Sārasvatāditya-vaṇhiyaruṇa-gardatōya-tushitā-nyābādha-rishṭāḥ.

The Laukāntikas are heavenly beings that live in the highest parts of the fifth heaven, called Brahmaloka. They are so called because their connection with the world (loka) has come to an end. In their next birth they will be born as human beings and attain liberation. They are of eight chief classes, Sārasvata, Āditya, Vanhi, Aruṇa, Gardatōya, Tushita, Apyābādha and Arishṭa. There are sixteen subsidiary classes of these devas, two between each pair of the above eight classes. Thus there are 24 classes of them in all and the heavens where they live take their names after them. Their total number is said to be 407,806. They are all alike and are independent. They are also called devayitṭhis because they have no sexual desire. Those of the eight chief classes descend and go to the Tirthaśikharas to strengthen them in their resolve when the latter decide to renounce the world. For details see below, p. 232. See also Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 270.

In the painting these eight Laukāntika-devas are shown on the left as standing in front of Rishabhadeva sitting on a throne and addressing him with their right hands extended and palms hanging down, except the sixth from the left, in whom the position of the hands is reversed.

27-b. ஸ்வாமி ஸம்ஸார வெவராது மிருக்குறது சிவடம் உ.

Svāmi saṁsāra vairāgyaṁ yirukkuṟadu yivadam u.

"The Svāmi (Rishabhadeva) is here disgusted with worldly life."

After listening to the Laukāntika-devas Rishabhadeva lost even the little attachment that he had for the world.

He is shown sitting on a throne in a contemplative mood while an attendant is fanning him.

Painting No. 28 (pl. xiv).—This row which runs from right to left shows Rishabhadeva departing for the forest for dīkṣā.

The devas brought a palanquin or vimāna called Sudarśana and Saudharmendra helped him to get into it. It is said that at first the vimāna was lifted seven feet high from the ground by the kings of the world. Then Vidyādhara from the Videha Kṣetra took it from them and raised it seven feet more, from which height the deva-kings or the Sura-patis took it on their shoulders and proceeded to a forest called Siddhārtha.¹ Saudharmendra held a white umbrella in front of the Svāmi, Sanatkumāra and Māhendra, two other devas, held *chāmara*s on either side of him, Apsaras or heavenly nymphs danced and sang in front of him while bugles and drums were sounded to announce to the world that the Svāmi had started for dīkṣā. Thus in a pompous manner the Svāmi was carried to the forest Siddhārtha where Saudharmendra came forward and lifted him down.

ஸுடர்ஸன-உதமென்னும் விசைதத்துவெ ஸ்வாமி எழுந்தறளி திகெகூபன்(ண்)நி(ணி)கொ
ன்னபொது சிவடம் உ.

Sudarśanam-ennum vimānattule Svāmi eḷundaruḷi Dīkṣai paṇ(n) ri(ni)kolḷaporaḍu yivadam u.

"Here the Svāmi is going on a vimāna called Sudarśana, to perform dīkṣā."

The painting which is in a good state of preservation shows the procession. Four gods carry him in the vimāna. The Svāmi's right hand shows the jñāna-mudra, the pose of knowledge. Saudharmendra holds an umbrella in front. Another deva of comparatively small figure stands below the vimāna waving a chāmara on the Svāmi's side. Yet another, probably Īśānendra, carries a flag in front. Two heavenly nymphs or Apsaras are dancing while a deva behind them is beating time with his hands. Another deva who has turned away from the party and has his back to them beats a drum, which is so big that he has placed it on the ground. Yet another, the last in the painting, is blowing a bugle or trumpet.

¹ This forest is supposed to be close to Allahabad. See C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, p. 110.

Painting No. 29 (pl. xiv).—On reaching the “Siddhārtha-vana” Rishabhadeva got down from the vimāna and commenced performing dikshā. He sat crosslegged on a white moon-stone slab under a banyan tree, facing east, and divested himself of all kingly ornaments and dress even as the Buddha did. After offering his salutations to the *Siddhas*¹ to ensure success in his efforts he plucked out in five handfuls, with cheerfulness, the hair on his head and face and deposited them along with the ornaments he had on his person in bowls² made of precious stones, which were carried immediately by the devas headed by Saudharmendra and thrown in the milk-oceans (kshīra-sāgara). After the preliminaries were over he commenced standing nude and observing a very rigorous penance to exhaust all his remaining karma, this being necessary before he could obtain the kevala-jñāna or omniscience, that every Tirthaṅkara must needs acquire.

Among those that followed him to the garden were 4,000 kings, the chief of them being his brothers-in-law, Kachchha and Mahākachchha, who, out of love for him, followed him to the forest. Finding him doing penance and thinking that it was easy work which they could also do, and in a fit of passing enthusiasm, all of them plucked out their hair, removed their clothing and stood like him exposed to the weather, little realizing what they were doing and why.

Within a very short time they all regretted the step they had taken, for hunger, thirst, and the biting cold began to tell on them. They left the Svāmi to his fate and went in search of food and clothing in the forest. Though they could have returned to the city they did not do so for fear that they might be branded by Bharata and the other kings as insincere and fickle-minded and thus become objects of ridicule. With sticks they beat down fruits from trees and dug up roots from the earth and fed themselves with them wondering how the Svāmi could endure hunger. Unable to bear cold and heat they clothed themselves with the bark of trees and wondered how the Svāmi could stand for such a long time nude and exposed to the weather.

As they ceased to pluck out their hairs, the process being too painful, they soon had long jaṭās or locks on their heads. For this reason they were called Jaṭilas or people with long locks of hair and Pāṣaṇḍins or “Unbelievers”. The Pāṣaṇḍins are those that do not conform to the particular tenets of a faith. Thus the Jains would call all of alien faith Pāṣaṇḍins. The Śrī Purāṇa calls them Pāṣaṇḍins and from the fact that they happened to acquire jaṭās would compare them with the Kāpālikas and the Pāśupatas, a set of extreme or fanatical Śaivites who grew jaṭās.

It now remains to see what details in the above episode are shown in the painting. The painting, which is in a fair state of preservation with, however, the labels rubbed here and there can be divided into three convenient panels (a, b and c).

29-a. ஸ்ரீராமர் தீர்த்தவனாகிய ரிஷபதேவன் ஐந்துகூர்ப்பிடுகெனின்மெயிருந்து தீர்த்தபண்ணி
கொள்ளுகருமது யிவடம் உ ||

¹ See ibid., pp. 187-189.

² Another version is that Indra picked up these hairs, and placed them in a jewelled casket and that they were subsequently dropped into the milk-ocean. See C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, p. 110.

Svāmi Siddhārtha-vanattile chandrakānta śilaiyīṇ melirundu dīkshai paṇṇikollu-guṇadu yivaḍam. ||

"The Svāmi is here (shown) doing dīkshā seated on the moon-stone slab in Siddhārtha-vana."

Three figures are here shown, two standing and one sitting on a white slab. The sitting figure represents Rishabhadeva who is observing one of the preliminaries of dīkshā. Sitting crosslegged on the moon-stone slab (the slab is hence painted white) and removing his crown, dress and ornaments which are shown in the painting to the left, he is plucking out the hairs on his head with his right fingers (pañcha-mushtī), a painful but necessary process in dīkshā called Lōch. The two other nude figures on the right probably represent Kachchha and Mahākachchha, the Svāmi's relations, who are trying to imitate him. They are watching him plucking out his hairs.

29-b. The Svāmi is here shown standing nude under a tree, engaged in a rigorous penance. Indeed this is one of the processes in penance called kayotsarga, the party standing immovable, exposed to the weather and heedless of hunger and thirst. The same two figures, which occurred in 29-a, and which represented Kachchha and Mahākachchha are here similarly engaged, watching the Svāmi perform the penance and are trying to imitate him in the belief that form meant everything and not realization of what the form meant. They thought that they had only to imitate the Svāmi and the object that the Svāmi himself aimed at would be theirs also.

29-c. கச்சஹைகச்சஹை . . . முதலாகிய . . . ஹைதலாமல் பசுண்டிகளாகத் திவடம் ||

Kachchha-Mahāka . . . mudalāgiya . . . haṁ talaṁal Pashandigaḷ-ṇadu yivaḍam ||

"Kachchha and Mahākachchha and others . . . unable to bear thirst . . . are here (shown) becoming Pashandins (the unbelievers)."

Kachchha, Mahākachchha and the others who tried to imitate the Svāmi soon realized that they were failures. They are here shown with jaṭas or long locks of hair on their heads, with sticks in their hands with which they beat down fruits from trees and dig up roots and with bark-clothing round their loins. Three of them have the jaṭas hanging down while the other two have secured them in knots. Three out of five that hold staffs in their hands are beating down fruits from trees. The fourth who has a beard and who is probably old and is therefore unable to do the work that others are engaged in is merely standing leaning on his staff. The fifth with the staff in his hand is kneeling on the ground and is digging in search of roots. Yet another who is standing in the middle of the panel is a man of comparatively small size. He is tasting a fruit which he holds in his left hand. They have all smeared their foreheads, hands and chests with vibhūti or the sacred ash, which is a Śaivite mark, suggesting that they probably represent the Kapalikas and Pāsupatas. Indeed the fact that the figures bear the marks of Śiva, the sacred ash, in stripes on the forehead, chest and hands removes any doubt that one may entertain on this point, for the Kapalikas and the Pāsupatas, being the followers of Śiva, smeared their bodies with ashes. This custom survives to-day, every Śaivite being expected to rub the sacred ash called vibhūti on the parts where the figures in the painting are smeared. This and the jaṭās make the possibility a certainty, viz., that Kachchha and Mahākachchha and others who failed to conquer hunger and attachment to their bodies are here ridiculed for it, the highest form of ridiculing them being, in the eyes of the Jainas, a representation of them as the Kapālikas (the Pāṣaṇḍins or the unbelievers).

Painting No. 30 (pl. xiv; Coomaraswamy, pl. lxxx, 256).—This row, which is in a very good state of preservation, consists of three panels and illustrates an incident that happened in the Siddhartha-vana, where Rishabhadeva was doing penance, after Kachchha and Mahākachchha and the others had left him.

Kachchha and Mahākachchha had two sons called Nami and Vinami who were not present when Rishabhadeva divided the kingdom on the eve of his retirement from worldly life and consequently obtained no share in the divisions. These sons repaired to the forest to demand their shares from the Svāmi, little dreaming that he was different from what he was while he was king and that he had no attachment to the world. As worldly people they approached him with crowns on their heads and weapons of war in their hands. Not knowing that he was engaged just then in a rigorous penance, without taking food or drink, and that he must therefore not be disturbed, they prostrated themselves before him and stood humbly by his side being, as worldly people, bent upon attending to their own work as soon as possible. Soon they announced to him the object of their visit and requested him to do justice to them then and there. But their representations fell on deaf ears for the Svāmi's attention was devoted elsewhere, so deep and severe was the penance he was engaged in.

Meanwhile the throne of Dharapendra, one of the two Indras of the Nāga-Kumāras, a class of the *Bhavanavāsi-Devas*¹, shook and Dharapendra immediately recognized some disturbance to the Svāmi's penance, and sped to his protection. Taking the form of a man he approached Nami and Vinami and scolded them for disturbing the Svāmi, who had dissociated himself from the world long ago and who was just then engaged in a wonderful penance. He then advised them to depart and to seek the things they wanted at the hands of the Svāmi's son, Bharata. The princes resented his interference and asked him to go away saying that they would seek what they required from Rishabhadeva himself who resembled the kalpaka-vriksha or the "wish-tree" and not from ordinary and useless people like Bharata and others who resembled useless trees. Admiring their regard and devotion to the Svāmi Dharapendra revealed to them his real form and explained to them that the Svāmi, who had heard their prayers and who did not like to be disturbed just then had given him, a dāsa or humble servant of his, instructions in the matter. At first the princes felt doubtful but the sincerity and the grand appearance of Dharapendra with the snake-hoods spread over his human head infused confidence in them and they agreed to abide by his decision. As there was no portion of land left in this world which Dharapendra could give them he asked them to accompany him in his vimāna which they did. He took them to the Vidyādhara world and told the *Vidyādhara*s that Nami and Vinami were their future kings. On their agreeing to Dharanendra's proposal, he divided their world between the two princes and anointed each as king in his own part.

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 228-229.

30-a. ஸ்வாமிநெய நதி விநதி ர(இர)ண்டு பெரும் ராஜ்யம் குடுக்க பிரார்த்திக்கிறது
சிவடம் உ.

Svāmiyai Nami Vinami ra(ira)ṇḍu perum rājyam kuḍukka pirārtthikkuradu yivadam u.

"Nami and Vinami, these two people, are here requesting the Svāmi for kingdom."

Rishabhadeva is here standing in the kṛtyotsarga attitude, doing penance. Nami and Vinami are twice shown, one on either side of him, first as kneeling before him and worshipping at his feet with flowers and next as standing expecting a reply from him. They are holding battle-axes in their hands.

30-b. யரணென்று வந்து தோஷ்யந-ருவங்கொண்டு சொல்லுகிறது சிவடம் உ.

Dharanendran vandu manushyarūpan-konḍu sollukuradu yivadam u.

"Here is (shown) Dharanendra coming, and taking the form of a man speaking (to them)."

Dharanendra is here shown twice, first as an ordinary man with a turban on his head addressing the princes, who can be distinguished by the crowns on their heads, and perhaps scolding them for disturbing the Svāmi, and next as a Nāga-king, with serpent-hoods raised over his crowned head, revealing to them his real form when they asked him to mind his own business. The first finger of his right hand is in a threatening attitude (tarjint). He is of large size as it is said that his person coupled with his sincerity infused confidence in the minds of the princes.

30-c. This illustrates what followed.

பிறகு தந்து வடிவங்கொண்டு குமாரரிருவரையும் விசேதமெற்றிக்கொண்டு விஜயாத்-
பரவாதத்துக்கு போடு சிவடம் உ.

Piragu tanadu vadivunkonḍu kumārar-iruvarayum vimānameṇṇik-konḍu Vijayārtha parvatattukku poradu yivadam u.

"Here (is shown) Dharanendra going to the mountain Vijayārtha after assuming his real form and taking the princes in his vimāna."

Dharanendra, who can be distinguished by the snake-hoods over his head is here shown as taking the princes in his vimāna to the Vidyādhara world. He is seated at the extreme right of the vimāna and the princes are seated behind him, one behind the other.

Painting No. 31 (pl. xv).—This row which is also in a good state of preservation as also its label below, is in two parts and shows the coronation of the princes, Nami and Vinami as partners-in-kingship of the Vidyādhara world.

Dharanendra divided the Vidyādhara world into two and gave one half, consisting of fifty cities, to Nami and the other half consisting of sixty cities to Vinami. He himself attended to the coronation ceremony of both. Establishing Nami in the land to the south of a mountain called Vijayārdha, which stood as a convenient mark of division of the land, he anointed him there. In the land to the north of this mountain Vinami was similarly established and anointed.

யாணென்று விஜயார்த்தபர்வதக் கிழக்கே நெருணிவிலே திகழாரனை ஸூரித்து
நன்|| விஜயார்த்தபர்வதக் கிழக்கே நெருணிவிலே விஜயாரனை ஸூரித்து கரு சிவடம் உ
Dharanendran Vijayārtha-parvata-dakshina-śrēṇiyile Namikumārāṇai sthāpittanaṁ ||
Vijayārtha-parvata-uttaraśrēṇiyil Vinami-kumārāṇai sthāpittanaṁ yivadam உ.

"Dharanendra established the prince Nami in that half which fell to the south of Vijayārtha mountain."

"(Dharanendra) establishing the prince Vinami in the half, north of Vijayārtha mountain is (shown) here."

The painting shows the coronation of Nami by Dharanendra on the left and the coronation of Vinami on the right. Dharanendra is performing in both ceremonies and four Vidyādhara, one of them holding a chāmara in each case, are witnessing the function on each side. As an indication that Nami's coronation took place earlier than Vinami's, Dharanendra is shown on the left with two crowns in his hands. One he is placing on the head of Nami and the other he is holding in his left hand. When he is shown again on the right as crowning Vinami he has only one crown which he is placing on the head of Vinami. In both the scenes he can be distinguished by the snake-hoods over his head.

Painting No. 32 (pl. xv).—This row which is well preserved as also its labels is in three parts and represents the Svāmi going to the cities in search of food and returning without obtaining any.

In accordance with a custom among the Jaina ascetics that perform such a penance as the Svāmi was doing, the Svāmi roused himself from his penance after six months and went to the cities for food. He was not expected to tell anyone what he wanted but had to be silent. If any one offered him food in the manner prescribed in the Jaina texts he was to take a little of it, just enough to prevent his body from withering away, and return to the forest again where he should start his penance forthwith for another six months. This silent quest for food is called "charyā" and the Svāmi, by so going for food is said to teach to the world how a "charyā" should be done and how one who supplies food to the Svāmi acquires untold happiness.

The Svāmi went into the cities where everyone knew him. As he was silent nobody knew what he wanted or why he came there. The kings of the land brought elephants, horses, clothes, cash, and ornaments and offered them as presents to him. Some brought him water for bathing and even offered him lands. Others brought their girls and showed them to him. In short they brought him everything but food¹. And the Svāmi, finding that there was no prospect of any of them feeding him returned to the forest where he once again commenced his penance.

¹ Another version is :—Some did bring him food also, but it was not prepared and offered in the proper way, and could not be accepted. See C. R. Jain, Śīṣabhāṣya, p. 115.

32-a. ராஜாக்கள் கரிதூரமாதிகளைக்கொண்டு எதிர்கொள்ளுதலு சிவடம் உ ||

ஸ்வாமி சரிதைக்கு பொறது சிவடம் உ ||

Rājakkal kari-turagā-digaḷaik-konḍu edirkolḷuṇadu yivadam || Svāmi charikaikku poradu yivadam ||

"The kings (of the land) are here (shown) receiving (him) with elephants, horses, etc."

"The Svāmi is here going for 'charyā'."

In the painting the kings are shown welcoming him in a worldly manner befitting a royal person. They are here presumably presenting him with an elephant, horse, clothes and women. The leader of the party is accosting him with hands placed in worship.

32-b. ஸ்வாமி துறவியுமாய் தவ்வாலதத்துக்கு பொறது சிவடம் உ.

Svāmi charyā-vikṇamāy tapōvanattukku poradu yivadam ||

"The Svāmi is here (shown) going back to the forest for penance when his charyā became (thus) fruitless."

The Svāmi is here shown turning away from them and returning to the forest, where he resumed his penance.

He is shown again (on the extreme right), for a third time, this time in the kayotsarga attitude, the attitude prescribed for doing penance standing erect.

Painting No. 33 (pl. xv).—This row, which consists of four parts, represents one of the events relating to the Svāmi's second "charyā".

Somaprabha, a king or rather the founder of the Kuru dynasty, who was ruling over the city of Hastinapura was noted for the very virtuous life he was leading. He had a younger brother called Śreyānkumāra¹ who excelled even his brother in piety. One day, while sleeping, Śreyānkumāra dreamt that he saw the mountain, Mahā-Meru, the wish-giving tree (kalpaka-vriksha), a lion, a bull, the sun, the moon, the ocean and several gods and goddesses with eight kinds of auspicious things² in their hands. These dreams gave him some unknown pleasure and he hastened to narrate them to his brother. And Somaprabha, whose curiosity was aroused, sent for a purohita or preceptor whom he requested to explain their significance. The purohita explained that they all foretold that the Tirthaṅkara Rishabhadeva would come to the city for food or charyā on the following morning.

33-a. ஸோமபுரமையு ||

Somaprabhan |

"Somaprabhan."

¹ Also called Śreyāṁśa. See C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, p. 117.

² See below, p. 130.

Somaprabha is shown sitting on a throne, fanned by an attendant.

33-b. செய்யாது கூரோது ஸ்ரீயங்குமாரது ||

Śreyāṅkumāraṁ svapnaṁ kāṅguradu ||

"Śreyāṅkumāra dreaming."

Śreyāṅkumāra is here shown lying on a couch, while two men are attending on him, one massaging his legs and the other fanning him. He is evidently dreaming as explained by the label.

33-c. செய்யாது கூரோது ஸ்ரீயங்குமாரது ஸொப்பரபுலனெனெ சொல்லுகுமது ||

Śreyāṅkumāraṁ svapnaṁgaḷai Somaprabhanode śolluguradu ||

"Śreyāṅkumāra narrating his dreams to Somaprabha."

Two figures are shown here, one representing Śreyāṅkumāra and the other Somaprabha. Probably the figure on the right represents Śreyāṅkumāra for he is shown as holding his right hand in an attitude suggesting that he is speaking.

33-d. புறொதாதுகன் ஸொப்பரபுல செய்யாது கூரோது ஸ்ரீயங்குமாரது சொல்லுகுமது யிவடம் உ.

Purohitaṁ Somaprabha-Śreyāṅkumārarku svapnaphalattaichchollu(ku)radu yivadam u.

"The purohita narrating to Somaprabha and Śreyāṅkumāra the significance of the latter's dreams."

The two brothers are here shown listening to the purohita who is seated on the right, in front of them. He is holding his right hand in the same attitude in which Śreyāṅkumāra is holding in fig. 33-c, suggesting that he is engaging them in a conversation, himself being the speaker. He is evidently explaining the significance of the dreams to the brothers.

Painting No. 34 (pl. xv).—This painting is in the centre of the ceiling and is marked by a square projection of the stone within which a full-blown lotus is designed. The lotus petals were carved on the stone and have been painted over. The whole is well finished with yāli heads marking the four corners. Unfortunately, however, a hook has been driven into the centre of the lotus and a rod inserted in it to suspend lamps from it. There are two scenes, one on the right and the other on the left of this square projection.

34-a. செய்யாதுகூரோது ஸ்ரீயங்குமாரது ஸ்வாமி சரியைக்கி வாரொன்று தாதன் வந்து சொல்லுகுமது யிவடம் உ.

Śreyāṅkumāraṁde Svāmi chariyaikki varārenṇu dūtaṁ vandu śolluguradu yivadam u.

"A messenger narrating to Śreyāṅkumāra that the Svāmi was coming for charyā."

The brothers are here shown sitting eagerly awaiting the arrival of Rishabhadeva when a messenger enters and with hands held together in worship announces the arrival of the Svāmi.

34-b. ஸ்வாமி சரியைக்கி வர செய்யாதுகூரோது யெதிரகொண்டு அழைக்குமது யிவடம் உ.

Svāmi chariyaikki vara Śreyāṅkumāraṁ yedirkonḍu aḷaikkuradu yivadam u.

"The Svāmi coming for charyā, Śreyāṅkumāra is here (shown) receiving him and inviting him."

The brothers are here shown approaching the Svāmi bareheaded and worshipping him by kneeling at his feet, and then standing up and with their hands placed together in worship (añjali) requesting him to accept food from them.

Though in both the labels only Śreyāṅkumāra is mentioned, Somaprabha finds a place in the painting probably because he too felt like his brother in the matter.¹

Painting No. 35 (pl. xvi).—Rishabhadeva was taken into his palace by Śreyāṅkumāra who led him to a top-floor in the palace. Arrived there, Śreyāṅkumāra served him with a few morsels of food mixed with the juice extracted from sugarcane. His brother assisted him by getting water ready for washing hands and feet and for drinking. It is said that when the Svāmi was fed the gods of the heavens poured down on the party flowers, and in the palace gold pieces, in commemoration of the feeding.

After partaking of the food thus offered the Svāmi left for the wood, accompanied by the brothers till the city limits where they respectfully took leave of him. On reaching the wood he once again commenced his penance, at one time doing one kind of yoga or meditation called "Sthavira-kalpa" and at another, closely following this, another kind of yoga more rigorous than the former, called "Jina-kalpa." These two kinds of yoga he practised in a standing attitude. During the intervals he travelled widely.

Thus for 1,000 years he did severe penance and austerities, till one day he entered a city called Purimatālapura and in it a garden called "Śakata-mukhya." There he found a rock convenient for further penances, under a big spreading banyan-tree and sitting on it in the paryāṅka-āsana or cross-legged he attained the state of a kevalī or one endowed with *kevala-jñāna or omniscience.

This is the final preliminary stage in the career of any Tirthaṅkara on the eve of his becoming one. And after he becomes a kevalī the gods create for him a heavenly pavilion called "Samavasaraṇa," seated in the centre of which every Tirthaṅkara expounds dharma and is accessible to all.

35-a. ஸ்ரீயாழிக்கு ஸ்ரீயாழிக்கு-ஓரோது ஸ்ரீயாழிக்கு-ஓரோது பண்ணாது சிவடம் உ ||

Svāmikku Śreyāṅkumāraṇ āhāradānam paṇṇadu yivaḍam உ ||

"Here did Śreyāṅkumāra give food to the Svāmi."

¹ For details about Śreyāṅkumāra's past births as (1) Svayamprabhā and (2) Śrīmati see C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, p. 117.

* The Jāinas recognize five kinds of knowledge—

- (1) Mati-jñāna, sense knowledge.
- (2) Śruta-jñāna, scriptural knowledge.
- (3) Avadhi-jñāna, direct visual knowledge or clairvoyance.
- (4) Manah-paryaya-jñāna, direct mental knowledge or telepathy.
- (5) Kevala-jñāna, perfect or all embracing knowledge or omniscience.

For details see Umāsvāmī, Tattvārthasūtra-Sūtra, Ch. I, sūtras 13—29; Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, pp. 61—65.

The Svāmi is shown here as standing on an elevated lotus-pedestal. Śreyānkumāra is offering him something round, probably the food said to have been mixed up with the juice of sugarcane, taken from a tray near by which contains some more of the same kind of food. Somaprabha stands behind Śreyānkumāra with a water-vessel in his hands. Both the brothers are in an attitude of reverence and humility, bareheaded and bare-footed and with their upper clothes tied round their waists.¹

The various star-like things behind the Svāmi indicate the shower of flowers and gold that the gods are said to have dropped down. The feeding is said to have taken place on the top-floor of the palace. Three small vimānas and two finials between them indicate the palace.

35-b. ஸ்வாமி தபொவாத்தகூக்கு பொருது யிவடம் உ ||

Svāmi tapovanattukku poradu yivaḍam u. ||

"The Svāmi is here (shown) going to the forest."

The Svāmi is here departing for the forest accompanied by the brothers up to some distance, who, this time have crowns on their heads and clothes covering their chests while their hands are respectfully placed together in worship probably indicating that they are taking leave of the Svāmi.

35-c. ஸ்வாமி கரமகசாயம் பண்ணுகுறது யிவடம் உ

Svāmi karmmakshayam paṇṇuguraḍu yivaḍam u.

"The Svāmi exhausting his karma here."

The Svāmi is shown here in two stages, first as standing under a small tree and next as sitting under a big tree. Standing he is doing the yoga called "Sthavira-kalpa" and "Jina-kalpa." He is shown next in the attitude in which he is said to have become a kevalī. The painting here strictly answers the description given in the Śrī Purāṇa (Vol. I). The big tree over him is the spreading banyan-tree and the Svāmi is sitting under it in the pariyāika-āsana.

Painting No. 36 (pl. xvi).—Such an event as the acquisition of kevala-jñāna by the World-Teacher (Tīrthaṅkara) was not likely to remain unnoticed. The first to observe it were naturally the devas by some specific signs that happened in their heavens from which they realized the importance of the event and ran to the place where the Svāmi was, in order to worship him and to enable him to teach and preach the Truth to the world. Under instructions from the Indra of the first heaven celestial artisans erected a heavenly pavilion called the Samavasaraṇa. The World-Teacher was expected to take his seat in it, above a lotus and deliver discourses, to hear which all the devas, men and animals flocked and were given places in this heavenly structure. Thus the samavasaraṇa, which consists of two words, sama and avasaraṇa, was just a construction made by an Indra, "and in default of him, by the gods and pre-eminently amongst them, the ¹ The Jains share with the Hindus the custom of being bare-bodied and bare-footed when visiting sacred places, like temples, etc., and when paying obeisance to great men and elders.

Vyantaras";¹ for the World-Teacher to sit in the midst of a huge congregation consisting of all the gods and other forms of creation and preach the Truth, immediately after he attains to the condition of a kevali. All the 24 Tīrthaṅkaras have their own samavasaraṇas. Like all other objects, sacred to the Jains, such as Ashtāpada, Sammata, Śatruñjaya and so forth, Samavasaraṇa is also sculptured. "Not a single Jaina temple of eminence exists without a sculpture of samavasaraṇa in it . . . like the Channukh or Ashtāpada, even temples are built dedicated to samavasaraṇa".²

Dr. Bhandarkar, the eminent archæologist, who has an interesting article on the Samavasaraṇa in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XL, pp. 125-130, 153-161, exclaims on page 160, "I have not yet found any samavasaraṇa which faithfully depicts all or even almost all the details set forth in the works." The pictures of samavasaraṇa that he is illustrating and describing in his article clearly follow the description of the samavasaraṇa found in Hemachandra's *Trishasṭi-śalākāpuruṣa-charitra*³ (first and second parvas) published by the Śrī-Jaina-Dharma-prachāraka-sabha of Bhavnagar, and Dharmaghosha-sūri's Samavasaraṇa-stavana. They consist of only three "ramparts with battlements" and are therefore less in details and elaborateness than representations of the samavasaraṇa at Tiruparuttikunṅam, which follow the descriptions found in the Digambara works such as the Śrī Purāṇa, Merumandara Purāṇa⁴ and Ādi Purāṇa⁵. In contrast to those described by Dr. Bhandarkar the samavasaraṇas here are elaborately painted and faithfully depict almost all the details set forth in the above works. It is necessary that a brief description of these details should be set forth first before attempting to describe the paintings themselves:—

The word samavasaraṇa is a compound of two words, sama meaning general or common, and avasara, meaning opportunity, the whole giving the idea that it denotes a place where all have a common or equal opportunity of hearing the World-Teacher and acquiring divine knowledge, or "where souls get the opportunity to attain to dispassion".⁶

This structure was the work of the devas and as such excelled everything that the human eye had ever beheld in the world. It stood above ground, circular in form, with a

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 229-230.

² Ind. Ant., Vol. XL, p. 160.

³ Hemachandra who converted to the Jaina faith King Kumārapāla of Gujrat and must therefore have lived in the latter half of the twelfth century. For discussion on this, see Ind. Ant., Vol. II, "Papers on Śatruñjaya", pp. 15 and 195.

⁴ A Tamil classic, relating to Jaina philosophy and religion, the author of which is Vāmana also called Malliṣheṇa, who flourished at Tiruparuttikunṅam in the fourteenth century. The best edition of this work is by Professor A. Chakravarti of the Presidency College, Madras, published 1923.

⁵ A Jaina compilation ascribed to Jināsena Āchārya, who is said to have lived in the reign of Vikramāditya, but who was probably much later. A tradition current in South India speaks of him as the guru of king Amoghavarsha, who is said to have ruled in Kāñchi in the sixth century. See Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 198.

See also Fleet, Dynasties of the Kanarese Districts, pp. 394, 406-8, where Ādi-Purāṇa is said to have been done by Jināsena in about 814-5 A.D.

See also above, p. 6.

⁶ C. R. Jain, Śatruñjaya, p. 134.

diameter of twelve yojanas.¹ Its floor was paved throughout with blue-crushed gems (nila-maṇi). On its four sides were 20,000 steps of gold, for all creatures to climb up to hear the World-Teacher's sermons. Above these steps were four wide roads, one from each cardinal point, which crossed the ground of the blue gems and led towards the centre. On either side of these roads there were *vedikās*² made of crystal provided with doorways, above which arches and flags and festoons flew producing a pleasing effect.

On the outer side of this ground, that is to say, enclosing it, was a wide Sāla or wall³ called Dhūlisāla which was made of gems and other precious stones of different colours, which glistened in the sun, producing rainbow effects allround. On the top of the wall were fixed banners and flags and festoons that fluttered in the breeze as if they were beating time to the music that the celestial damsels were producing in theatres situated within the wall near the entrances found on the wall.

Enclosed by this wall was the first region called Chaitya-prāsāda-bhūmi, one krośa × $\frac{1}{4}$ krośa which consisted of palaces (prāsādas) and chaityas or Jina-bhavanas or temples of the Jina, the latter being placed between every five palaces. The four roads continued here too and were flanked by theatres and dancing halls where celestial nymphs entertained those that were lucky enough to reach that region with songs and plays from the previous lives of the World-Teacher. Where each of the four roads reached this region was a huge column called Mānastambha (literally pride-pillar), the sight of which was sufficient to deprive the onlookers of pride and attachment to the body. These Mānastambhas were placed on pedestals which rose up in three terraces and were reached by a flight of sixteen steps, eight for the lower terrace, four for the intermediate and four for the top terrace. On the tops of these columns flew flags and festoons, while niches below these flags and festoons contained images of the Jina, the sight of which was sufficient to remove darkness and misconceptions in the minds of the faithful. The platform on which each of the Mānastambhas stood was surrounded by three enclosures with doors facing the four cardinal points and opening on to four beautiful lakes filled with crystal water in which the faithful washed their feet before proceeding further.

Bounding the first region (Chaitya-prāsāda-bhūmi) on its inner side was a vedikā lined with gold which was provided with four gateways, one for each cardinal point, over which flew flags, etc., and where sweet jingling bells sent their pleasing notes to far off places where the faithful heard them and were thrilled by them.

¹ 24 āṅgulas (inches) make one hasta; 4 hastas make one dhanu or chūpa; 2,000 dhanus or chūpas make one krośa; 4 krośas make one yojana. There are two kinds of yojanas, one small which is equal to 8 miles, and the other big equalling 4,000 miles. Here the bigger yojana is meant.

² Vedikā or Vedī has been interpreted in different ways in accordance with its definitions found in the Sūlpaśāstra such as Mānasa and Aśvinmad-bheda-āgama. Such are:—A platform, an altar, a railing (see P. K. Acharya, Indian Architecture according to Mānasa-Sūlpaśāstra, pp. 61, 87 and 92), a dais, a basis or basement, a pedestal, some platform other than pedestal or throne of the idol, rail-moulding, a moulding such as that of a column, "bands of string course carved with rail-pattern," portion above the neck-part of a building, a stand, bench, arbour, a kind of covered veranda or balcony in a court-yard, a hall for reading the Vedas in (see P. K. Acharya, A Dictionary of Hindu Architecture, pp. 564-7), marriage pavilion, plinth, and a mode of sitting (āsana) (see A. K. Coomaraswamy, Indian Architectural Terms (J.A.O.S., Vol. XLVIII, p. 273).

³ Sāla or Sālā means generally a wall or rampart and sometimes an apartment and a house (see P. K. Acharya, A Dictionary of Hindu Architecture, p. 628).

This vedikā formed the boundary of a region of water called Khātikā-bhūmi which was filled with crystal water, water-beings like fishes, etc., lotuses and water-lilies and water-birds like the swan (haṁsa). It was provided with steps made of precious stones. Its dimensions were like those of the first region (Chaityaprasāda-bhūmi).

Within this again there was the second vedikā which enclosed a forest called Vallī-bhūmi full of pleasant scenery consisting of creepers like jasmine, etc., and wooded bowers and raised seats in the midst of clear spaces as in modern parks. This was intended for the faithful who required an airing. The dimensions of this third region were twice those of the first region.

Bordering the forest was a wall (sāla), the second wall in the structure, which resembled in all respects the Dhūlisāla. This was provided with tower-like gateways which were guarded by the Yaksha-kumāras.¹ These gates were as usual, one facing each cardinal point, and were decorated with paintings of animals and female figures.

Within this wall and enclosed by it was a garden (Upavana-bhūmi) where wooded avenues of aśoka (Saraca indica), chāmpaka (Michelia champaka), chūta (the mango), and saptachchhada (a kind of tree whose leaves range themselves in clusters of seven, whence its name) delighted the hearts of the faithful that came to attend the World-Teacher's discourses. The dimensions of this fourth region were twice those of the first region. As in the previous region there were theatres in it where dances and music were a permanent feature.

Within this again there was a third vedikā resembling the second, the four gates of which were guarded by the Yaksha-kumāras. On going in through the gates the spectator's gaze fell on a row of fluttering banners for which reason the region enclosed by it came to be called the region of flags (Dhvaja-bhūmi). Its dimensions were twice those of the first region. These flags were 108 of each specific mark, in each direction, and the total number of them in the whole region came to 470,980. They bore the following marks, lion, elephant, bull, Garuḍa (the brahman-kite), peacock, moon, sun, swan, lotus, and discus (chakra).²

Behind the row of flags was a wall (sāla) resembling the Dhūlisāla, but twice its dimensions, again provided with the four gates, on either side of which were the usual music halls and the theatres. Within this wall and enclosed by it was the Kalpaka-vṛkṣa-bhūmi, the sixth region, of dimensions twice those of the first region, and containing rows of the ten kinds of kalpa trees called pāṇāṅga, turyāṅga, bhūṣaṅga, vastrāṅga, bhōjanāṅga, ālayāṅga, dīpāṅga, bhājanāṅga, mālyāṅga and jyōtirāṅga.³ These trees were scattered about in the wood in elegant confusion, and from their illuminations produced a fairy scene of exquisite loveliness. Images of the Jinas were installed on platforms of gold which were placed under trees of bewitching beauty that shed brilliant light all round. There were as usual theatres and music halls from which celestial music went round and delighted the hearts of the faithful.

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 229-230.

² In other texts, in the place of the sun and the moon a garland and a piece of cloth are given. Also see C. R. Jain, Nīkabhāṣya, p. 129.

³ See above, p. 78.

Within this region again there was the fourth vedikā which resembled the first and which was provided with four gates, one for each direction, guarded by the *Nāga-kumāras*¹. Within this vedikā and enclosed by it was the seventh region called Bhavana-bhūmi, which consisted of mansions and other habitations built of precious stones and metals. Its dimensions were like those of the first region. In it were innumerable mansions over which flew triumphantly flags and banners, and from within which rang sweet notes of celestial music produced by the devas and their damsels. Again, in this region, in every street, there arose a line of nine stūpas or places of worship and these stūpas were called Loka, Madhyamaloka, Mandara, Graiveyaka, Sarvārthasiddhi, Siddhi, Bhavya, Moha and Bodhi² respectively. Within these stūpas were installed images of Jinas and *Siddhas*³ to whom worship was offered to the accompaniment of celestial music and dance. Between every two stūpas were hung makara-toranas which by waving in the wind appeared to invite in the faithful (bhavyas) so that they can do abhisheka or the bathing ceremony to the gods and Siddhas installed in.

Within this region was another wall (sāla) called Ākāśa-sphatika-sāla, so called because it was made of white crystal. It was provided with the usual four gates, one for each cardinal point, guarded by the *Kalpavāsi-devas*⁴. Its dimensions were like those of the Dhūlisāla. Beyond this wall was a clean open space, one yojana by one yojana (here yojana equals eight miles)⁵, which was set apart for the grand congress that was to assemble to listen to the World-Teacher's discourses. In the centre of this open space was erected a mandapa or pavilion called Lakṣmīvara-mandapa. This mandapa was divided into twelve equal compartments or halls (kōṣṭhas) by sixteen walls of crystal that were supported on pillars of gold.

The people that were assembled in these halls were as follows: commencing from the eastern direction, in the first hall were apostles (Gaṇadharas) and many other saints of seven classes (Pūrvadharas, Vikrīyāridhi-prāptas, Avadhijñānins, Kevalins, Manah-paryaya-jñānins, Vādis, and Śikṣhakas); in the second hall *Kalpavāsi-devas*⁶ or the ladies of the

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 218-229.

² This term meaning "enlightenment" is common in Buddhist parlance, being associated with Sākya Muni Buddha's attainment of divine knowledge under the pipal tree at Bodh Gaya. Later on the tree became to the Buddhists an object of worship under the name "bodhi" tree.

³ The Siddhas are liberated souls and are many in number. They are exactly like the Tīrthaṅkaras in all respects in so far as innate virtues and attainments are concerned. They are endowed with all the attributes as the Tīrthaṅkaras, even with kevala-jñāna, but no "samavasarapa" is created for them. No such pomp surrounds them for they do not preach to people like the Pacchaka-Buddhas in Buddhism, for teaching is not their mission in life in the same way as it is that of the Tīrthaṅkaras. The place of these liberated souls is called Siddha-kṣētra. For details see Appendix III, pp. 187-190.

⁴ See Appendix III, pp. 231-234.

⁵ See Appendix III, pp. 231-234.

⁶ See C. R. Jain, Viśvaśāradā, p. 130.

heavens (kalpas); in the third hall nuns and women in general (Āryakaśrāvaki-samūha); in the fourth hall devīs of the Jyotishka or stellar regions¹, in the fifth hall devīs of the class of celestials called Vyantarās or Vānavyantarās or the peripatetics²; in the sixth hall devīs of the class of celestials known as the *Bhavana-vāsins*³ or the residentials; in the seventh hall Bhavana-vāsins or the residential celestial beings, consisting of ten orders, viz., Asura, Nāga, Vidyuta, Suparna, Agni, Vāta, Stanita, Udadhi, Dvīpa, and *Dik-kumāras*⁴; in the eighth hall another group of celestials called the Vyantarās or the peripatetics which consisted of eight orders, viz., Kinnara, Kimpurusha, Mahoraga, Gandharva, Yaksha, Rākshasa, Bhūta and Pisācha; in the ninth hall the five kinds of the Jyotishkas or the Stellars, viz., the sun, moon, planets, constellations, and scattered stars; in the tenth hall Kalpavāsi-devas or heavenly beings consisting of twelve classes corresponding to twelve heavens in which they live⁵; in the eleventh hall kings, chieftains, men and other common beings that move on the ground and in the sky; and in the twelfth hall animals such as elephant, lion, tiger, deer, rat, cat, etc., and birds.

Within these compartments and enclosed by them was a vedikā, the fifth in the list, which was similar to the fourth wall or sala above described. Within this vedikā was the first pedestal or platform (prathama-pīṭha) which had sixteen steps on each side, where Yakshendras stood with dharma-chakras on their heads. All the members of the assembly (such as Gaṇadharas), got on this pedestal and after circumambulating on it and offering worship to the World-Teacher returned to their respective halls. On this pedestal there was a second one (dvitīya-pīṭha) which had eight steps facing each cardinal point, on which were placed objects of worship like flags bearing the marks of bull, lotus, chakra, Garuḍa, elephant, incense-vases, nine nidhis or treasures, other auspicious things and materials necessary for pūja or worship. And over this pedestal again there was the third and last pedestal (trītiya-pīṭha) which was round like the sun and made of various precious stones. On its four sides, answering the four cardinal points, were eight steps as in the case of the second pedestal.

In the centre of this pedestal was erected a bower called Gandhakūṭi "that attracted every eye by the loveliness of its design"; fragrance from heavenly incense and illumination from innumerable lights filled the atmosphere. In the centre of this Gandhakūṭi was placed the throne of God, a lion-throne (siṃhāsana) in which were embedded all the precious stones and gems of the world and the heavens put together. In the centre of this throne was placed a blossomed thousand-petalled lotus flower with the seed-vessel showing prominently, over which sat the World-Teacher, without however touching it, but suspended in the air about four fingers or two inches above it. "His face shone radiant like a thousand suns shining in one place. Sixty-four Indras (heavenly kings) stood in attendance on him, waving *chāmara*s". While he was thus seated, the faithful were able to observe that they were all able to conquer gravitation and possess the power of levitation, that they could live without food or water, that their eyes never closed or winked, that their bodies cast no shadow, that their hairs and nails grew no more, that ferocious natures and forces were tamed, animals that were naturally hostile became friends before him, that flowers and fruits appeared in seasons when they were not expected and that "peace and plenty" (śānti) prevailed everywhere. When seated in the śamavasaraṇa, the World-Teacher, who now fully deserved the title of Tirthaṅkara, appeared to be looking in all the four directions, though he only sat facing the east. This was also the case with all the other Tirthaṅkaras. When he spoke, he spoke in the Sarvārtha-māgadhi language which resembled the roar of surging oceans and was distinctly heard by every one present. With regard to his speech it is said in many works on Jainism that it was produced independently of the movements of the glottis, "and is for that reason termed anakshari (without letters)." The *Gaṇadhara*s who were in the first hall heard his speeches and interpreted them to all assembled. It is said that they arranged all his teachings under twelve main heads which later on came to be called *aṅgas*¹, and the whole subject matter of these aṅgas is termed Śruti or Śruta-jñāna, because of its having been heard from the World-Teacher. These aṅgas are nowadays symbolically represented by a book resting on a folding book-rack (pl. xxxvi, fig. 2) or by a tree with twelve branches which is called the "tree of Wisdom Divine."²

¹ See Appendix II, p. 182.² *Ibid.*³ See Appendix III, pp. 229-230.⁴ Ibid., p. 231.⁵ Ibid., pp. 228-229.

Immediately after the discourse by the World-Teacher was over, many men and women determined to follow the Lord on the path of virtue (Dharma) set forth by him. The foremost among them was Rishabhasena, one of the younger brothers of Bharata, who was formerly the pandit of the Tirthaṅkara when he was born as Vajrajaṅgha, and

¹ The twelve aṅgas according to Hemachandra are :—

- (1) Āchāra-aṅga, a work on sacred usages like the rules of conduct for ascetics.
- (2) Sūtrakṛita-aṅga, a work on general instructions, religious rites and differences between the rites of one's own religion and those of the religions of others.
- (3) Sthāna-aṅga, a work on the sense organs and the conditions of life—a work dealing with sthānas or points of view regarding soul (jīva), matter (padgula) and other dravyas or substances.
- (4) Samavāya-aṅga, a work on the categories (padārthas).
- (5) Vyākhyāna-prajñapti or Bhagavati or Vivāha-prajñapti, gives an account of the 60,000 questions put to the Tirthaṅkara by his chief disciples. Most of these relate to ceremonies attendant on divine service (archanā).
- (6) Jñātyadharmakathā-aṅga also called Dharma-kathā-aṅga, a work representing the knowledge that is communicated by the knowers on subjects like the nature of the nine categories (padārthas), jīva, etc.
- (7) Upāsaka-darśa or Upāsakadhyaṇa-aṅga, a work on the manner of living enjoined on the Śrāvakas, who are only lay people.
- (8) Antakṛd-darśa-aṅga, speaks of the doings of the Tirthaṅkaras and gives an account of the ten ascetics who, in the period of each of the twenty-four Tirthaṅkaras, undergo tortures of asceticism and finally become liberated from bondage.
- (9) Anuttaropapādaka-darśa-aṅga, speaks of the ten ascetics who as a result of their asceticism took birth in the Anuttara heavens (vivānas). Here is also mentioned the future births of the Tirthaṅkaras and the question of salvation is discussed.
- (10) Pratītyakāraṇa-aṅga, a code of Jain law (dharma) in the shape of questions. It furnishes an account of the four kinds of narration.
- (11) Vipākā-mūtra-aṅga, detailing the fruits of actions, contains an exposition of bondage, operation of karma, etc.
- (12) Dṛṣṭi-pravāda-aṅga, a work divided into five parts :—5 Parikarmas, Sūtra, Prathamānuśaṅga, 14 Pūrvagatas, and 5 Chulikās, for details of which see Tattvārthasiddhigama-sūtra, Ch. I, sūtra 20, pp. 29-38.

² C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, plate to face p. 136.

who now became the first *Gaṇadhara*¹ or apostle of the Tirthaṅkara. Then came the turn of Somaprabha and Śreyāṁśa or Śreyāṅkumāra, those illustrious brothers who were associated with the Svāmi's charyā or feeding described on pp. 102-4. Bharata, the son of the World-Teacher, to whose care he had entrusted the kingdom, worshipped his father in the samavasaraṇa and after getting enlightened as to spiritual science, a subject that could be explained only by a Tirthaṅkara, left for his kingdom in the world.

After he had departed, Saudharmendra (the Indra of the first heaven) summoned his retinue of dancers and performed a dance more to express his feelings of joy than to entertain anybody in the samavasaraṇa for no one had time to witness his performance, so engrossed were they with the work that they then had on hand, viz., to take advantage of the Tirthaṅkara's presence in their midst and in the samavasaraṇa, a structure which is not to be found often but only occasionally. After thus entertaining himself and his host he requested the Tirthaṅkara to leave the samavasaraṇa and proceed to the other parts of the world where many bhavyas (the faithful) were in need of his discourses. The Tirthaṅkara assenting, a procession was formed, and the Tirthaṅkara proceeded on his divine mission, "surrounded by devas and men, in the midst of scenes of great enthusiasm and heavenly pomp, which the residents of heavens brought together to glorify the World-Teacher".

In the painting the *samavasaraṇa*², which is circular in form is shown in plan on a red back-ground which should be taken to represent the region that stood above the earth, five thousand dhanus in height. Rishabhadeva, now the World-Teacher (Tirthaṅkara), is seated in the centre of the samavasaraṇa facing east, though he would appear to the congregation as facing all directions. To the west of the samavasaraṇa a long column is shown in elevation. This represents the mānastambha or "pride-pillar". Though placed here outside the circular structure, its legitimate position should be within the first circular enclosure. But such a representation can, perhaps, be justified, for in the case of many Jaina temples the mānastambha finds a place not within the temple enclosures but outside their gopuras or entrances, the idea being that the visitor to these temples should first cast his eyes on the mānastambha so that his misconceptions may get removed on sight of it. Additional authenticity is given to such a representation by some North Indian Jaina paintings representing the samavasaraṇa in which also the mānastambha occupies a similar place³.

This pillar is placed on a pedestal which does not appear to be in three terraces nor is it flanked by the steps mentioned in the description. On this base rests a long shaft, the region of its capital showing a circular abacus and over it a pavilion in which images of the Jina were installed. Here we can make out within the pavilion the seated figure of the Jina with the bhā-maṇḍala or the halo over his head. Though there were, according to the text, four such pillars, one for each direction, only one is shown here as also in the painting at Arrah because it was evidently felt that even one was sufficient to indicate the purpose for which these pillars were intended.

¹ Tattvārthasūtra, Ch. I, sūtra 20—*Gaṇadhara*s are apostles who arrange the āgas and pūrvas. They have all the five kinds of knowledge except kevala-jñāna or perfect knowledge.

² The samavasaraṇa forms also the subject of the ceiling paintings at Śittannavaśal and Tirumalai. For discussion see above, p. 62, f.n. 1.

³ See painting in the Jaina Siddhanta Bhavan, Arrah, figured in C. R. Jain's Rishabhadeva, facing p. 129.

The flower-like circular designs shown in white at the four corners serve merely purposes of decoration¹. Four Gandharvas, two on the north-west and two on the south-west of the samavasaraṇa shower down flowers which are supposed to be falling upon it but are actually shown outside it leaving, however, space for the steps that lead to it. This shower of flowers will be further explained below.

The circular structure is divided into its various regions by concentric circles which are crossed by the four roads from the four cardinal points. Their 20,000 steps are indicated by transverse white lines.

The first circle represents the wall called Dhūlisāla and enclosed by it is the region called Chaitya-prāsāda-bhūmi. This is the wide band that lies between the first circle and the second. A row of pavilions running all along the circle represents the prāsādas and the Jina-bhavanas with which this region was filled.

The second circle represents the vedikā between the first and second regions. The space enclosed by the second and third circles constitutes the Khātikā-bhūmi or region of water. Water-creepers and other water-plants including the lotus and the water-lily are shown, though it is difficult to make them out easily.

The third circle represents the second vedikā between the second region and the third or Vallī-bhūmi. This (Vallī-bhūmi) is bounded on the inner side by a fourth concentric circle. In it can be made out the creepers and other plants with which it was filled.

The fourth circle represents the second sāla or wall resembling the Dhūlisāla. Though in the description this and the other sālas and vedikās were said to have gateways guarded by various devas they are not indicated in the painting, it being scarcely possible to show them. Similarly the various music-halls and theatres that were situated beyond the gates and from which celestial music emanated to please the bhavyas do not find a place in the painting. Within this sāla lies the fourth region, the Upavana-bhūmi. This is indicated in the painting by a space containing a row of trees which represent no doubt the wooded avenues of āsoka, chāmpaka, chūta, saptachchhada, etc., that delighted the hearts of the bhavyas that came to that region.

The fifth concentric circle represents the third vedikā which enclosed a region where flew a number of banners, for which reason it was called Dhvaja-bhūmi. Though some of the flags which, according to the text numbered 470,980 are shown, the emblems that they bore, such as the lion, elephant, etc., can hardly be made out in the painting.

The sixth concentric circle represents the third sāla or wall which enclosed the sixth region called Kalpaka-vṛikṣa-bhūmi, where were found "wish-trees" belonging to the ten categories described above (p. 78). In the space between the sixth and seventh circles a row of trees can be made out which represent them.

¹ Cf. Painting No. 45.

The seventh circle represents the fourth vedikā which enclosed the seventh region called *Bhavana-bhūmi*¹, which consisted of mansions and habitations of precious stone and metals. Within the space between the seventh and the eighth concentric circles can be made out a row of houses looking more like pavilions or temples such as we find in the first region (Chaityaprasāda-bhūmi), than like ordinary houses. This has no doubt been done for the sake of symmetry and uniformity as mansions would vary in form. The nine stūpas, the makara-toranas and other music-halls mentioned in this region do not find a place in the painting for obvious reasons.

The eighth concentric circle represents the fourth sāla or wall called Ākāśa-sphaṭika-sāla. The circular space enclosed by this sāla represents the clean, open space which was set apart for the Grand Assembly and in which the Lakshmīvara-maṇḍapa was installed. Radial lines resembling the spokes of a wheel divide this region into 12 halls or compartments (koṣṭhas), divided into groups of three by the four roads that pass from the first region to the World-Teacher in the centre, and the white patches in them represent four gateways to which steps from below lead and through which the faithful will have to pass to reach the actual place where the World-Teacher is seated. The twelve halls contain two representatives of their respective occupants in each.

Starting from the east and proceeding clockwise, we find in the first hall two naked men who are presumably two of the Gaṇadharas who heard the Lord's sermons and collected them into twelve aṅgas. For the other sages and saints such as the *Pūrvadhara*s etc., there is no room. Another possible interpretation would be that the man in front represented the Gaṇadharas and that the one seated behind was a representative of this saint-class. In either case the former probably represents Ṛishabhasena, the first Gaṇadhara of Ṛishabhadeva. He is squatting with crossed legs, the right hand raised up to the level of his breast in the upadeśa-mudrā or teaching pose while the left hand rests on his lap indicating yoga or meditation. The pose of the right hand would mean that he is interpreting the discourses of the Lord for the ordinary folk to understand. The second person in the hall is similarly seated and posed. Hence he may be taken to be more probably the second Gaṇadhara. If so, it is not clear whom he represents, Śreyāmsā or Somaprabha.

In the second hall two representatives of the Kalpavatsi-devīs are seated. They are dressed figures and have small crowns on their heads befitting their status while their hands are folded against their breasts in añjali (worship).

In the third hall two ladies are seated; they are the representatives of the class of nuns and other women (āryakā-śrāvakīs). While their hands are in poses like those of the occupants of the first hall they are dressed in white cloth which are drawn over their heads as is the case with widows in South India, particularly in the Brahman community. Next to this hall comes the road from the south, containing the entrance into the region above, which is represented by a gopura.

¹ Or Gṛihāṅga-bhūmi according to Merumandara Purāṇa (p. 39). Gṛihāṅga means the same as Bhavana.

In the fourth compartment are two other figures, the representatives of the devīs of the Jyotishka or stellar heavens. In the matter of dress and decoration they are like the Kalpavāsi-devīs in the second compartment. In the fifth hall two representatives of the Vyantara-devīs of the peripatetic heavens are seated who also resemble the Kalpavāsi-devīs. In the sixth hall two representatives of the devīs of the Bhavanavāsi regions, resembling the Kalpavāsi-devīs, are seated. Next to this hall comes the road from the west, with a gopura through which the faithful should pass to go above.

Then comes the seventh hall where two representatives of the Bhavanavāsi-devas are shown sitting. They wear conical crowns on their heads (kirītas) and are dressed with an undergarment and a shirt, the latter showing in yellow a corset against the breasts such as we find in the dress of actors in Indian dramas that impersonate ancient kings. Their hands are posed like those of the occupants of the first hall. Next to this is the eighth hall in which two Vyantara-devas representing the whole Vyantara heaven are seated. They are dressed and posed as the two Bhavanavāsi-devas in the preceding hall.

The ninth hall comes next and in it are seated two representatives of the Jyotishka-devas, dressed like the Bhavanavāsi-devas but not similarly posed. They have their hands folded against their breasts in añjali, a pose that the text prescribes for all these devas. Next to this hall is the road from the north where a gopura can be discerned similar to the southern and western gopuras already mentioned.

Then comes the tenth hall in which are two representatives of the Kalpavāsi-devas, who resemble the Bhavanavāsi-devas shown in the seventh hall. One of these two, the one sitting behind the other, has his hands folded in añjali against his breast. In the eleventh hall are seated two persons representing all ranks of mankind. They are dressed and posed like the occupants of the ninth hall. Next and last we come to the twelfth hall where were assembled all the animals of God's creation. In the compartment we can make out three animals, all facing the right and standing one below the other. The one on the top is a lion of the conventional type known to South India,¹ the next is a deer in the act of leaping, and below it stands a spotted leopard or cheetah. The tail of the lion ends in a loop. Between this hall and the first one comes the road from the east with its gopura.

Enclosed by these halls is the last circle in the whole structure, which represents the fifth vedikā. Within this, on a throne, the pedestal or the base of which is in the form of a pyramid agreeing with the description that it arose in three successive terraces, is seated the World-Teacher with legs crossed and hands placed on lap in meditation. Behind him is a cushion or rest on which he leans. Its white colour indicates that it was made of crystal (sphaṭika). The eight marks of honour (pratihāryas) which are associated with the World-Teacher are as follows:—the āsoka tree, shower of heavenly flowers, celestial music accompanying the sermon, chauri or the chāmara, siṃhasana (lion-throne), nimbus (bhā-maṇḍala), drum and parasol.¹ Some floral designs over the head of the Tīrthaṅkara suggest the aśoka tree²; the shower of flowers is found outside the circle thereby meaning that the whole structure received the shower. Celestial music can only be inferred for it cannot be shown in a painting. The waving of the chamaras or cow-tail fly-whisks is attended to by two Indras standing behind the throne of the Teacher, one on either side of it.³ The siṃhasana is the throne on which the Teacher is seated. It is not however shown as a lion-throne but as a lotus-throne, with three tiers. The nimbus or halo is painted in white and can be seen behind the Teacher's head. The drum can only be inferred for it is said that the drum was beaten to keep time with the celestial music. The parasol is technically called mukkoḍai or the three-tiered parasol. In the painting it rises above the head of the Teacher in three tiers, the central shaft standing vertically over the centre of his head. Though he is shown as facing east it should be understood that he appeared to be looking in all the four directions.

¹ Cf. similar lions in temple architecture and sculpture of the Vijayanagara times.

Each of the four roads leading to the centre has a gopura on either side of it in each of the first seven regions.

Painting No. 37 (pl. xvii)—

. . . பண்ணுகுது யிவடம்,

. . . pannugutū yivadam.

" . . . doing . . . here".

The scene shown here represents the dance performed by the Indra of the first heaven (Saudharmendra) as soon as Bharata, the son of the World-Teacher had left the samavasaraṇa. Saudharmendra, who is four-handed, is dancing in the midst of six of his damsels who have so arranged themselves that three of them stand on either side of him. These damsels are keeping him company by dancing also, looking at the same time at him as if to be inspired by him. In contrast to them Indra faces forwards, suggesting that he is looking at the World-Teacher seated in the samavasaraṇa. He wears a conical crown (kirita) on his head, patra-kundalas in his ears and a long flower-garland, to the ends of which are suspended lotus flowers, on his neck. Two of his hands, the upper ones, are in poses suggestive of singing, while the two lower hands are held in the añjali pose against his breast. The damsels are similarly decorated but the garland is missing. On the left of this dancing party stand two men, one small and the other big. The small figure represents an attendant as is evident from the chāmara that he is holding in his right hand. The bigger person is also an attendant who, with hands folded against his breast in añjali, is intently watching the performance. He and his companion have turbans on their heads and these turbans are of the type that we come across in South India.

¹ *Alokavṛkṣhaḥ suraṇḥśaṅkṛtāḥ divyadhvaniḥ chāmaramāṇanam cha |
Bhāmaṇḍalam dandubhīrūṭapatreṇa tatpratikāṣṭhā Jinetvarūṇam ||*

See also Indian Antiquary, Vol. XL, p. 159.

² Cf. painting from Arrah in C. R. Jain's Śiśubhadda, p. 129.

³ Cf. painting in C. R. Jain's Śiśubhadda, p. 126.

With this row the scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva come to a close. The events that followed the above scene may, however, briefly be described:—

The 4,000 kings and chieftains who had slunk away from the severe penance and were therefore called *pāṣaṇḍins*¹ now came to the Tirthaṅkara and entered the Congregation (saṅgha). Bharata visited his father in the samavasāraṇa and when he left, Saudharmendra sang the praises of the Tirthaṅkara by composing an adoration (stuti) describing the Lord by 1,008 auspicious names. Then he and the other devas besought him to proceed to the other parts of the world to enlighten all bhavyas (those who "possess the realisable potentiality of divinity in their nature") by his divine discourses. The Tirthaṅkara agreeing, a procession was formed by the devas, and the Tirthaṅkara proceeded on his divine mission surrounded by both men and devas and with all pomp.

When a fortnight remained in his life, the samavasāraṇa structure disappeared. The Tirthaṅkara applied himself now to destroy the remaining kārmic forces of a "non-inimical type" that still clung to his indomitable spirit. On the last day (pauṇyamāsi) in the month of Pauṣa he sat, facing the east, between the two summits, Śrī-śikhara and Siddha-śikhara of Mount Kailāsa, and practised self-contemplation of the highest type. At last, on the fourteenth day of the dark half of the month of Magha, at the time of sunrise, when the moon was passing out of the Abhijit constellation, "the Lord resorted to the third form of the holy śukla dhyāna (self-contemplation) termed śūkṣmākriyāpratīpāti (lit. having the slightest bodily tinge) and destroyed the three channels of the approach of matter, viz., the mind, speech and the body! He immediately attained to the fourteenth and the last guṇasthāna (psychological station on the Path), whence, adopting the last form of the holy self-contemplation (vyūpratakrīyānīvṛiti, signifying a cessation of all kinds of organic activities), he passed into nirvāṇa, in the space of time required to articulate the five vowels, a, i, u, ri, li! The next instant marked the appearance of another One to grace the Holy Land of the Abode of Gods in nirvāṇa, at the top of the Universe." As already noted (p. 66) his body disappeared like burnt camphor, only some hairs and nails remaining. Saudharmendra collected these relics and creating a mock-body of the Tirthaṅkara cremated it and with its ashes besmeared his body, the devas following him.

II

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMĀNA.

Twenty-seven rows of paintings (Nos. 38 to 64, both rows inclusive, pls. xvii-xxiv) represent scenes from the life of Mahāvīra or Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkara. The life history of Vardhamāna is similar to that of Rishabhadeva; but in this temple it is not so elaborately painted. Fortunately most of the paintings retain their colouring to-day. Below every row is the usual space for the explanatory labels but none contains any writing. This does not mean that they once contained these writings which have now been rubbed away. The spaces are such clean black blanks with white borders that one can easily see that no writing was ever attempted. With the aid of Śrī Purāṇa (Vol. IV) and the Vardhamāna Purāṇa I have, however, been able to identify the scenes.

¹ See painting No. 29.

The life story of Vardhamāna is briefly as follows:—

Vardhamāna or Mahāvīra as he is popularly called had, like Ṛishabhadeva, previous existences or bhavas viz.—(1) Lion¹, (2) a deva, (3) Kanakojvala, a Vidyādhara king, (4) a deva, (5) Harishēṇa, king of Ayodhyā, (6) a deva, (7) Priyāmitra, a monarch (chakravartin), (8) a deva by name Sūryaprabha, (9) Nanda, king of Chhatrakāranagara, (10) Achyutendra. He was born to King Siddhārtha of the Nātha-lineage (vaṃśa), who was the lord of Kuṇḍapura (Kuṇḍagrāma), and his wife Priyakāriṇī*. Just as the first Tīrthaṅkara entered the face of Marudevī in the form of a bull so also Vardhamāna entered the face of Priyakāriṇī in the form of an elephant.

As soon as he was born the gods headed by Saudharmendra came to the city and took him to mount Meru to anoint him with celestial waters (janma-abhisheka). When the celestial waters were poured on him, he sneezed and the sneezing was so very forcible that many devas that were near by were pushed down by the strong wind issuing out of his nostrils. Thereupon the gods named him Vīra (i.e., a hero) and Vardhamāna (ever increasing) and took him back to his parents.

Gradually he grew into a handsome youth and became renowned for his might. While, one day, Saudharmendra, was holding court, he spoke very highly of Vardhamāna's strength. On hearing this, one of the devas, Saṅgama by name, became curious and wanted to put it to the test. He came to the city where Vardhamāna lived and was wondering how to get an opportunity for the desired test. Vardhamāna, just then happening to be sporting with his friends in a garden, Saṅgama took the form of a big snake and stood in his way twisting himself round a tree with the tail down and the hood over the tree. Vardhamāna, on perceiving the snake, walked over its body, crushing it at every step. When he reached the region of the hood and began to crush the hood, even as Kṛishṇa of the Hindu mythology crushed the serpent Kālīya, Saṅgama could no longer bear the pain nor disbelieve Saudharmendra's statement regarding Vardhamāna's strength. He assumed his real form and begged Vardhamāna's pardon for the trial he had put him to.

According to the Śvetāmbara tradition² he married a lady called Yaśodā and a daughter was born to them named Anujā or Priyadarśanā.³ But the Śrī Purāṇa which is a Digāmbara text makes no mention of Vardhamāna marrying. "Modern research

¹ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 45:—

1. Nayasāra, a carpenter.
2. Marichi, the grandson of Ṛishabhadeva.
3. A deva.
4. A Brahmin.

5. Born alternately as a god and Brahmin, with the occasional interlude of being born a king, for countless ages.

6. Vāsudeva or Triprishṭha, a king.
7. Lion.

² She is called in most texts Trisālā.

³ See Kalpavṛkṣa by Bhadrabāhu-Svāmī (A.D. 454) for Vardhamāna's life; also Ind. Ant., Vol. II, pp. 139-140.

⁴ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 29.

would seem to favour the Śvetāmbara belief that Mahāvīra had married, but this the Digambaras strenuously deny for an ascetic who has never married moves on a higher plane of sanctity than one who has known the joys of wedded life¹."

His parents died when he was twenty-eight years old and at the age of thirty he felt a longing to dissociate himself from worldly life, a longing which every Tirthaṅkara shared. No sooner did he experience such a longing than the Laukātika-devas came down from their heavens and reminded him of vairāgya or world-flight and of the initiation ceremony called dikṣhā that had to be performed before he could become a Tirthaṅkara. This ceremony, as has been explained while speaking of the first Tirthaṅkara consists of the observance under trees or in parks or forests, of certain rigorous austerities like the plucking out of hairs, etc.²

Accordingly Vardhamāna repaired to a garden outside Kuṇḍapura, mounted on a divine palanquin called Chandraprabha and performed dikṣhā seated on a crystal stone under a tree. After discarding dress and ornaments he plucked out the hairs of his head with his fingers in five handfuls (pañchamuṣṭi) and commenced a rigorous penance, sometimes standing and sometimes sitting under trees. Even as he had discarded dress he discarded hunger and thirst. Once in every six months, however, he came to cities, where men lived, in accordance with the practice among the Tirthaṅkaras, called "charyā" to visit cities periodically and to partake of food, if offered. The first time he went out for "charyā" he happened to pass through the city of Kōlagrāma, whose king, Kūla offered him food in the prescribed manner. After twelve years³ of rigorous dikṣhā, intermixed with periodical visits to the cities for "charyā" he obtained kevala-jñāna or omniscience while seated on a stone under a sāla tree in a garden called Manohara on the banks of the river Rijugati⁴ and adjoining a village called Vijjimbhika.⁵ When the devas learnt that he had become a "kevali" they raised the samavasaraṇa or heavenly pavilion, worshipped him there and along with all other beings heard discourses on Dharma from him. About a year after gaining omniscience Mahāvīra became a Tirthaṅkara, "one of those who show the true way across the troubled ocean of life", the true way that he showed to his followers being that they should become members of one of the four Tirtha, a monk or nun, if possible, otherwise a devout lay-man or lay-woman⁶. He died in his seventy-second year, in the village of Pāpā, the modern Pāvāpurī near Rājagṛīha sitting with clasped hands and crossed knees (the samaparyāṅka position). With regard to the date of his death there are differences in the Jaina traditions, one giving it as B.C. 502, another as B.C. 526 and a third as B.C. 539⁷.

¹ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, pp. 30-31.

² See above, pp. 96-7.

³ Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 140—12½ years is the duration of his tapācārāṇa according to Kalpa-sūtra and other texts.

⁴ Rijupālīkā or Rijukulā or Rijevalīkā.

⁵ Also called Jimbhikagrāma or Jimbhikā.

⁶ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 42.

⁷ Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 140.

Mahāvīra died in 527 B.C. after preaching for thirty years. He was not the founder but only a reformer of a previously existing creed, of which the head was Pārivanātha, who died in 776 B.C. Jaina tradition has it that Mahāvīra attained nirvāṇa 250 years after Pārivanātha which is confirmed by historical research. For details see Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, p. xxxiii.

Painting No. 38 (pl. xvii).—This illustrates the events that preceded the birth of Vardhamāna.

One day, while sleeping, Priyakāriṇī, wife of king Siddhārtha, of Kuṇḍapura, had the same sixteen dreams that Marudevī, the mother of the first Tīrthaṅkara, had (pp. 80-82) with, however, this difference, that, while Marudevī dreamt that a bull entered her face, Priyakāriṇī saw an elephant entering her face. She related her dreams to her husband who explained to her that they all signified the birth of a great soul and that the deva Achyutendra had entered her womb.

38-a. The painting which is rubbed away, seems to have shown king Siddhārtha and Priyakāriṇī sitting.

38-b. Priyakāriṇī is here shown reclining on a swing which is gently moved by two attendant-women who hold the chains. She is evidently dreaming the sixteen dreams.

38-c. Siddhārtha and Priyakāriṇī are here shown as conversing with each other. Priyakāriṇī is evidently narrating to her lord her dreams and seeking from him an explanation for them.

38-d. Though the painting is obliterated, we can see that the king, who is fanned by an attendant-woman, is seeking an explanation for his wife's dreams from the purohita or preceptor, seated on the right of the picture. Though such a representation is a deviation from the text, for the Śrī Purāṇa says that the king himself offers his wife the explanations necessary, it can be justified by comparing this with painting No. 33 (pl. xv), where Śreyāṅkumāra's dreams are explained to him by a purohita. It would appear, therefore, that the work of explaining the significance of dreams is usually assigned to purohitas.¹

Painting No. 39 (pl. xvii).—This illustrates the birth of Vardhamāna which was followed by the devas, headed by Saudharmendra, carrying the child on the back of the elephant, Airāvata for janma-abhisheka.

As soon as they learnt that the child was born, the gods headed by Saudharmendra came down to the city. Śachī, the wife of Saudharmendra, entered the room where the child was born, and taking it placed it in the hands of her husband. The child was then placed on the back of Airāvata and carried with all pomp to mount Mahā-Meru, the devas forming a procession and holding flags and festoons.

39-a. Priyakāriṇī is half-concealed by a screen, the idea in the introduction of the screen being that she had given birth to the child². Śachī is standing on the left and is shown twice. She is first receiving the child either from Priyakāriṇī or from the attendant-woman who stands on her right and then turns back and delivers the child to Saudharmendra, who is accompanied by Īśānendra holding a chhatra or umbrella above.

¹ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 25.

² All these dreams Trīśālā related to Siddhārtha on the next day.

³ Cf. painting No. 17-b, pl. xi.

Painting No. 41 (pl. xviii).—This runs from right to left. At the back comes Mahendra on his bull holding a white flag which bears a design of stars. Before him walks another deva with a white flag. A third is on the back of a yāli and is preceded by a fourth who walks with an yellow flag in his hand. The next deva holds a banner and is seated on the back of a hansa and is therefore either Śukra or possibly Mahāśukra. He is preceded by two other devas holding a torana. Yet another evidently Āraṇa goes on a peacock. The ninth (defaced) who heads this row of devas walks before with a white spotted flag in his hand.

Painting No. 42 (pl. xviii).—In the painting which runs from left to right the band and dance which preceded the procession are represented.

Three dancing girls of the heavens (apsaras) are dancing to the accompaniment of music produced by three devas who stand behind them. One of these devas beats time with cymbals, another blows a bag-pipe and the third is beating a drum (mṛdaṅga). An elephant with a big drum (muraja) on its back beaten by a deva goes in front of them. Another deva seated on its neck is acting as mahout. Two other devas go in front. One of them walks with a flag while the other rides a horse and blows a trumpet.

Painting No. 43 (pl. xviii).—This illustrates the Jauma-abhisheka or the anointing ceremony of Vardhamāna.

The devas took him to mount Mahā-Meru and placed him on a lion-throne (siṃhāsana) in one of the parks called Pāṇḍuka-vana. They bathed him with celestial waters brought from the milk-ocean (kshirābdhi). When he was being bathed in this manner, particles of water got into his nostrils and brought on sneezing, as a result of the force of which several of the gods that stood near him fell down like dead twigs or straw.

Prāṇata, and Āraṇa and Achyuta are fourteen, viz., boar, deer, buffalo, fish, tortoise, frog, horse, elephant, moon, serpent, rhinoceros, goat, bull, "wish-tree" (kalpa-tree). The Ānata and Prāṇata kalpa-devas have the bull while the Āraṇa and Achyuta devas share the kalpa tree. The other twelve kalpa-devas referred to above share the other animals respectively beginning with boar and ending with goat.

The vehicles and the crest-devices of the kalpavāsi-devas as indicated in the above verses may be represented in tabular form below:—

Crest-devices.				Kalpavāsi-devas.				Vāhanas or vehicles.
1.	Boar	Sandharmendra	Elephant.
2.	Deer	Īśānendra	Horse.
3.	Buffalo	Sanatkumārendra	Lion.
4.	Fish	Māhendra	Bull.
5.	Tortoise	Brahma	Indian crane (sārasa).
6.	Frog	Brahmottara
7.	Horse	Lāntava	Cuckoo.
8.	Elephant	Kāpiṣṭha
9.	Moon	Śukra	Swan.
10.	Serpent	Mahāśukra
11.	Rhinoceros	Śatāra	Ruddy goose (āra).
12.	Goat	Sahasrāra
13.	Bull	Ānata	Garuda.
14.		Prāṇata	Mahara.
15.	Wish-tree	Āraṇa	Peacock.
16.		Achyuta	Pushpaka-vimāna.

In the centre of the painting Vardhamāna is shown seated cross-legged on a pedestal placed on a white crystal slab. He is in an attitude of meditation with his hands placed one over the other on his lap. Two gods stand symmetrically, one on either side of him and are evidently pouring milk on him from a vessel that each is holding. The white patch on either shoulders coupled with the fact that according to the Śrī Purāṇa, the waters for the anointing ceremony were got from the milk-ocean lends support for the inference that it is milk that is shown as being poured on him. On either side stand five more devas, each with a pitcher in his hand. All hold the pitchers in both their hands except one, the second from the right, who carries a pitcher in his left hand which he has raised to the level of his shoulder, while his right hangs down. Three more devas with similar pitchers in their hands are shown on the left of Vardhamāna, falling down on their backs. These evidently represent the many devas that were pushed down by Vardhamāna's violent sneezing.

Painting No. 44 (pl. xviii).—This illustrates less elaborately the return of Vardhamāna to the city in the same processional manner as he was taken to Mahā-Meru.

The elephant Airāvata, which is depicted as moving, evidently carried Vardhamāna seated in a howdah, but the painting is here mostly obliterated. A deva who perhaps held a chaurī or a chhatra is shown behind, as standing on a projection attached to the back of the elephant near its tail. Two devas walk behind the elephant, one holding the chhatra and the other a flag. Eight others go before and carry emblems of dignity. What the last three in the group that are close to the elephant carry cannot be learnt as the painting is obliterated. Two others that go before them carry a circular banner and a half-spread umbrella respectively. They are preceded by another deva who carries a flag. Two more devas, who form the front of the procession carry between them a torāṇa.

Painting No. 45 (pl. xix).—This illustrates the celebration in the palace at Kuṇḍapura when Vardhamāna was brought back.

45-a. It is said that the devas returned to the city with the child and placed him on a śiṃhāsana in the king's court. Saudharmendra danced for joy before Vardhamāna and gladdened the hearts of the Jina's parents, after which all the devas departed for their respective worlds.

Vardhamāna is shown seated on a throne attended by two devas, one on either side, who wave *chāmara*s before him. Another figure stands on the extreme left probably witnessing the celebration. It is likely it may represent Siddhārtha, the father of Vardhamāna, who is admiring his son with legitimate pride or witnessing the dance performed by Saudharmendra on the right. Saudharmendra is shown with eight hands. The two front hands are folded in añjali against the breast, while the other six hands are all in singing attitudes. Two lotus flowers, one on either side of him, mark the two ends of a garland that he is wearing round his neck. The two star-like designs above are perhaps intended to divide this scene from the next one (45-c).

45-b. Here is shown the humiliation of the deva Saṅgama (see p. 117).

In the painting Saṅgama in the form of a serpent is shown as twisting round the tree with the tail on the ground and the hood spread at the top of the tree. Vardhamāna is standing on the tail evidently with the intention of climbing up and reaching the hood.

Two flower-like designs are so placed as to show clearly the purpose for which they were let in. They are marks dividing this scene from the next one (45-c).

45-c. Saṅgama is here shown begging Vardhamāna's pardon for his foolishness in attempting to test his strength.

In the painting Saṅgama is shown on the right in his true form worshipping Vardhamāna with hands pressed against each other (añjali), an attitude of worship and humility. Vardhamāna has his right hand lifted up in an attitude indicating that he is either warning Saṅgama or excusing him, or more probably assuring him of protection.

Similar flower-like designs, five in number, are shown on the extreme right, just where the painting ends. They serve no purpose and I am unable to understand why they were let in here, unless they mark one end of this row of painting.

Painting No. 46 (pl. xix).—This illustrates the renunciation of the world by Vardhamāna.

46-a. After thirty years had passed he felt a longing to renounce the world and lead an ascetic's life in forests and gardens by observing austerities and rigorous penance. The Laukāntika-devas who learnt his resolve came down to him. They requested him to dissociate himself from worldly life and reminded him that the time had come for him to undergo initiation or dikṣā. Thus encouraged, he became firm in his resolve and prepared himself to renounce the world.

The Laukāntikas are here seen addressing Vardhamāna who is sitting, leaning against a cushion in a cot, and is hearing them. Only seven Laukāntikas are shown here, though their number, as shown in painting No. 27 (pl. xiv) is eight.

46-b. Vardhamāna is here shown as being carried in a palanquin. After taking leave of all, he got into the divine palanquin called Chandraprabha and was carried to a park known as Nathashayāda outside the city. Five men carry the palanquin, two wave chāmaras beside it, and the eighth in the group goes in front carrying a flag. Vardhamāna holds a flower in his right hand which he is drawing to his nose to smell.

Painting No. 47 (pl. xix).—This illustrates his initiation, his penance and his periodical "charyā" or partaking of food.

47-a. On reaching the garden, Nathashayāda he got down from the palanquin and sat, facing north, on a crystal slab under a tree. Then he stripped himself of dress, ornaments and finery and commenced the most painful ceremonies that formed a necessary part of initiation, vis., plucking out the hairs on the head and face with one's own fingers. This, as the Jains believe, gives the performer power of endurance and deprives him of all attachment to worldly pleasures as it deprives him primarily of attachment to his own flesh.

In the painting he is shown as sitting naked on a white slab under a tree and plucking out the hairs from his head with his right fingers. His crown, dress and other ornaments are shown by his side.

47-b. Here he is shown as standing on a crystal slab under a tree in the kāyotsarga attitude, standing immovable (exposing himself to the sun and rain).

47-c. After six months of rigorous penance he went to the village of Kūlagrāma, whose king Kūla offered him food.

In the painting the feeding ceremony called "charyā" is shown in three panels. The one on the right shows the king in his palace seated with his wife, and two of his servants coming in and informing him of the arrival of Vardhamāna in the village. The king who, it is said, went out to receive him, meets him, as shown in the panel on the left. He is shown twice, first as worshipping Vardhamāna with his hands in añjali by kneeling before him and then standing up and requesting him to come into his palace and partake of food served by himself. The central panel shows the actual feeding. The king takes morsels of food from a tray placed on a stand near by and offers one after another to Vardhamāna, who receives them with both hands. To show respect to Vardhamāna he (Vardhamāna) is made to stand on an elevated padmāsana.

Painting No. 48 (pl. xix).—Vardhamāna is here shown obtaining kevala-jñāna and being worshipped by the devas in Gandhakūṭi, a part of the samavasaraṇa.

48-a. After twelve years of selfless penance and mortifications he became one day, a kevali under a sāla tree in a garden called Manohara on the banks of the river Ṛjūgati, adjoining the village of Vijjīśābhika.

He is shown here twice, first as walking to the tree, probably returning from the village after "charyā", and next as standing on a hill in the kāyotsarga attitude, under the sāla tree.

48-b. When the devas learnt that he had become a kevali they raised over him the samavasaraṇa or the heavenly pavilion and worshipped him there.

In the painting he is shown sitting with crossed legs and clasped hands on a pedestal within a vimāna. The devas, five on each side, have ranged themselves on either side of him and are worshipping him. The two nearest wave chāmaras in front of him while two more devas, probably Gandharvas, are flying above, one on either side of him, and are pouring showers of flowers over the Gandhakūṭi, within which the Tīrthaṅkara is installed. The others have their hands in añjali against their breasts except one on the extreme right who holds them in añjali above his crown.

Paintings Nos. 49-64 (pls. xx-xxiv).—Nos. 49 to 64 are found on the ceiling of the veranda (mukha-maṇḍapa) in front of the Vardhamāna shrine and the Trikūṭa-basti. These have suffered badly owing to the fact that they are all within hand's reach, the level of the veranda being raised as entry into the shrines is from this veranda, access to which is by flights of steps from the level of the Saigita-maṇḍapa. Also the lighting of torches and other smoke-giving lights that are hung in this veranda have affected the paintings adversely by giving them a smoky tinge. As a result of this smoky tinge these paintings are losing their natural colours and before long are likely to disappear. Their damaged condition can be realized on examining the paintings figured in plates xx-xxiv where very little remains of the scenes. All means were tried to take good photographs of these and those that are figured here are the best that could be had. None of these is labelled which proves that these are really the continuations of the Vardhamāna rows found on the ceiling of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa. As in the case of the latter, narrow bands of black, bordered by thick white lines indicate the space for the labels. These paintings run from the northern end of the veranda and proceed south till they reach the samavasaraṇa paintings (Nos. 62-64). A row that could not be satisfactorily photographed comes first in this group and must now be described.

On a panel, on the right of the painting, a deva is sitting on a peacock with an attendant standing behind him. Both are in the attitude of moving. In the next panel stand common-folk and villagers who are all proceeding evidently to the samavasaraṇa to hear the Lord's discourse. As they move, they entertain themselves on the way by country-tricks like jugglery, wrestling and rope-dancing. The entertainers can be made out on the left of the painting and the entertained on the right. A few letters in modern Tamil found in one corner of the painting read as நல்ல பை, "Nalla pey," which means "good devil," an expression which the jugglers of the country parts use even to-day during their performances to invoke by coaxing the aid of the devil (kutti-śattāṇ), to warrant a successful culmination of their tricks.

Nos. 49-61 show the procession to the samavasaraṇa. The first three pictures deal almost exclusively with *devas*¹. The artist has apparently tried to avoid showing the less noble forms of vāhana such as fish, frog, boar, etc., replacing them by the animal or bird forming the crest-device of the deva whenever the latter was more noble.

Painting No. 49 (pl. xx).—As has been explained above the paintings run from below and as these have been taken in groups of two, the bottom row in each case must be described before the one above it.

Two figures, evidently representing devas as they wear royal crowns and ride on birds—a garuḍa and a swan—which no king would do, are found on the right of the painting while two figures of men, one on horseback and the other on a buffalo or bull are shown moving on the left. The devas and the mortals are also going to attend the samavasaraṇa of the Lord. There are three trees in the painting, of which, the one in the centre, marks the line of demarcation between the devas on the right and the men on the left. The deva riding the garuḍa is Ānata and the one on the back of the swan is either Śukra or Mahāśukra, more probably Śukra, the Indra of the two heavens Śukra and Mahāśukra.

Painting No. 50 (pl. xx).—This row runs from right to left and shows more of the devas. The two last are on horseback, the next on a bull, the next on what looks like a rhinoceros (khaḍgī) and the fifth on a makara (partly defaced). The two on horseback represent Īśānendra and Lāntava. The one on the bull is either Māhendra or Prāṇata, presumably the former, for Prāṇata is found below in this row. The deva on the rhinoceros is Śātara and the one on the makara Prāṇata. These devas hold in their hands lotus flowers as required by the *Trilokaśāstra*². With their right hands they are holding the flowers aloft. A circle behind the third deva from the left indicates a tree. Though the painting is much obliterated a tree is visible between every two devas.

¹ Concerning the identification of the devas, see above, pp. 120-1, f.n. 1.

² See above, p. 120, f.n. 1.

Between Nos. 50 and 51, in a big space twice the size of any row of pictures in the veranda, is shown a much obliterated painting which could not be successfully photographed. It is arranged transversely to the other pictures, its top being to the west and its bottom to the east. What remains shows Devendra (Saudharmendra) riding his elephant, Airāvata. Devendra's hands hold a garland between them. Śachi, his wife, rides behind him on the elephant. She holds a tray with flowers in her hands. Above, in the same panel, two devas on horseback are shown, one on either side of Devendra. They are of comparatively small size.

Painting No. 51 (pl. xx).—The procession of the devas continues here.

On the extreme right a man with a chāmara in his right hand and a cup in his left (articles denoting dignity or honour) is walking briskly past a tree. Then comes a tiger with its rider. The tiger does not find a place in the list of vāhanas and crest-devices of the devas given in the Trilokasāra. But as some of the other animals, such as the goat, fish, tortoise and buffalo do not find a place in the paintings here it may be inferred that some of these inferior animals were removed to give place for animals of superior breed and strength. Thus the tiger comes in. But it is impossible to identify its rider with any particular deva. Then comes an elephant with its rider carrying a chhatra. The elephant is white and as such represents Airāvata, the white elephant-vāhana of Devendra or Saudharmendra, the Indra of the first heaven, and its rider is Saudharmendra. Then comes a lion (its mane can be distinctly seen) with its rider, its forepaws raised and tail aloft. The rider of the lion must be Sanatkumārendra. Then comes a yāli (a mythical animal) with its rider. As we do not find the yāli mentioned in the list the identity of its rider will have to remain for the present in mystery.

Then comes a deer with its rider, whose identity is also puzzling. From the list it appears that the deer is the crest-device of Īśānendra. But as he has already appeared in painting No. 50, where he rides a horse along with Lāntava, also on horseback, it is impossible that he should again be represented here, unless we suppose that he is repeated, this row being different from the previous one, though both illustrate the procession of the devas to the samavasaraṇa. Also there is the possibility of some other of the sixteen devas of the kalpa heavens being intended, especially in view of the fact that some of the inferior animals such as buffalo, tortoise, boar, etc., are replaced by animals of superior breed and strength or animals of gentle disposition. We have here probably such a replacement, the replacing animal in question being the deer of gentle disposition, while the replaced animal is not known.

The rider of the tiger holds a flag in his hand, the cloth of which can be made out. An attendant stands between the tiger and the elephant and holds also a flag. The rider of the lion has a banner, while the rider of the yāli carries a half-spread parasol. Another attendant stands between the yāli and the deer and carries a fully spread parasol, while the deva on the deer holds in his hand a banner which leans against his shoulder. In front of the deer can be made out another tree which probably represents the kalpa tree referred to in the Trilokasāra. It is interesting to note that the tails of the yāli and the lion are lifted up, the tips ending in a loop. Two other attendants standing between the elephant and the lion, and the lion and the yāli carry flags.

The paintings here are badly damaged for reasons described above (p. 124); what has been described is all that can be made out¹.

Painting No. 52 (pl. xx).—Here celestial damsels are carrying eight auspicious articles or *aṣṭa-maṅgaḷas*². Some are dancing singly while others are standing under trees. The one on the extreme right carries a tray with lights in it, the next a spouted vessel, the third a banner or a circular fan, the fourth a narrow-mouthed vessel with mango leaves inserted in it (kalasa), the fifth a flag, the sixth something that is now obliterated, the seventh a parasol, the eighth a mirror and the ninth a chāmara in each hand held aloft. Of the tenth nothing can be made out.

The whole represents therefore the march to the samavasaraṇa of celestial ladies, of whom the four on the left form a dancing party and entertain the others, the idea being that when one party felt tired another should take its place.

Painting No. 53 (pl. xxi).—Three celestial devīs with crowns (kīrtas) on their heads are dancing in the central panel. On either side of this party stand similar parties of four dancers who take instructions from the central party and imitate them as is commonly done in dancing parties, where many members take part.

Above this row is a row of rosettes representing lotus flowers with the seed-vessel exposed. Unfortunately this row is placed in the centre of the veranda where a pole has been suspended below it on which lamps are hung, so that smoke has spoilt the painting considerably. This accounts for the dark colour in most of the paintings on the ceiling of this veranda.

A row, not photographed, is so badly damaged that hardly anything more can be made out than a dancing deva. He dances within a circle placed in a square, the four corners of which show two chakras on the top and two conches below, one for each corner. The deva has several hands of which sixteen can be made out, two in añjali against the breast and the rest in singing attitudes. Two lotuses forming the ends of a long garland hang from his neck. The long garland that he wears, the hugeness of his form and the number of his hands suggest that Saudharmendra was intended, an identification with which the temple priest agreed.³ In six panels, three on either side of the circle, can be seen six celestial damsels, one in each, in dancing attitudes.

Painting No. 54 (pl. xxi).—Here there is another party, the party entertained being perhaps commonfolk and chieftains belonging to the mortal world. In the centre stands a chieftain under a tree with legs apart. On his head rests a long conical cap with its top shaped like a serpent's hood, but not sufficiently clear to be definitely put down as such; he has a long shirt or coat girdled at the waist with a sash or belt (a type of dress with which frequenters of South Indian theatres are familiar), while his legs are provided with long trousers, the tips of which are marked by anklets (pādasara) painted in white. The feet are so arranged that they face each other in a dancing pose. His right hand hangs down while his left holds a shaft, the top of which is fashioned like a trident or flame of fire. The significance of the latter symbol is not clear. If the person represented is one of the Bhavanavāsi-devas and if what is held in his left hand is taken to be fire then the deva represented may be taken to be one of the *Agni-kumāras*¹; but as an Agni-kumāra is invariably shown with the flames of fire issuing out of his head-dress as represented in painting No. 56 (to be described below, p. 129) this cannot be an Agni-kumāra. But if what is held in the hand can be taken to be a vajra or thunderbolt (only the lower line of such a weapon is shown as a semi-circle rather than as a trident turned over) then he can be taken to be one of the Bhavanavāsi-devas called Stanita or Megha-kumāra.² Six celestial damsels are dancing, five to his right and one to his left.

¹ Both the temple priest at Tiruparattikunṇam and Mr. Mallinath, editor of the Jaina Gazette, to whom I explained the above identifications approved of them.

² See below, No. 60, p. 130.

³ In fact he more often agreed than disagreed with me over the identification of these devas.

On the right of this dancing group stand three men, one behind the other. All the three are beating time to the song of the damsel before them. The first stands leaning towards the damsel and is beating time with his hands (taḷam). The next is beating a drum (mṛdaṅga) hanging from his neck. The third is beating time with a pair of cymbals. All these three are dressed much in the same style as the nattuvans (professional nautch performers) of South India. They have a turban on their heads and wear a long robe extending to the ankles firmly secured at the waist with a sash or belt which gives it an elegantly stiff appearance.

Painting No. 55 (pl. xxi).—In this row can be seen a number of the other Bhavanavāsi-devas, who, as described in the Trilokaśāstra (p. 120) formed the followers of the twelve Kalpavāsi-Indras in their march to the śamavasaraṇa to do worship to the Tirthaṅkara. The identity of eight of these in this row becomes clear from a study of their distinguishing marks as detailed in gāthā 213 of the Trilokaśāstra.³ They carry in one hand the

¹ Chūḍāmaṇi-phani-garuḍaṅ gajama yaram vārdhamānaḥam vajjam |
Hari-kalasaṅgam chinham maṇi chaitradruma dhaya || 213 ||
Chūḍāmaṇi-phani-garuḍaṅ gaja-makaram vārdhamānaḥam vajram |
Hari-kalasaṅgam chinham maṇi chaitradruma atha dhaya || 213 ||

The marks of the Bhavanavāsi or residential devas as indicated in this verse are summarized in the following table:—

Bhavanavāsi-devas.					Marks on head-dress (maṇḍa-chinḥa).
1. Asurakumāra	Crest-jewel (chūḍāmaṇi).
2. Nāgakumāra	Serpent's hood.
3. Suparṇakumāra	Garuḍa.
4. Dvīpakumāra	Elephant.
5. Udhakumāra	Maṇḍa.
6. Vidyakumāra	Powder-flask (vārdhamāna).
7. Stanitakumāra or Meghakumāra	Thunderbolt (vajra).
8. Dikakumāra	Lion (śaṇi).
9. Agnikumāra	Fire or kalasa (vessel) with fire in it.
10. Vātakumāra	Horse.

chāmara and in the other flower-garlands for worshipping the Tirthaṅkara as prescribed for all devas. The ends of the garlands show two big lotus flowers in each. A serpent-hood rising above the crown of each marks them out as the Nāga-kumāras. Two devas, one at either end, are without the serpent-hoods over their heads and cannot be identified.

Painting No. 56 (pl. xxii).—The first figure from the right is not included in the photograph. It is badly defaced and differs from all the others in having only two arms. The next figure (the first from the right) in the photograph has the characteristics of the Agni-kumāras, viz., fire (agni) and kalāṣa, but the others are all alike, their respective marks not being shown. He carries in his lower hands an incense-burner from the mouth of which the smoke of burnt incense is issuing. This type of incense-burner is used even to-day in some of the temples in South India during worship. Flames of fire can be seen issuing from the sides of the kirita on his head. The seven other devas to the left of Agni-kumāra are also four handed, the lower hands joined in worship (añjali) and the upper hands lifted up in attitudes indicative of singing the praises of the Jina, which they are said to do. It is not possible to decide what particular Kumāras these seven represent as the particular marks referred to in Trilokasāra are not found except the crest-jewel (chūḍāmaṇi) distinctive of the Asura-kumāras, which is present on the kirita of all seven. As the Nāga-kumāras, Agni-kumāras and Asura-kumāras are Bhavanavāsi-devas, of which there are seven other classes, the remaining seven figures are presumably intended to represent them, though they all resemble Asura-kumāras in wearing the crest-jewel.¹

Painting No. 57 (pl. xxii).—Here divine damsels are performing with sticks a kind of dance called in Tamil kōlāttam. Three trees separate these dancers into four pairs, each pair being engaged in the kōlāttam dance and beating each other's sticks in time to the music.

Painting No. 58 (pl. xxii).—Another group of dancing girls of the heavens are engaged in individual dancing, the one on the extreme left doing an axe-dance (resembling a sword-dance but with an axe taking the place of a sword). The axe is double-edged and is held in the middle by both her hands, while she whirls round keeping the axe always so close to her limbs that to the spectator it almost appears as if the weapon would hurt her. Her dexterous handling of the weapon produces an artistic effect in the performance and a sense of approbation in the spectator.

Painting No. 59 (pl. xxii).—In this row celestial ladies are carrying in their hands materials of honour like trays with flowers and lights, vessels with lights in them (kuḍavilakku) and other kinds of vessels (kalāṣas). These materials are supposed to do honour to the Jina. The lights in the vessels and trays show flames which suggest that wicks are kept burning in them. In the centre of the painting two of the ladies are clearly seen with flower trays in their hands.

¹ See above, p. 128, f.n. 1.

Painting No. 60 (pl. xxiii).—This shows some of the devas that followed the Kalpavāsi-devas with the eight auspicious marks of honour (aṣṭamaṅgalas). These are a golden vase or pitcher used during the coronation ceremony of a king (bhṛīṅgāra), a vessel (kalāṣa) indicating plenty and prosperity, a mirror or any polished metal designed artistically (darpaṇa), an ornamental fan (vījaṇa), a flag (dhvaja), a chāmara, a parasol, and a banner called supratishṭha.¹ In the painting not all the eight maṅgalas are present, but only the most important of them. Two of the devas carry flags, two supratishṭhas, one the fan, one a half-spread parasol and those at the two ends a fully spread parasol each.

The fourth from the left holds in his left hand a flower, probably a lotus, the significance of which is that they are all going to the samavasaraṇa to worship the Lord with flowers, etc.²

Painting No. 61 (pl. xxiii).—This row appears to be intended for the nine nidhis (treasure-gods). Though six figures only are shown their identification as nidhis becomes clear on looking at the two figures on the extreme right and extreme left of the painting respectively. The one on the left is one of the nidhis called Śaṅkha or Conch who can be distinguished by four conches, two above his left hand and two below it. He is represented as a fat man,³ performing the dance shared by the others. The dancing figure on the right represents another nidhi called Padma or Lotus as is evident from a number of lotuses scattered round him. The other four that dance between these two represent four of the remaining nidhis whose identity is not however clear as there are no distinguishing marks by their sides.⁴ There is another reason for indicating the marks in the case of Śaṅkha and Padma alone and not in the case of the others, for they are considered by both the Jainas and the Hindus (the Hindus also have these nine nidhis) as the most important of all the nidhis. In Tamil literature there is reference to Śaṅkha and Padma alone in places where all the nidhis were intended.⁵ Three of the nidhis including Padma hold lotuses which signify the purpose which they all have in view, viz., to worship the Jina.⁶

Paintings Nos. 62-64 (pls. xxiii and xxiv).—This (No. 62) and the other two paintings (Nos. 63 and 64) illustrate the samavasaraṇa of Vardhamāna, the heavenly structure to which all the people mentioned in the previous paintings are going.

Unlike the samavasaraṇa of Rishabhadeva (No. 36), this is done very elaborately, on a wider space, the treatment being quite different. Except the Lakṣmīvara-maṇḍapa with its inner circle (No. 64) wherein the Tirthaṅkara is seated, the rest of the structure is done flatly and in rectangular, not circular, rows one above the other. Thus, while in No. 36 all the seven regions and the Grand Assembly and Gandhakuṭi with the Tirthaṅkara

¹ Trilokaśūra, gāthā No. 989.

² Trilokaśūra, gāthā No. 975.

³ Cf. Kabera and Jambhala.

⁴ The nine nidhis are, according to the Trilokaśūra, Kāla, Mahākāla, Māyavaka, Plāṅga, Naisarpa, Padma, Pāṇḍya, Śaṅkha, and Nānārātṇa, of which Śaṅkha and Padma are apparent. For their description and functions see Trilokaśūra, Narasiṅga-lekhāṇikā, gāthās Nos. 821, 822.

⁵ Dēvāraṇam (śāloṇḍi), edited by Swaminatha Pandita, Madras, 1911, p. 1230, v. 10—Śaṅkha nidi paduma nidi iṇṇaṇḍum taṇḍu dharaiyōṇḍuṇṇāḥ taruvāṇḍum . . .

seated in the centre on a throne are all indicated in circular spaces formed by concentric circles, here the Grand Assembly and Gandhakuti with the Tirthankara in it are alone shown in spaces formed by concentric circles while the rest of the structure is done in rectangular spaces formed by straight lines. As the ceiling of the veranda where these paintings are shown is narrower than that of the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa, where the majority of the temple paintings is shown, and as the scenes preceding the erection of the samavasaraṇa in this case have been done on a larger scale it was convenient to show the details of the samavasaraṇa also on a larger scale. Though only a circular representation was meant it could be shown only within a limited space. The idea of a circular representation is not materially affected by the rectangular representation of the outer seven regions, of each of which a section including one of the roads from the four cardinal points is shown. Only the Lakshmivara-maṇḍapa and the central Gandhakuti immediately within it are treated in circular fashion.

Painting No. 62 (pl. xxiii).—Proceeding from the outside which forms the bottom of the picture, the mānastambha is the first structure illustrated. It is shown in elevation much in the same way as in No. 36. The image of the Jina is installed in the pavilion on the top of the pillar. The first band, starting from below, represents the wall Dhūlisāla which encloses the first region called Chaityaprasāda-bhūmi shown (again as in No. 36) in plan. This contains a row of the pavilions and Jina-bhavanas with which the region is filled. The second band represents the first vedikā. This encloses the second region, the Khatikā-bhūmi or the region of water in which fishes and lotus leaves can be distinguished. The third band represents the second wall which encloses the third region, the Vallī-bhūmi. In the latter can be seen some flowers and plants representing the plant-creation with which this region is said to have been filled. Up the centre of the picture through each of these regions runs the road from one of the cardinal points with an entrance-tower (gopura) leading from one region to the next. Smaller entrances or gateways opening into these roads are marked one on each side of them in each region.

Painting No. 63 (pl. xxiv).—The road from one of the four cardinal points, with its entrance towers, continues up the centre of this picture through the next four regions, of which the first is the Upavana-bhūmi or the garden-region in which can be seen a row of trees, which represent the four wooded avenues of āsoka, chāmpaka, chūta and saptachchhada referred to in the text. The band above the trees represents the third vedikā beyond which the Dhvaja-bhūmi is indicated by a number of flags fluttering. On only one flag, the third from the left, are any distinctive marks now visible, these being stars. Though according to the text the mark should be that of the moon, and though the moon cannot be made out in the painting, which is badly damaged, the presence of the moon in the midst of the stars can be inferred for it is said that the moon is the "lord of the stars" (Uḍupati). Above these flags can be seen another band which represents the third wall beyond which is the sixth region, called Kalpavriksha-bhūmi. In this region the ten kinds of "wish-trees" are indicated, five being shown on each side of the central road. Though these different trees are all shown in the same way we may infer that the ten kinds of trees mentioned are intended. A band above these trees represents the fourth vedikā enclosing the Bhavana-bhūmi which is indicated here by a row of houses resembling pavilions or gopuras. The band which runs above these houses represents the wall called Ākāśa-sphaṭika-sāla and divides the Bhavana-bhūmi region from the next region of the samavasaraṇa, the part illustrated in No. 64.

Painting No. 64 (pl. xxiv).—Here are two concentric circles. The outer one encloses the clean, open space, one yojana × one yojana in size, known as the Lakṣmīvara-maṇḍapa and divided into twelve halls or compartments in four groups of three each, separated by the four roads from the four cardinal points. The treatment of this resembles that already seen in No. 36, with the difference that the halls run counter-clockwise.

Starting from below, the rectangle evidently represents the road from the east, as the Tirthaṅkara in the central circle sits facing it. A gopura indicates the gateway. The first compartment to the right shows two apostles (Gaṇadharas), the second the Kalpavāsi-devīs, and the third Āryakās and the Śrāvakīs, i.e., nuns and other faithful women dressed with the cowl on their heads as in No. 36.

Next comes the second rectangle representing the entrance from the north, and then the fourth compartment with the Jyotishkā ladies, the fifth with the Vyantara ladies, and the sixth with the Bhavanavāsi ladies. The rectangle that comes next is the entrance from the west; it is followed by the seventh compartment with the Bhavanavāsi-devas, the eighth with the Vyantara-devas and the ninth with the Jyotishkā-devas. After the rectangle representing the entrance from the south, are the tenth compartment with the Kalpavāsi-devas, the eleventh with kings, common folk and other beings, and the twelfth with animals, of which we can make out in the painting a lion couchant and a spotted deer. In each compartment only two representatives of the respective occupants are shown as is also the case in No. 36, and the figures are all in much the same attitude as in that picture.

The inner circular band represents the fifth vedikā within which was the Gandhakuṭi, and in it the siṃhāsana or lion-throne for the Tirthaṅkara. The details are shown as in No. 36. The Tirthaṅkara as in that picture is shown sitting on a lotus-throne (padmāsana not siṃhāsana) rising in three tiers, in the sampanyāka attitude with hands placed in meditation on his lap. Some of the prātihāryas attending him, as for instance, chāmaras waved by two devas standing on either side of him, the nimbus, the parasol (mukkoḍai), the āsoka tree (leaves of it alone), and the throne can be made out in the painting while the rest, such as the celestial music, the shower of heavenly flowers and the drum can only be inferred. On either side of the throne, projecting inwards from the vedikā is a yālī's head from the mouth of which issues a lion's tail.

The circular structure including both the Gandhakuṭi and the Lakṣmīvara-maṇḍapa is surmounted by a vimāna with a spiral finial surmounted by a three-tiered parasol (mukkoḍai), and over this, poised in the air are some of the celestial beings presumably Gandharvas, scattering flowers on the vimāna below them. Some of them stand on either side of the vimāna too. Unfortunately this part of the painting could not be photographed; so it does not appear in the plate.

III

SCENES FROM THE LIVES OF KRISHṆA AND NEMINĀTHA.

Kṛishṇa, the most popular of the Hindu gods, finds a prominent niche in Jaina mythology. He is said to be the cousin of the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara Neminātha. The popularity of the Kṛishṇa-incarnation even among the Jains is proved by the fact that a larger number of paintings is devoted to Kṛishṇa's life and that the Śrī Purāṇa (Vol. IV) devotes a larger number of pages for the life of Kṛishṇa than for Neminātha himself.

The life of Kṛishṇa as given in the Jaina Purāṇas is much the same as is found in the Mahābhārata and the Bhāgavata of the Hindu. It is, however, necessary to give here in brief outline the account given in the Śrī Purāṇa, as this differs in many respects from the better known version of the Śatruñjaya Māhātmya (Sarga x) which has been critically discussed in the Indian Antiquary, vol. xxx, pp. 297-302. And it will be convenient to follow it with a similar brief account of the life of Neminātha, as the remaining series of pictures illustrate both.

Some years before the birth of Kṛishṇa, a non-Jaina ascetic Vasishṭha by name, was performing a rigorous penance in the midst of pañchāgni, i.e., surrounded by fire on the four cardinal points and with the sun above, when two Jaina sages (chāraṇas) pointed out to him that such a penance should not be performed as insects in his hair or jaṭās and serpents and other small living beings in the fuel were getting burnt in his fire. Vasishṭha was made a convert to the Jaina peaceful methods of performing penance and proceeded to do penance near Mathurāpura. Ugrasena, the king of Mathurāpura, who knew the custom among the Jaina ascetics of going out for food periodically, wanted to be the first to feed Vasishṭha. Accordingly he issued a proclamation that when Vasishṭha should come there for food no one should feed him as he himself wanted to receive the merit of feeding him. Three times the ascetic came to the city but got no food, as on his visits Ugrasena was otherwise busy. On the first occasion the palace was ablaze. On the second occasion an infuriated elephant was doing havoc in the city and on the third occasion Ugrasena himself did not receive the ascetic when he came, as he had heard bad news from Jarāsandha, the king of another country. As the ascetic was returning to the forest without food a passer-by remarked that Ugrasena was bent upon starving him, as he had proclaimed that none else should offer him food. The hungry ascetic got incensed at this news and vowed that he would become the son of Ugrasena and bring ruin on him.

Accordingly he was conceived in the womb of Padmāvatī, the wife of Ugrasena. When the child was born it was so ill-looking, with red looks, that the parents wanted to get rid of it as soon as possible. They placed it in a kāṁsa-mañjushā or bed of bell-metal, with a cudgeon leaf explaining its parentage and set it afloat on the river Jumnā.

The bed reached the city of Kauśāmbī, where a woman who was a sweet-meat seller, Maṇḍodarī by name took the child and reared him up calling him Kamsa as he was found in a kāṁsa-mañjushā. But he grew into such a rebellious youth and a bully to the neighbouring youths that eventually Maṇḍodarī had to send him away.

Kamsa reached a city called Śaurya-pura, whose king Vasudeva took him in his service. King Jarāsandha, a powerful neighbouring monarch, issued a proclamation that whoever could capture king Simharatha of Paudanapura, a rebellious vassal of his, could claim half of his kingdom and also the hand of a lady called Jivadyaśā, daughter of Kaṇḍīsēna, a relation of his. Vasudeva captured Simharatha alive but when he went to claim the reward from Jarāsandha he found Jivadyaśā so bad-looking that he threw the credit of having captured Simharatha on Kamsa. But Jarāsandha hesitated to give his consent for the marriage as he was not sure if Kamsa was of the warrior-caste or of some lower one. Maṇḍodarī, who was sent for, produced the bell-metal bed and the cudgion leaf before Jarāsandha, who now learnt that Kamsa was king Ugrasena's son. And Kamsa was given one half of the kingdom and the hand of Jivadyaśā.

Incensed at what his parents had done with him, he imprisoned both Ugrasena and Padmāvatī and kept them in chains at the gate-way of Mathurāpura, which he made the capital of his kingdom. He was, however, grateful to Vasudeva, to whom he gave in marriage his cousin, Devakī, daughter of Devasena, his paternal uncle, and arranged for them to live with him.

One day, Devakī's brother, Ratimukta by name, who was an ascetic, came to the palace for "charyā", i.e., periodical food. Kamsa's wife, Jivadyaśā showed him the nuptial-cloth of Devakī and made fun of her. Ratimukta prophesied that a son would be born to Devakī, who would kill Kamsa. On hearing this, Jivadyaśā tore the cloth in wrath and Ratimukta said that her action meant that Devakī's son would kill her father too. Jivadyaśā then crushed the cloth under her feet when the ascetic prophesied that this action indicated that Devakī's son would become the lord of the world.

Jivadyaśā imparted this news to Kamsa who got so nervous that he decided on killing the children that were to be born to Devakī. To carry out his resolve he feigned deep affection for Vasudeva and Devakī and requested them to stay with him in his own palace during Devakī's pregnancy. To this they agreed, suspecting nothing. Devakī gave birth to twins three times which were stealthily removed from the palace by one of the devas called Naigamarshaṇa and were entrusted to the care of a lady, Ālakā of the Vaiśya caste, who had also simultaneously given birth to twins three times. The deva removed Ālakā's children to Kamsa's palace, where Kamsa dashed them against rocks and killed them, under the belief that they were born to Devakī.

Seven months later Devakī gave birth to her seventh son, Kṛishṇa who was similarly removed from the palace stealthily, this time not by the deva Naigamarshaṇa but by Vasudeva himself and his step-son, Baladeva¹ to a village of cowherds nearby. There a cowherd, Nanda, who had a daughter born to his wife, as a result of her repeated prayers, was carrying the child to the temple to offer it to the god to whom she had prayed. Vasudeva and Baladeva gave him Kṛishṇa and took in return his daughter which they carried back to Kamsa's palace. On hearing that Devakī had given birth to a daughter Kamsa took the child from Devaki and crushed it under his feet. He then heaved a sigh of relief, little suspecting that Kṛishṇa, his foe, was growing up in the village of the cowherds.

¹ For Baladevas of Jaina hagiology, see Appendix III, pp. 222-223.

But bad omens and evil portents such as earthquakes at Mathurāpura made him nervous again, for a soothsayer, Varuṇa, told him that they all indicated that his foe, who was to kill him, was still alive. He commissioned evil spirits to kill his foe but they all failed and out of shame never returned to him. In course of time he learnt that Kṛishṇa was his foe. He attempted to kill him in many ways but in vain, till finally he wrestled with Kṛishṇa and was killed.

Kṛishṇa now became the lord of the land. Ugrasena and his wife were set free and were installed at Mathurāpura as king and queen once again. Kṛishṇa stayed with his father, Vasudeva at Śauryapura.

King Jarāsandha learnt from Jivadyaśā, the widow of Kamsa, about Kamsa's death at the hands of Kṛishṇa and sent his three sons, one after another to attack Kṛishṇa, who proved more than a match for the first two sons but could not withstand the attacks of the third, Kālayava. Feeling that he and his followers would be pursued by Kālayava and his forces, Kṛishṇa led his followers to an unknown island in the sea which he named Dvārāvati.

All were happy at Dvārāvati and Kṛishṇa ruled the island with the help of his father Vasudeva and step-brother Baladeva. About this time Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthāṅkara was born in the island to an uncle of Kṛishṇa, called Samudravijaya and his wife Śivadevi, and grew into a handsome youth. By his prowess and valour he overshadowed even Kṛishṇa. There grew up a mighty friendship between Kṛishṇa and Neminātha, as is common among cousins.

It so happened that Jarāsandha learnt of the whereabouts of Kṛishṇa and his men from some ship-wrecked merchants who had seen Dvārāvati and its lord, Kṛishṇa. He sent a challenge to Kṛishṇa to come out of his hiding place and fight with him like a warrior, and Kṛishṇa accepted the challenge. Entrusting Dvārāvati to Neminātha he started with Vasudeva and Baladeva and a big force for Kurukshetra, where in a pitched battle with Jarāsandha and his forces he killed Jarāsandha and routed his forces. When he returned victorious to Dvārāvati the people anointed him a universal monarch (chakravartin), and Neminātha conferred on him his blessings.

The life of Neminātha is as follows:—

King Samudravijaya of the Hari dynasty, who was an uncle of Kṛishṇa, was staying with the Yādavas in Dvārāvati. His wife, Śivadevi, while sleeping, saw the sixteen dreams that every mother of a Tīrthāṅkara sees and like Vardhamāna's mother, Priyakārinī, saw the elephant entering her face. In due course she gave birth to Neminātha. The devas headed by Saudharmendra took him to mount Maha-Meru for Jagmābhisheka and after anointing him with celestial waters brought him back to Dvārāvati. Neminātha grew into a handsome youth. A close friendship arose between him and Kṛishṇa, who always consulted him in affairs dealing with the administration of the kingdom, etc.

When King Jarāsandha challenged Kṛishṇa to come out of his hiding place and fight with him, Kṛishṇa invited Neminātha to look after the kingdom while he was away, which he did.

One day while Neminātha was sporting in a tank with Satyabhāmā, one of the wives of Kṛishṇa, he made a wager with her that whosoever got tired first in a water-fight (jala-kriḍā), i.e., splashing water against each other, should wear the dress of the other. Satyabhāmā got tired earlier and when asked to wear the dress of Neminātha refused to do so on the ground that he had not done trivikrama (i.e., getting on the Nāga-śayana, blowing a conch and bending a bow) like her husband Kṛishṇa. Thereupon Neminātha did trivikrama before her and the blast that he produced from the conch was heard by all including Kṛishṇa, who learnt from his men whence the sound came. Feeling that Neminātha desired to enjoy the pleasures of life Kṛishṇa arranged for his marriage with Rātrimati, the daughter of Ugrasena.

When the day fixed for the marriage came Kṛishṇa reflected in his mind that the step he had taken was dangerous to himself as Neminātha, when married, by tasting the pleasures of worldly life, would be tempted to make himself a chakravartin, in which case he (Kṛishṇa) would be overshadowed by his superior might and intellect. He therefore wanted to prevent the marriage from taking place. When Neminātha was coming along the streets in procession towards the palace where the marriage was to take place Kṛishṇa got herds of sickly cattle, sheep and other animals to stand in his way so that, on seeing them, he might get disgusted with life, and put off his marriage for ever. True to his expectations Neminātha was so moved by the pitiable condition of these animals that he resolved to renounce the world.

Immediately after, the Laukāntikas came and reminded him of dikshā. He got into a palanquin like the other Tirthaṅkaras and left for a forest where he did penance under trees for a number of years, periodically going to various countries for charya. After a time he became a kevalī when the devas raised the "samavasaraṇa" over him, seated in the centre of which he taught the world the supreme Law.¹

Painting No. 65 (pl. xxv)—

65-a. கை-பாபா-பாதித் தலை கண்ணும் ஜிவத்யைமும் அமரமையில் யிருக்குறது யில
பம் ||

Mathurāpurattil Kamsanum Jivadyasaiyum aramamai (nai) yil yirukkuṛadu yivadam ||

"Here [are shown] Kamsa and his wife Jivadyasā being (sitting) in the palace in Mathurāpura."

Both Kamsa and Jivadyasā are shown as sitting and being fanned by an attendant while two other men with staffs held under their arms, perhaps his court-officials, are awaiting his commands with their hands placed together in respect (añjali).

¹ One of the links in Jaina tradition is the historicity of Neminātha, who was a prince in Kathiawar and flourished about 5,000 years before Pārśvanātha who is said to have died in 776 B.C. Indian history before 327 B.C. being so uncertain we can reject this period that intervened between these Tirthaṅkaras as fabulous. But the authenticity of his life need not be brushed aside in like manner. He was a prince of the Yādava clan at Dvārakā and a cousin of Kṛishṇa. For a discussion on this subject see Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, pp. xxxiv-v.

65-b. Illustrates the marriage between Vasudeva and Devaki.

கம்ஸது சுத-வெஜயாகிய தெவகியை வஸு-தெவனுக்கு கருணம்பண்ணி
குடுக்குறது சிவடம் உ ||

*Kaṁsan annjaiyāgiya Devakiyai Vasudevānukku karuṇampanni kuḍukkuṟadu
yivadam u ||*

"Here is shown Devaki, the younger sister of Kamsa, being given in marriage to Vasudeva by Kamsa."

Vasudeva and Devaki are shown on the left sitting side by side on a raised seat. A fire is kindled in front of them by a purohita or priest who is pouring some oblations into the flames and performing the necessary marriage rites. The lighting of the fire is an important item in a marriage or in any religious function in India for it is believed that no function will be sanctified and legalized unless it is done in the presence of the fire-god, who is supposed to be a never-failing witness.

The fire is placed on a pyramidal pedestal. In the foreground are two kalasas with mango leaves inserted in them and a tray with what look like flowers upon it.

65-c. This illustrates the birth of Kṛishṇa.

தெவகிக்கு சூஷ்ண பிறந்தது சிவடம்,
Devakikku Sūṣṇan piṇṇadadu yivadam.

"Here [is shown] the birth of Kṛishṇa to Devaki."

The birth of the child is indicated here as in similar birth scenes (pl. xvii) by Devaki standing or sitting behind a small screen which half hides her. She has her right hand extended suggesting that she is in pain. An attendant is anxiously watching her, standing on her left, and is massaging her in the region of her hips.

Painting No. 66 (pl. xxv).—This illustrates the removal of the child stealthily to Godāvana, the locality of the cowherds, where it was entrusted to the care of a cowherd, Nanda.

66-a. ஸுவதெவது சூஷ்ணை வாங்குறது சிவடம் உ ||
Baladevan Sūṣṇanai vāṅguṟadu yivadam u ||

"Here (is shown) Baladeva receiving Kṛishṇa."

Vasudeva and Baladeva, who wished that Kamsa should not come to know about the birth of Kṛishṇa, removed him from the palace with the intention of giving him to someone who would rear him up without revealing his identity. Baladeva took the child from the hands of a nurse in the birth-room and reached the palace gates, accompanied by Vasudeva, who spread a white umbrella over the child, and led by the guardian-deity of the city which came in the form of a bull and removed darkness on his way by the lustre issuing from the gems (ratnas) with which its horns were inlaid. The city gates, which were then locked, opened of their own accord to let the party out. Baladeva and Vasudeva reached the river Yamunā (Jumna) which they could not cross for there was no ferry then, it being midnight. But the goddess Yamunā, the presiding deity of the river, stopped the flow of her waters for some time and gave them a passage. On arriving at the other shore they met a cowherd, Nanda, who was carrying a female child in his arms. On learning from him that the child was born to his wife who had prayed to a deity near by for a child and that he was carrying the child, as his wife desired, to the temple of that deity to make of it an offering there, Vasudeva gave him Kṛishṇa and took his daughter in return, narrating to him the birth of Kṛishṇa and asking him to bring up the child in complete concealment. Nanda took Kṛishṇa home and fearing that his wife might not believe him if he told her the real account of the child told her that the deity to whom he offered the female child born to her gave him in return a boy. His innocent wife believed him and brought up the child as her own.

Baladeva, who can be distinguished by a plough¹ (which was his weapon) that leans against his shoulder is seen spreading his hands to receive child Kṛishṇa whom an attendant woman is holding in her hands. This attendant woman is shown again on the right, where presumably she is taking the child from the room before giving it to Baladeva.

66b. வலாடெவது யவஹதும் மெடுக்குதது சிவடம் உ.

Vasudevan dhavaḷa-chhatram yedukkuradu yivaḍam u.

"Here [is shown] Vasudeva spreading a white umbrella."

Baladeva who is again distinguished by a plough resting on his shoulder is carrying the child while Vasudeva goes before him with the umbrella spread over it. In all these paintings Vasudeva is painted yellow and Baladeva white.

66c. கமரடெவதை ஸுஷஹதநாமாய் கொம்புலெ ரத்திகங்கள் அழித்தி முன் செல்லுகுதது சிவடம் உ ||

Nagaradēvatai śuṣabhaḥāramāy koṁbule rattinaṅgaḷ aḻitti muṇṇellukuraḍu yivaḍam u ||

"Here [is shown] the guardian-deity of the city, in the form of a bull going before them with its horns inlaid with gems."

The bull, which is shown as trotting before them towards the gate, is said to have illumined the way by the gems with which its horns were inlaid.

66d. கொபுரவாசல் கதவு தானெ திறந்தது சிவடம் உ ||

Gōpura-vāśal-kadavu tāṇe tiraṇṇadadu yivaḍam u ||

"Here did the tower-gate open of its own accord."

A rectangular lattice-work surmounted by a gopura-tower represents the tower-gate. It is said the gate opened when the child's feet were made to touch it. Ugrasena, the father of Kamsa, who was in chains there asked them who they were and was told that the child was to become his rescuer. On hearing this Ugrasena felt glad at heart.

66e. அப்பாஸ் யிமானதி தானெ விவங்குதது சிவடம் உ ||

Appā Yimānadi tāṇe vilanṅkuraḍu yivaḍam u ||

"Then the river Yamunā moved and gave way of its own accord."

The river is indicated by two wavy lines with fishes between, while the passage that the river is said to have allowed to the party is indicated by a small red band in the middle of the river.

¹ The plough is his distinguishing mark in Hindu mythology also.

66-f. ஸுமெலவது பிள்ளை உ-துவொத்திரமெல்லாம் சொல்லி தருமொவது கைகிலெ
புள்ளையை குடுக்குறது கிலடம் உ ||

Baladevan pillai pūruvottiram-ellām sollī Nanda-gōpan kaiyile pullayai kuḍukkuradu yivaḍam உ ||

"Here [is shown] Baladeva placing the boy (Kṛishṇa) in the hands of the cowherd Nanda, after narrating to him the parentage, etc., of the child."

Baladeva, with his plough leaning against his shoulder, is shown here holding the child in a position suggesting that he is about to deliver it into the hands of the cowherd who, with outspread hands is eager to receive it. The cowherd is shown in the typical dress of cowherds even to-day, viz., a shawl covering the head and the back and a small loin-cloth suspended from a string tied to the waist and has the nāmam (Vaishṇava caste-mark) on his forehead. At his feet lies the female child, painted deep-red like Nanda, which he has deposited on the ground probably in his eagerness to receive child Kṛishṇa. Baladeva, as usual, is painted white.

Nanda is shown again, on the left, with the child in his arms, departing from the place and going to his wife. His wife stands on the extreme left of the painting, in front of Nanda, with the child in her arms having presumably just received it from him.

Though the Śrī Purāṇa (Vol. IV) speaks of Vasudeva taking the child and entrusting it to the care of Nanda, this is ascribed in the painting to Baladeva. This is a clear deviation from the text.

Painting No. 67 (pl. xxv).—Here are shown the various evil spirits commissioned by Kamsa, attempting to kill Kṛishṇa.

Seven evil spirits were sent. They reached Godāvana, the locality where Kṛishṇa was growing up, one after the other. The first, a female spirit took the form of Nanda's wife and with her breasts smeared with poison, approached Kṛishṇa and took him up in her arms tempting him to suckle her breasts. Before Kṛishṇa could do so, one of the guardian-deities of Kṛishṇa caught hold of her breasts and pressed them with such force that she dropped Kṛishṇa down and fled away.

The second spirit came in the form of a wheel with the intention of running over Kṛishṇa but when it came near him he gave it a kick with such force that it was shattered into countless pieces.

On another occasion, when Nanda's wife wanted to go out to fetch water, Kṛishṇa insisted on following her wherever she went. To prevent him she tied him to a big stone mortar. But Kṛishṇa followed her even now, dragging the mortar along after him. Two of the evil spirits came and stood in his way in the form of two trees with the intention of doing him harm when he came near them. Kṛishṇa came along with the mortar behind him but when he reached the trees he pulled them up by their roots and dashed them one against the other.

Another spirit took the form of a palmyra tree with the intention of dropping its fruits on Kṛishṇa when he should pass beneath. Yet another took the form of an ass and approached Kṛishṇa intending to bite him. Kṛishṇa pulled up the palmyra tree and beat the ass with it with such force that both the tree-spirit and the ass-spirit ran for their lives.

The seventh and last of the spirits sent by Kamsa approached him in the form of a horse intending to bite him. When the horse was sufficiently near him he caught hold of its mouth firmly and tore its jaws.

Unable to harm Krishna in any way all these spirits ran away to their worlds. Out of shame they did not go to Kamsa who was therefore still in the dark regarding the whereabouts of his foe.

In the painting all these details are represented in a crowded manner, the labels in two cases being in the painting itself and not in the bands below. They are dealt with here in five sections (a, b, c, d and e).

67-a. காவலு விடப்பட டெவதை எழு கு. ஒரு டெவதை சகடம்பொரு வந்தது யிவடம் உ.

Kāṁṣan viḍapatta devatai eṇu 7. Oru devatai śakaṭampole vandadu yivadam உ.

"The spirits commissioned by Kamsa are seven, 7. One spirit comes here in the form of a wheel."

Krishna is here seen above kicking the wheel.

எடச்சி குஷ்டை [உச*]கொடு கட்டிப்பொட்டு தண்ணிக்கு பொற பொறு உரலை யிழுத்து(க்)கொன்(ண்)டு பொறது யிவடம்.

சென்(இரண்)டு டெவதை வுக்குதலா(கா)ரமாயி வந்தது யிவடம் உ.

Edachchi Krishṇai [ura]leḍe koḍṭi(p)poṭṭu tanniṅku pōrapōdu uralai yiluttu(k) koṇ(ṇ)ḍupōradu yivadam.*

Reṇ (Iran)ḍu devatai vrikshāḥa(ka) ramāyi vandadu yivadam உ.

"When the cowherdess tied Krishna to a mortar and left to fetch water Krishna dragging the mortar [is shown] here."

"Here [are shown] two spirits that came in the form of trees."

The cowherdess is shown with a pitcher in her right hand going away from the child Krishna who is following her dragging the mortar behind him. He is pulling up the trees that stand in his way. The bodies of the two evil spirits, shown as women, hang from the trees head downwards. The evil spirits (themselves in their real forms) are here curiously associated with their assumed forms.

67-b. ஒரு டெவதை பகமரமாயி வந்தது யிவடம் உ |

ஒரு டெவதை குதிரை வடிவாய் வந்தது யிவடம் உ ||

ஒரு டெவதை கழுதை வடிவாய் வந்தது யிவடம் உ.

Oru devatai panamaramāyi vandadu yivadam உ |

Oru devatai kūdirai vaḍivāy vandadu yivadam உ ||

Oru devatai kaḷudai vaḍivāy vandadu yivadam உ.

"A spirit [that] came in the form of a palmya tree [is shown] here."

"A spirit coming in the form of a horse [is shown] here."

"A spirit coming in the form of an ass [is shown] here."

Kṛishṇa is shown here twice. While above he is pulling up the palmyra tree evidently with the intention of beating the ass that stands in front of him, he is shown below tearing the jaws of the horse that is attacking him.

67-c. ஒரு டெவதை பொண்ணா (ஹனு)வாய் முலை குடுக்க வந்தது சிவடம் உ.

யிடி யெழு தெவதைகளையுட சூழ்ன் துரத்திவிட்டது சிவடம்.

Oru devatai poṇṇū (ṇṇu) vāy mulai kuḍukka vandadu yivadam u.

Yinda eḷu devataigaḷaiyūṁ Kṛishṇaṁ turattiviṭṭadu yivadam.

"One spirit came here in the form of a female [to feed Kṛishṇa] with [the milk in] her breasts."

"Here did Kṛishṇa drive all these seven spirits."

The female spirit is here shown in the form of a giantess (with Kṛishṇa in her arm). Though according to the Śrī Purāṇa she is said to have assumed the form of Nanda's wife she is represented as of immense form, more in keeping with her evil nature. Moreover she was called Bhūtā or the demoness.

Three of these labels (67-a and 67-c) are in the painting itself contrary to the practice of writing them in the band below. The first records the commencement of the attacks on Kṛishṇa by the seven spirits, beginning, however, with the one that came as a wheel. The second records the coming of the ass-spirit, and the third the defeat of all the spirits.

67-d. அரிஷ்டனென்பாரெனருடெவது சூழ்ன் வ-ஷ்ஷாஹா(கா)ரமாய் பரிக்ஷிக்குறது சிவடம் |

Ariṣṭan-eṇṇāṇoru dēvan Kṛishṇanai vṛishabhāhā(kā)ramāy parikṣhikkuraḍu yivadam.¹ |

"A deva called Ariṣṭan coming in the form of a bull and putting the strength of Kṛishṇa to the test."

Ariṣṭa¹, who admired Kṛishṇa's doings, chased him one day in the form of a bull with the intention of testing his strength. Kṛishṇa caught the bull's neck and twisted it with such force that the deva regretted the step he had taken and begged his pardon for his foolishness. Nanda's wife who happened to arrive on the scene when Kṛishṇa was twisting the bull's neck, reprimanded him for his bold and rash actions. Just then the parents of Kṛishṇa, Vasudeva and Devaki, accompanied by Baladeva came there to see him.

67-e. வசுட-புடெவது வாலுடெவது டெவகி இவர்கள் பிள்ளையை பாட(ர்க்)க வந்தது சி(வடம்).

Vasudevan Baladevan Devaki ivargal piḷaiyai pāḍ(rk)ka vandadu yi(vadam).

"Here [are shown] Vasudeva, Baladeva and Devaki (and others) who came to see the boy."

Vasudeva, Devaki and Baladeva who were duly kept informed of the doings of Kṛishṇa were all longing to see him but could not do so openly lest Kamsa should get suspicious and do harm to Kṛishṇa. It so happened that a festival called Gomukhī, when cows were decorated and worshipped, fell on the particular day when Kṛishṇa subdued the deva, Arishṭa. And on the pretext of seeing the cows at Godāvana they all went to the place where Kṛishṇa was growing up and saw him subduing the bull to the dismay of Nanda's wife. Devakī was lost in admiration of her son and her motherly affection which was latent revived with such force that milk dripped from her breasts. Baladeva, who saw this, suddenly took milk in his hands from a pot near by and sprinkled it on her saying that she was about to faint from fatigue consequent on her observing the fast on that day. After decorating Kṛishṇa with ornaments and rich dress his parents took leave of him along with Baladeva and left for the city.

¹ See above, p. 94.

In the painting Devakī is shown standing erect suggesting that she is lost in her admiration of her son who is standing in front of her. He has his right hand raised and the first finger lifted up as if he is mockingly threatening Nanda's wife who is standing on the right of Devakī, threatening him with her right first finger. She is shown here as a lady of comparatively small size. In the background, on the extreme right, Vasudeva and Baladeva can be seen though the painting has been much obliterated. Vasudeva who, as usual, is coloured yellow (which shows as black in the photograph) points at Kṛishṇa with his right hand. Baladeva is white and carries his weapon, the plough, shown in black.

Painting No. 68 (pl. xxv).—This illustrates some more events of valour relating to the life of Kṛishṇa.

68-a. கிருஷ்ண . . . னனது எடுத்து மொருவங்களை . . . து யிவ(டம்).

Krishṇan . . . nannai eḍuttu mokṛuvanṅgalai . . . tu yiva(ḍam).

"Kṛishṇa lifting up (here) the (mountain Govardha)na . . . and protecting the cow-world."

During a heavy rain when all the cows and the cowherds and their wives were rendered homeless and were consequently suffering for want of a shelter Kṛishṇa lifted up over them as a protection a mountain called Govardhana.

He is shown standing in the middle of the painting lifting up the mountain with the little finger of his left hand and the cattle stand below.

68-b. This illustrates another deed of valour and strength of Kṛishṇa, one of those by which Kamsa came to know who and where his foe was.

மதூர . . . பரவனத்தில் . . . |

கிருஷ்ண த்ரிவிசுமம் பன்ம(ண்ணு) குமது யிவடம் உ ||

Mathurā . . . parvvanamīl . . . |

Krishṇan trivikramam paṇṇu(ṇṇu) kuṛadu yivaḍam உ ||

"Mathurā . . . in . . . Parvvanam . . . "

"Here Kṛishṇa does trivikrama or three conquests."

One day Kamsa learnt from his men that in a part of his palace called Indra-Bhavana three curious things had appeared which were a conch, a bow and a vehicle designed like a nāga or serpent (nāga-sayana). They were, it was said, created for Kṛishṇa whose greatness was to become known to the world through them. Varuṇa, Kamsa's soothsayer, who was sent for said that he who could ascend the nāga-śayana, bend the bow and blow the conch could become the Lord of the three worlds. And Kamsa, curious to know if he could become one, tried to ascend the nāga-śayana, bend the bow and blow the conch but in vain. Thereupon he issued a proclamation that whosoever can do trivikrama, i.e., these three deeds, can claim the hand of his daughter in marriage.

Many kings started for the city of Mathurāpura with the intention of doing trivikrama. One of them was Bhānu, the son of Subhānu, a brother-in-law of Kamsa. On his way to Mathurāpura Bhānu camped in Godāvana on the banks of a lotus-tank in which dwelt a big serpent¹. The cowherds refused to allow him to camp there as they said that the serpent would do harm to all that came near the tank save Kṛishṇa who alone was powerful enough to subdue it. Kṛishṇa was sent for and he permitted him to camp, remaining with him to protect him from the serpent. A friendship sprung up between Bhānu and Kṛishṇa, and Bhānu told the latter that he was bound for Mathurāpura to do trivikrama. Kṛishṇa offering to accompany him on the condition that Bhānu would not reveal his identity they started for the city.

Arrived at the city they found that all the kings that came to do trivikrama had been unsuccessful in their attempts and were departing for their respective kingdoms. This greatly disheartened Bhānu who was however encouraged to make the attempt by Kṛishṇa offering to help him. The latter accompanied Bhānu, unobserved by Kamsa and his men, to Indra-Bhavana, and did the three deeds successively in the name of Bhānu. Soon after he left for Godāvana unperceived.

True to his promise Kamsa requested Bhānu to marry his daughter which the latter was very glad and eager to do for he knew well that he did not merit the offer. Unfortunately for him some deities that guarded the nāga-śayana told Kamsa that trivikrama was not done by him but by Kṛishṇa. Thereupon Kamsa sent for his trusted messengers and ordered them on pain of death to find out Kṛishṇa.

The painting which is obliterated shows a tree under which Kṛishṇa is standing on a five headed cobra, bending the bow and blowing a conch with its end designed like a hamsa's tail.

68-c. நந்தமொபபு மொருங்களை ஒடிக்கொண்டு ஒடி(ப்)பொ(ரு)ந்து சிவடம் உ.

Nandagopan Gokulaṅgaḷai Ottikkonḍu ḍḍi(p)pō(ki) ṛaḍu yivadam u.

"Here (is shown) the cowherd, Nanda, driving the cow-world and running away."

Nanda, the foster-father of Kṛishṇa, on hearing that Kṛishṇa had done trivikrama at Mathurāpura, and that Kamsa had learnt that he had been duped and had sent his men to find him, became afraid of meeting Kamsa's wrath and set out for a distant land with the cowherds, their families and the cows.

In the painting Nanda is shown with his cow-world on the move. First come the cows and the calves, then the cowherds with their wives and children and lastly Nanda himself with a staff in his right hand and a bag in his left.

¹ This serpent is known in Hindu mythology as Aśliya by subduing which Kṛishṇa got the name Aśliya-Kṛishṇa.

68-d. ஸிதாஸ்தாபனத்தை எடுத்து நின்று(திரு)நது யிவடம் உ ||

. śitastambhattai eḍuttu nīnttu(tti)nadu yivadam u ||

"Here [is shown Kṛishṇa] taking a stone pillar and making it stand."

While Nanda and his men were on their way, Kṛishṇa, who was accompanying them, wanted to give Nanda confidence so that he could be persuaded to return. When, therefore, they came across a huge stone pillar on the way Kṛishṇa lifted it up and held it aloft. The cowherds praised Kṛishṇa and worshipped him with flowers and ornaments while Nanda realized that with Kṛishṇa near them no harm could happen to himself or the cowherds. He now determined to return to Godāvana and face the wrath of Kamsa.

In the painting Kṛishṇa is shown holding the pillar.

Painting No. 69 (pl. xxvi)—

69-a. பொங்கை(யி)ல் தாமரபூஷம் பறிக்க பொன் பொது மஹாகாமம் சிறி வந
தன வய்யுதினான் அடித்து புஷ்பத்தை பறித்து வந்தது யிவடம் உ ||

. Poygai(yi)l tamarapushpam parikka ponṇapodu mahā-kāgam śiri vana tan vastrattiṇṇai adittu puṣpattai parittu vandadu yivadam u ||

"Here (is shown Kṛishṇa) who subdued with his cloth the big serpent that came to bite him with a hissing noise when he wanted to pluck a lotus flower from the tank, and who brought the flower."

Suspicious of the existence of his foe in Godāvana, Kamsa tried to discover him by an artifice. He ordered Nanda to send him a lotus flower with 1,000 petals that was growing in the tank of their village, a tank which was guarded by a big serpent, for he thought that if he could know who took it from the tank he would thereby know who his foe was. Nanda was at his wit's end when he received this order but Kṛishṇa reassured him and offered to get the flower without revealing his identity to Kamsa. Nanda agreeing, Kṛishṇa dived into the tank when the serpent rushed at him with a hissing noise and with its hood outspread. Kṛishṇa threw his cloth on it and the serpent got so frightened that it ran away. The flower was taken and was sent to Kamsa by messengers.

In the painting, Kṛishṇa is seen in the middle of the tank which is indicated by lotuses in the middle and steps on all sides. He is throwing his cloth on the serpent which is jumping up.

69-b. கம்ஸது மஹாநாயை விட சூஷ்ண கொம்பை புடித்து முறிய அடித்து
யிவடம் உ

Kaṁsan madayāṇaiyai viḍa Kṛishṇan koṁbai puḍittu muṛiya adittadu yivadam u

"Kamsa setting up an infuriated elephant and Kṛishṇa subduing it by twisting its tusks."

On receiving the lotus from Nanda's messengers Kamsa learnt that his foe was living in Godāvana. With the intention of getting Kṛishṇa to the city so that he could kill him he announced to Nanda and the cowherds that he had organized a world-wrestling match in which all wrestlers could take part. He sent special requests to the cowherds to send their wrestlers, if they had any, to the match so that it should not be said of them that there was no wrestler in their midst. Kṛishṇa, who was eager to take part in the match, prevailed on Nanda to send him along with some other wrestlers from among the cowherds to the city. Kamsa, who was awaiting them at the city gates, put an infuriated mad elephant in their way in the hope that it would kill Kṛishṇa. But Kṛishṇa caught hold of its tusks and brought it down easily.

In the painting he is shown as wrenching out its tusks.

69-c. க்ருஷ்ணனும் வாலுமேலனும் மல்லபுரப்பண்ணை காலுமேல கொன்றுமுறுகூக்கு யிது
சமயமின்று காதுவெல சொல்லி ஒடிப்பாகது யிவடம் ||

Kṛishṇanum Baladevanum malla-yuddham paṇṇa Kamsanai kollukurattukku yidu samayam-inru kādulaṭṭe solli ḍḍi ponadu yivadam ||

"Baladeva and Kṛishṇa wrestling, and Baladeva whispering into the ears of Kṛishṇa that the time was ripe for Kṛishṇa to kill Kamsa, and then running away."

Vasudeva, who had learnt the designs of Kamsa, collected all his forces and was ready to assist Kṛishṇa should Kamsa carry out his plans. Baladeva, who wanted to inform Kṛishṇa of this, was wondering how he could contrive to convey the news to him without arousing Kamsa's suspicions till a thought struck him. To the utter surprise of all, including Kṛishṇa himself he came out in the arena and challenged Kṛishṇa to wrestle with him. Kṛishṇa accepting the challenge, both wrestled for some time. In the course of the wrestling Baladeva whispered into the ears of Kṛishṇa the reasons for his adopting such a course and that the time had come for him to kill Kamsa and that he had nothing to apprehend from Kamsa's men as Vasudeva had collected his forces and was ready to come to his rescue should need be. In a short time he feigned defeat and left the arena.

In the painting they are shown as wrestling. Kṛishṇa is the shorter of the two. As is usual Baladeva is done in white. The plough, his distinguishing mark, rests on his shoulder.

69-d. க்ருஷ்ண மல்லவனாடெ யுறும்பண்ணி செ(ஜ)யிச்ச(த்த)து யிவடம் உ.

Kṛishṇan mallavāṇḍe yuddham paṇṇi se(ja)yiccho(tta)du yivadam உ.

"Kṛishṇa wrestling with (Kamsa's) wrestler and coming out victorious."

A trained wrestler of Kamsa, Chāṇūra by name, was then sent to the arena. In a short time Kṛishṇa sent him to the other world and cried if there were any more wrestlers who desired to be sent to the other world too.

Kṛishṇa is here shown wrestling with Chāṇūra who is done in yellow and who is naked except for a small loin-cloth (laṅghoṭh).

69-e. பிறகு கம்ஸது . . . காலையுடித்து தலைகீழாய் அடித்துப்பாட்ட . . .

Piragu Kamsan . . . kalai pudittu talaikilāy aḍittu poṭṭa . . .

"Then Kamsa . . . holding the leg and head downwards dashing . . ."

Driven by fate Kamsa accepted the challenge thrown by Kṛishṇa and descended the arena. It was easy work for Kṛishṇa to kill him. He took him by his legs and whirling him round like a wheel dashed him down so that he died forthwith.

In the painting Kṛishṇa is shown holding Kamsa by his legs so that his head is down,

69-f. வஸுதெவனாடுகொடவர் . . . யத்தினல் மொல . . . வாகுஜகம்
கரு . . .

Vasudeva-Baladevar . . . yattināl Gopa . . . sakala janaiṅgaḷu . . .

"Vasudeva, Baladeva (and the other relations of Kṛishṇa announcing) to all (that had come there that Kṛishṇa was Vasudeva's son and that he was growing up in the midst of) the cowherds for fear (of Kamsa)".

The people of Mathurāpura and the followers of Kamsa became tumultuous on hearing that Kṛishṇa, a cowherd after all, had killed their king. To allay their tumult Vasudeva and Baladeva told them that Kṛishṇa was the son of Vasudeva and hence a kshatriya and that he had necessarily to be brought up in the village of the cowherds to escape the murderous intentions of Kamsa. Thus assured, the people became quiet and were glad to hail Kṛishṇa as their king.

In the painting Vasudeva and Baladeva are standing on the left. The latter has the plough leaning on his right shoulder. Vasudeva is announcing to the three kings with crowns (*kirita*s) on their heads, on the extreme right, the parentage of Kṛishṇa. They are listening with their hands placed in worship (añjali). Kṛishṇa stands between Vasudeva and the kings and can be distinguished by the konḍai ornament on his head which is also seen in No. 69, c, d, and e.

Painting No. 70 (pl. xxvi).—This illustrates the events that followed the death of Kamsa. The painting runs from right to left and can be divided into four panels.

70-a. கிருஷ்ணன் . . . கைசில் யிருக்கு . . .

Kṛishṇa . . . kaiyil yirukku . . .

" . . . being in the palace . . . Kṛishṇa."

Though the label is mostly obliterated the scene can be made out with the aid of Śrī Purāṇa, Vol. IV.

As soon as Kamsa was killed, Kṛishṇa released Ugrasena and Padmāvatī, whom their son Kamsa had imprisoned and installed them as king and queen of Mathurāpura again. They are shown in the painting as sitting while two figures perhaps representing vassals are standing in front of them. Thus it is possible to supply the blanks in the label in the light of the information given above, which would then read as:—"Ugrasena and his wife, Padmāvatī, being in the palace after the former had received the kingdom from Kṛishṇa."

70-b. . . . தெவகியும் அரமணையில் யிருக்குமது சிவடம் உ

. . . Devakiyum aramāṇaiyil yirukkuṇadu yivadam u.

" . . . and Devakī seated in the palace."

After installing Ugrasena at Mathurāpura Kṛishṇa left with his father Vasudeva and step-brother Baladeva for Śaurāpura, the capital of his father's kingdom, where he enjoyed pleasures and ease.

In the painting Vasudeva and Devaki are shown as seated in the palace.

70-c. சிவதேவியாரும் அரமணியில் யிருக்குறது
யிவடம் உ.

. mudravijaya Śivadevīyārum aramaṇaiyil yirukkuṟadu yivadam.
" (Sa)mudravijaya and Śivadevī here in the palace."

King Samudravijaya, an uncle of Kṛṣṇa, was also staying with Kṛṣṇa's father. It was to him, through his wife Śivadevī, that Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara was born as will be seen under painting No. 73 (p. 150.)

In the painting Samudravijaya and his wife are shown seated on a throne in the palace in the same way in which similar pairs (70-b) are represented in others of these paintings.

70-d. ஜராஸந்தது யின்னை சூய்வனாடு சண்டை

Jarāsandhan piḷḷai Kṛṣṇanoḍu sandai
"Jarāsandha's son fighting with Kṛṣṇa"

Jivadyasā, Kamsa's widow, fled to the Magadha kingdom where she narrated to Jarāsandha, its king, all that had happened at Mathurāpura and how she was made a widow by Kṛṣṇa. Jarāsandha promised her that he would kill Kṛṣṇa in a very short time. Feeling that Kṛṣṇa might not be so strong as to necessitate his starting for battle himself against him he sent a big force under one of his sons called Mahābala who came to Śauryapura and fought with Kṛṣṇa by whom he was defeated and his forces routed.

In the painting the two forces are shown as engaged in battle. A flag-bearer stands between them. Kṛṣṇa's forces are on the right and Mahābala's on the left. Kṛṣṇa can be distinguished by his whitish colour and the circular ornament (koṇḍai) on his head. One of Mahābala's men has fallen down evidently killed.

Painting No. 71 (pl. xxvi).—This illustrates the attacks on Kṛṣṇa by two other sons of Jarāsandha, called Aparājita and Kālayava. Aparājita fought with Kṛṣṇa for 346 days and was finally killed. The other son, Kālayava was a more formidable opponent and he proved in battle to be more than a match for Kṛṣṇa who felt that he should retreat and avoid fighting if he could, to escape ignominy.

71-a. து அவசாஜிகது களச பண்ணி யிழுக்கு
பொகது யிவடம்.

. Aparājitan 346 panni viḷundu ponadu yivadam.

" Aparājitan after fighting [with Kṛṣṇa for] 346 [days] falling down [in the battle field]."

In the painting the horse-forces of both Kṛṣṇa and Aparājita are shown as engaged in battle. Kṛṣṇa and his men are on the right and Aparājita's on the left. A camel is also shown with a rider on its back who is beating a drum, while a man walks in front of it holding a trumpet to his mouth. Evidently these two men form the military band of Kṛṣṇa's army. Kṛṣṇa is seen in the front rank and Baladeva in the rear and both are shooting arrows from their bows, along with other archers, at the enemy's cavalry. Both show the usual konḍai ornament on their heads. Some one who has fallen after being hit by an arrow is said in the label to be Aparājita who was killed in battle.

71-b. . . . யாடவர . . . யென்று சொல்லி . . .

. . . . Yādavar . . . yenru ṣolli . . .

" . . . (all) the Yādavas . . . so saying . . ."

The descendants of the Yadu dynasty including Kṛishṇa, his father and Baladeva were unable to stand the attacks of Kālayava. Nor did they like shedding much blood. So they left Śauryapura, Hastināpura and Mathurāpura, the three cities where they were living and set out for some distant land. Kṛishṇa led them on in the hope of finding for them a place unknown to Kālayava and his men. Kālayava, who came to the Yādava city in search of Kṛishṇa, saw that it was deserted and wondered where the Yādavas and Kṛishṇa could have hidden themselves. A female spirit living in the city, took the form of an old lady and after lighting a huge fire began loudly wailing. Kālayava, asked her why she was crying like that. The spirit replied that all the Yādavas including Kṛishṇa fell into the fire that was burning before her, out of fear for Kālayava, and that her sons who were living in the city also fell into it. On hearing this Kālayava became puffed up with pride and without even waiting to verify if what the spirit said was true left for his father's kingdom to narrate to his father how he had annihilated Kṛishṇa and his men.

In the painting, which is nearly obliterated, the fire is indicated in the centre by flames while the old lady is standing on the right of it with her finger pointing up as in addressing. Kālayava and his men, who are on horse-back, are shown on the left of the fire. They lift up their hands in joy on hearing what the old lady narrates and are on the point of departing.

Painting No. 72 (pl. xxvi).—Kṛishṇa took the Yādavas to the sea-shore and stopped for a while there. He was, however, at his wit's end as to how he could find an unknown land for them. He observed fasts and sitting on kūṣa grass did penance for some time repeating mantra after mantra in the hope that some unknown land would become visible to him by divine agency. True to his expectations the divine agent came. Kṛishṇa dreamt that he saw a deva called Gautama who told him in his dream that he would return in the morning in the form of a horse and that Kṛishṇa should get on its back and go through the ocean some twelve yojanas when an unknown land would be revealed to him. On waking up the following morning he found the horse waiting for him. No sooner did he get on its back than it flew over the sea and landed him on an island. And Kṛishṇa by slow degrees got all his men to the island which was named by him Dvārāvati. All the Yādavas lived happily there without fear of any trouble from Jarāsandha and his sons.

72-a. . . . யாடவரெல்லோரும் ஓடிப்போனது சிவடம்.

. . . . Yādavarellorum ṍḍipponadu yivadam.

" . . . all the Yādavas . . . running away . . . here."

In the painting the Yādavas are shown as being led by Kṛishṇa to apparently the sea-shore. The second and the fourth figures from the left represent Kṛishṇa and Baladeva, both of whom have koṇḍais. Arrived at the sea-shore Kṛishṇa is wondering how he can find an abode for them.

72-b. கிருஷ்ணன் கண்டோபவாஸம் வாய்க்காதாவி ி . . . ஸந்திதில சிஷ . . . ஸ்வநாசுரகாணு
(ஊ)குறகு யிலடம்.

Kṛishṇan aṣṭopavāsa-sahitanāgi ma . . . sanattil nisha . . . svapnāhkāṇu(nu)kuradu yivadam.

" . . . Kṛishṇa equipping himself with the eight kinds of fasts and other austerities is here dreaming . . . "

Kṛishṇa is shown here sitting under a tree and telling his beads with his right hand, the usual accompaniment of chanting mantras and counting them, while his left hand is placed on his lap in an attitude of meditation.

72-c. Kṛishṇa is here shown lying down. He is evidently dreaming about the deva Gautama who offered to take him on his back as a horse and find for him a land.

A long label overlapping into the space allotted to the other paintings (d and e) commences with the word "Gautamadeva", but the rest is all irrevocably lost. Gautama being the name of the deva who came in the form of a horse to take Kṛishṇa to the new land it is clear that the label refers either to the dream itself or to the actual journey of Kṛishṇa on the back of the horse to Dvārāvati. If it refers to the former the label must be that of the panel now under consideration. If, however, it refers to the latter it must belong to the next scene(d).

72-d. . . . குதிரை . . . று குற யிலடம்.

. . . kudirai . . . ru kura yivadam.

" . . . horse . . . getting up here."

Kṛishṇa is here shown on horse-back. The horse is evidently flying over the sea. It is black in colour.

72-e. மெனக்கிடுவது . . . ன் ட . . . மென்னும் பட்டணத்தை கி-கிரை . . .

Gautamadevan . . . n D . . . mennum paṭṭaṇattai nirmāpa . . .

"Gautamadeva . . . to build . . . city called D(vārāvati)".

The city of Dvārāvati was built on the island shown to Kṛishṇa by Gautama and all the Yādavas reached it and lived there happily.

This is a scene to indicate that the people at Dvārāvati enjoyed peace and happiness. The figures shown here represent from right to left, Devakī, Vasudeva, Baladeva and Kṛishṇa. Devakī being the wife of Vasudeva is shown by his side as is the case with most of the couples in the temple paintings. Vasudeva, Baladeva and Kṛishṇa are all shown with crowns on their heads as they were the undisputed rulers of the island of Dvārāvati. Vasudeva is painted as usual in yellow, which appears as black in the photograph, and Baladeva in white. The latter's plough leans against his left shoulder.

Krishṇa, who can be seen on the extreme left is as usual of smaller size than either Baladeva or Vasudeva. All the three are smelling flowers held in their right hands.

Painting No. 73 (pl. xxvii).—The life of Neminātha, the twenty-second Tirthaṅkara, is treated here in the middle of Krishṇa's life for it is said that he was born in the island of Dvārāvātī when Krishṇa was ruling over it aided by his father Vasudeva and step-brother Baladeva.

73-a. Much damaged.

73-b. ஸர்வஜிஜயமஹாராஜனுது பரிவருவிபார் ஸ்ரீமங்கண்டு சொல்லுமுதலு
சிவடம் உ.

Samudravijayamahārājāyukku Śivadevīyār svapnāṅkaṇḍu śollukuraḍu yivaḍam உ.

"Śivadevī narrating here to Samudravijaya Mahārāja her dreams."

In the painting which is much damaged King Samudravijaya, Krishṇa's uncle, who has a crown on his head is seated on the left and is listening to his wife, Śivadevī, who is sitting by his side facing him. An attendant woman is standing in front of them fanning them.

73-c. Śivadevī is here giving birth to Neminātha. She is half-concealed behind a screen as in similar birth scenes (Nos. 17 and 39) while an attendant on the left is supporting her. Śacī (with a crown on her head) can be seen on the right. She is shown here twice, first as receiving the child from either Śivadevī herself or the attendant (this is not clear in the painting) and next as turning back and delivering it to Sandharmendra who is followed by Īśānendra with an umbrella in his hand.

73-d. . . . வாராவத்தின் மெல் வைத்து ஜூர் . . . கம்பண்ணப்பொதலு சிவடம் உ.
. . . . Airāvataṭṭiṇ mel vaittu Jonmā . . . kaṁ paṇṇa poraḍu yivaḍam உ.

" . . . here going for doing janmābhisheka, placing him on Airāvata . . . "

The scene is familiar from paintings already described above (Nos. 39-43). The child is here shown as placed within a howdah on the back of the white elephant with Saudharmendra and Īśānendra seated in the howdah behind him. Two devas go in front, one holding a flag in his right hand and the other a parasol. A third follows behind with a half-spread parasol in his right hand. They all go to mount Mahā-Meru to perform the janmābhisheka of the Tirthaṅkara to be.

Painting No. 74 (pl. xxvii).—This illustrates the janmābhisheka and the return of the child to the city.

74-a. . . . பாண்ட . . . மெ . . . எழுத்தருளி . . . செ-பீராதெருர்கள் ஜூர்வி ஷெக . . .

. . . . Paṇḍu . . . le eḷundaruḷi . . . rmmēśānendrargaḷ janmābhi-shekaṁ . . .

" . . . placing on Paṇḍu . . . (Saudha)rma and Īśānendra . . . janmābhi-sheka . . . "

Here again the scene is familiar. The child is seated cross-legged on a throne or pedestal placed on a white moon-stone slab in a pavilion and two devas, one on each side of it, are pouring the celestial waters on it. Two other devas with water-vessels in their hands are standing outside the pavilion, one on either side of it.

74-b. . . . Qa . . .
 . . . me . . .

The party is here shown returning to the city. The child can be seen seated in the howdah on the back of the white elephant with Saudharmendra behind. This time the child has got a crown on its head and is dressed. Īśanendra who in painting No. 73-d was shown sitting behind Saudharmendra in the howdah on the back of the elephant is here seen walking behind holding up a chāmara in his right hand. The two other devas that went before the elephant in painting No. 73-d are here too going before the elephant and have the same things in their hands, one a parasol and the other a flag.

74-c. The child is here installed on a throne in the palace and the devas are making a celebration. Two of them wave chāmaras before him, one on either side while a third standing on the left is spreading the royal chhatra or the umbrella over him. And Devendra is dancing with joy on the right. He has four hands, the front two in añjali and the other two raised up in ecstasy or in singing attitudes. The label and much of the painting itself are obliterated.

Painting No. 75 (pl. xxvii).—Merchants from the city of Rājagriha, the capital of the Magadha kingdom, over which Jarāsandha was ruling, set out on a sea-voyage for purposes of trade. They lost their way in the vast ocean and were stranded on the shores of Dvārāvati. Kṛishṇa and his men received them cordially and sent them back to their own land with rich presents including precious stones. The merchants, on reaching Rājagriha, reported to Jarāsandha what they saw in the midst of the ocean and how Kṛishṇa and the Yādavas were still alive and as proof thereof presented him with the precious stones they had received at Dvārāvati. On sight of such precious stones which he had not seen before Jarāsandha could not disbelieve them. He immediately collected a big army and sent a challenge to Kṛishṇa to come out of his hiding place and meet him in open battle. This challenge was communicated to Kṛishṇa by the tell-tale Adhomukha-Nārada¹.

Kṛishṇa approached Neminātha, who was then in the prime of his youth, and informing him of Jarāsandha's challenge requested him to look after Dvārāvati during his absence. He also desired to know from Neminātha if he would be victorious in battle. Neminātha, who had by then acquired avadhi-jñāna or the knowledge of foreseeing things, indicated to Kṛishṇa by a smile and pleasant looks that he was bound to be the victor.

Thus assured, Kṛishṇa collected all his forces and, assisted by Vasudeva, Baladeva and others, set out for Jarāsandha's land. Jarāsandha was also marching against him with a big army and met him at Kurukshetra, the place famous in Hindu mythology as the battle-field of the Pāṇḍavas and the Kauravas where the bible of the Hindus, the "Bhagavad-Gītā" was expounded by Kṛishṇa. In the fight that ensued Jarāsandha's forces were routed and Jarāsandha, indignant at the fate that had befallen his men, reached Kṛishṇa and threw on him his discus (chakra). But the chakra did Kṛishṇa no harm and Kṛishṇa taking it in his hand threw it on Jarāsandha with such force that he was killed on the spot. Thus with victory on his side Kṛishṇa returned to Dvārāvati where he was crowned once again as the chakravartin or undisputed lord of the three worlds by the devas, Vidyādhara and other mortal kings.

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 225-226.

75-a. கிருஷ்ண . . .

Kṛishṇa . . .

"Kṛishṇa . . ."

Kṛishṇa is here addressing Neminātha who is seated on a throne and is evidently asking him to look after Dvārāvati during his absence. The crown on the head of Neminātha suggests that he has already assumed temporary charge of the kingship of Dvārāvati.

75-b. கிருஷ்ண ஜராளஸந்தனோடு . . . பண்ணுகுறது யிவடம் உ ||

Kṛishṇan Jarāsandhanodu . . . paṇṇu(ku)ṇadu yivaḍam u ||

"Kṛishṇa . . . (fighting) . . . with Jarāsandha . . . here".

The words, "Kṛishṇa" and "Jarāsandha" indicate that the two are here shown fighting. Kṛishṇa's forces are on the left and Jarāsandha's on the right. While Kṛishṇa is kneeling in a chariot and is drawing a bow Jarāsandha is sitting in a howdah on the back of an elephant and is similarly engaged. Neither is throwing the discus referred to in the Śrī Purāṇa. Baladeva, who is painted white, is on horseback behind the chariot and is shooting an arrow from his bow. In these paintings when a fight is painted it is always the bow and the arrow that are shown.

Painting No. 76 (pl. xxvii).—The painting which is inverted is obliterated and has no label below as its space has been utilized for that of painting No. 75. But the scene is familiar. Kṛishṇa is here crowned a chakravartin by the devas, the Vidyādhara and the other kings of the world. He is shown seated on a throne with some one seated by his side, probably Neminātha to whom he owed his victory and coronation. Various figures are standing on either side of the throne witnessing the coronation. A dancing girl can be seen dancing on the extreme right to the accompaniment of time beaten by two men behind her, one probably holding cymbals and the other beating a drum (mṛidaṅga). It should be noted that generally in Indian sculptures and paintings when any celebration is to be shown the most common method of showing it is to introduce a dance performed by dancing girls to the accompaniment of music and time produced by men called nattuvans.

Painting No. 77 (pl. xxviii).—Before coming to this painting we should describe a few scenes found on the wall of the store-room (pl. ii, 15) which have suffered terribly and consequently could not be successfully photographed. A label, however, indicates the scenes, and runs as follows:—

நெமிஸ்வாமி திருவிசுரம் பண்ணுகுறது.

Nemisvāmi trivikramam paṇṇu(ku)ṇadu.

"Nemisvāmi performing trivikrama."

One day while Neminātha was sporting in the waters with Satyabhāma, the favourite wife of Kṛṣṇa, he entered into a wager with her described on page 136 and when challenged by Satyabhāma to perform trivikrama,¹ he did so and blew a blast with the conch that was heard everywhere. In the painting Nemi can be seen ascending the nāga-sayana which is in the form of a cobra with raised hood, holding a bent bow in his right hand and drawing a conch with his left to his mouth.

Coming to painting No. 77 we can make out a few letters of its label which are:—

. . . சீதே கிருஷ்ண . . .
 . . . chche Kṛṣṇan . . .
 " . . . when Kṛṣṇa . . . "

The blast that Nemi blew on the conch, which it was hitherto believed Kṛṣṇa alone could blow, was heard by Kṛṣṇa who was then sitting in court. He got alarmed and began to enquire from his people who it was that could blow upon his śaṅkha. On learning from them that it was his cousin he became jealous of him as a rival, and directed his girls to excite amorous thoughts in him and shame him into marriage, thinking company with women was the only way to sap his strength. The gopis teased him and challenged him to prove to the world that he was a man by marrying. After a while Nemi consented and Kṛṣṇa selected for him Rātrimati (Rājimati), the daughter of Ugrasena² and Jayavati.

In the painting Kṛṣṇa sits on a long throne accompanied by his brother Baladeva on his right. On the left stand six kings who have come probably to pay obeisance to Kṛṣṇa who was then a chakravartin or universal monarch. While he was thus engaged he heard the blast. Though one may be tempted to see in the six figures standing in front of Kṛṣṇa the people that told him who blew the blast their dress and the crowns on their heads preclude this possibility. They all have swords resting on their shoulders.

Painting No. 78 (pl. xxviii).—Between Nos. 77 and 78, in a narrow band, the design of a creeper can be seen. This serves merely a decorative purpose as it finds no place in the story relating to the scenes between which it is shown.

The label of No. 78 is obliterated while the painting itself is badly damaged but the scene is obvious.

Kṛṣṇa had arranged the wedding which was to take place shortly. Then another idea crossed his mind. If Neminātha should enter into the pleasures of married life he might come to love life and position so dearly that he would next begin to covet the position of the chakravartin which he himself was. And if he did covet it, no force on earth could prevent the achievement of his purpose. Thus fear and jealousy filled his mind and he now determined to make Nemi feel disgust for worldly life and pleasure so that the marriage should not take place. This he achieved by placing a pack of animals like cattle, etc., on the way of Nemi who was going in a procession through the streets—a preliminary ceremony attending marriages in high life. According to the Śrī Purāṇa these animals were sickly and were yelling piteously, while, according to the Ādi Purāṇa and the *Śatruñjaya-māhātmya*¹, flocks of sheep and cattle were collected to be sacrificed for the people that had come to attend Nemi's marriage. On seeing these animals, particularly the sheep that were bleating piteously, he asked his followers why they were there, and being told that they were brought for him he resolved to become an ascetic² and came back to the palace with his mind filled with the idea known as vairāgya or "world-flight."

¹ To get on a nāga-sayana, blow a conch drawing it to the mouth with one hand and with the other bend a bow.

² This Ugrasena was of the Ugra-vamśa and was the ruler of Gīmar.

In the painting the procession is shown marching towards the left. An elephant can be made out which according to the text carried the bridegroom. The persons that precede and follow the elephant form the party that accompanied Nemi. On the extreme left four animals, deer, ram, tiger and a lion are looking at the procession and are receding from the latter affrighted.

Painting No. 79 (pl. xxviii).—Though nothing remains of its label the scene portrayed here is clear. The prince is sitting in a pavilion inside the palace, with the idea of world-flight foremost in his mind, when the Laukātika-devas announce themselves before him and goad him on to renounce the world and obtain dīkṣā or initiation. Some five of these Laukāntikas can be seen standing on the right while Nemi in the pavilion is attended by three attendants (palace menials), two of whom wave chāmaras before him while the third, the one on the extreme left of the painting, holds a parasol over him.

Painting No. 80 (pl. xxviii).— . . . பொருது யோவாடம் . . .

. . . poradu yivadam . . .

" . . . going here."

Nemi determined to renounce the world and immediately the devas brought him a palanquin called Devagnru in which he was carried to a garden called Sahasrāmraṇa (so called because there were thousand mango trees in it) where he entered dīkṣā.

In the painting the palanquin is shown twice to indicate perhaps the slow march of the procession. It is said that all pomp attended it as this was the last worldly pleasure that Nemi could taste now that he had set his mind on a pleasure not clear to the eye of the world. So this was his last pompous procession; hence the flags and attendants, besides the palanquin bearers.

Painting No. 81 (pl. xxix).—The label is obliterated, as also the right half of the painting. But sufficient details remain for identification. The procession is shown on the left, the prince being still in the palanquin which rests on the shoulders of its bearers. In front of the palanquin goes an attendant carrying a flag, while another carrying a parasol follows behind. Two persons of pygmy stature are found beneath the palanquin carrying the chāmara and fan, insignia of royalty.

¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 139.

² When by the show of the bleating and moaning of the dumb creatures the mockery of life, of human civilization and its heartless selfishness was revealed to him he is said to have flung away his kingly ornaments much as Buddha did and repaired at once to the forest. The Śrī-Purāṇa is silent about the fate of the bride. But other texts such as the Śatruñjaya-māhātmya say that the lady Rājīmātī dedicated her life to serving him even as Yśōdhārā did in Buddhism. She followed him to the forest and adopted the life of a nun; she followed him to Gīrnar and was with him at the time of his death. To-day Jalpas at Mount Gīrnar, in Junagadh in Kathiawad, point at two foot-prints there as those of Neminātha and not far from them they show a grotto where Rājīmātī is said to have also died. See also Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 139.

On the right, Nemi is sitting on a slab under a tree in the garden referred to where he is doing lōch, i.e., plucking out the hair from his head and the face in five handfuls (pañchamushṭi). While his left hand rests on the lap in meditation his right hand is placed on his head suggesting that he is plucking out his hair. In the next panel he is shown standing under another tree, this time engaged in the performance of various austerities and fasts, in the intervals of which he repaired to villages and towns for food (churyā). It is said that nearly a thousand kings followed him to the garden and were engaged in similar austerities and fasts. Probably the blurred half of the painting showed some of these kings, one of whom can, however, be made out as standing to the right of Nemi.

Painting No. 82 (pl. xxix)—

No. 82-a. ஸாராவதியில் வரதாட்டனென்னும் தாவதி . . . வரதனை பண்ணுகுறது சிவடம்.

Dvārāvatiyil Vardattanennum narapati . . . pāraṇai paṇṇukuraḍu yivadam.

"In Dvārāvati a king called Varadatta . . . offering him food (is shown) here."

Nemi did penance for the space of six months and then waking up from his meditation set out to seek some kind of nourishment for his frail frame. As prescribed he approached a city, which happened to be Dvārāvati, without uttering a word and without asking for food from any one. Varadatta, a king, met him at the outskirts of the city and with affectionate devotion invited the Tīrthaṅkara to his mansion and taking him to a high place in his palace which was clean swept he offered him the refreshing juice of the sugarcane in the approved way.¹ The gods hovered in the air above and rained down a shower of flowers and gems on the party below, uttering cries of "victory (jaya)" to the accompaniment of the beating of heavenly drums.

In the painting Nemi is standing under a tree while Varadatta is shown twice before him, first as kneeling at his feet offering him obeisance and next as getting up and requesting him with folded hands (añjali) to grace his mansion and to partake of the food that he would give him. Nemi indicating his assent by following him silently, Varadatta took him to his palace.

82-b. The label has fallen. But the scene is obvious. As in the case of Rishabhadeva (see No. 35, p. 104) the king offers Nemi food taken from a tray resting on a stand. The food given is white. Nemi is standing on the right of the stand with extended hands while Varadatta stands on the left of the tray and is putting into his hands the food that he had taken from the tray. Small patches of black on the white background probably represent the shower of heavenly flowers and gems. The idea that Nemi was taken to a high place in the palace is indicated by a raised base painted yellow on which he is standing.

¹ C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, pp. 117-118. "There are many kinds of gifts which people make to one another; but of all of them the gift of food to a true saint is the most meritorious, and as the Tīrthaṅkara is the greatest of all saints, the giving of food to him with a pure heart that is illumined with the light of jñāna (knowledge divine) and filled with reverence and devotion for the Ideal is the most meritorious of all."

82-c. . . . தப

. . . . tapa
 " penance"

Here Nemi is departing for the forest. After he had received the food offered by Varadatta he left the place as silently as he had approached it.

82-d. . . . பண்ணாது

. . . . pannadu
 " done (the fact that he had done)"

He reached the mount called Ūrjayanta,¹ where he stood under a bamboo grove and after deep meditation for several years obtained kevala-jñāna or perfect and all-embracing knowledge, by destroying the forces that keep it from blazing forth.²

The standing figure of Nemi can be seen under a tree on a higher level suggesting the Ūrjayanta peak. He is standing erect in the kāyotsarga pose which suggests his determination.

82-e. . . . ஸ்வாமிக்கு கௌரவஞ்சீர்தம்

. . . . Svāmikku kevala-jñānam
 " to the Svāmī kevala-jñāna"

Here Nemi is seated in the saṃparyāṅka attitude (sitting cross-legged) on a throne placed in a pavilion. After he had become a kevali the devas came and created for him the saṃavasaraṇa in the centre of which the Tīrthaṅkara took his seat on a throne placed in a pavilion or maṇḍapa called Gandhakutī. The pavilion here represents the Gandhakutī. The white colour in which he is painted indicates the change in his condition, viz., that he had become a Tīrthaṅkara or World-Teacher endowed with perfect knowledge. The eight prātihāryas with which every Jina is associated³ are present here. The chāmara is waved by two Indras standing on either side of the pavilion. The siṃhāsana (lion-throne) is the throne on which the Tīrthaṅkara is seated, though the lions' feet are not found. In all these paintings a padmāsana or bhadrāsana is shown in place of siṃhāsanas (see painting Nos. 36, 48 and 64). The nimbus, parasol rising in three tiers (mukkoḍai) and the aśoka tree can be seen above the head of the Tīrthaṅkara, one above the other. The shower of flowers was probably shown but in the present faded condition of the painting it cannot be made out. The celestial music and the drum can only be inferred for they cannot be shown easily. The rest or cushion on which the Tirthankara was reclining is painted white behind the Tirthankara.

¹ The place on the Ujjāta peak where he is said to have died is considered sacred, and has a cākatra erected over it where his footprints (paṇḍa) are shown - Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 139.

² There are four kinds of karma called ghāti (obstructive), i.e., knowledge-obstructing, perception-obstructing, serenity-obstructing and power-obstructing energies which hide kevala-jñāna in every case and are responsible for the loss of this "great and divine attribute in our case." These obstructive energies come into play as a result of the contact of the spirit with matter which is the case with every unemancipated soul.

³ See above, pp. 114-5.

IV

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF AGNILĀ (ĀMBIKĀ) OR DHARMADEVĪ.

Two rows, Nos. 83 and 84, illustrate scenes from the life of Agnilā, who becomes in her next birth the Yakshī of Neminātha by name Āmbikā or Dharmadevī, and are found on the beams of the veranda facing the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa.

Painting No. 83 (pl. xxix).—This row has been much affected as a result of water leaking down from the ceiling during heavy rains and dripping all over the paintings thereby washing out the colour little by little so that to-day only some patches here and there remain. These patches are figured in plates xxix and xxx.

At first the scenes portrayed in them were not clear to me as they did not conform to any description found in the Śrī Purāṇa; luckily however a palm-leaf manuscript in the possession of the temple priest entitled "Punyaśrava-kathā"¹ which contains a number of stories from Jaina mythology including one entitled "Yakshī-kathā" supplies the materials necessary for their identification. The story is briefly narrated below:—

In a city called Girinagara, the king of which was Bhūpala, there lived a Brahman family consisting of Somaśarman, his wife Agnilā and their sons Śubhaṅkara and Prabhaṅkara of seven and five years of age respectively. One day Somaśarman was performing the śrāddha ceremony of his ancestors (pitṛis) for which he had invited Brahmans of the locality. When the time for offering ablutions (pinḍa-pradāna) came the party left for a tank nearby on the banks of which the offerings were expected to be laid to be picked up later by crows. In the meanwhile a Jaina ascetic, Varadatta who was a resident of the Ūrjayanta hill, came to Somaśarman's house to have his pārada, i.e. to break a fast that lasted for a month. In the absence of her husband Agnilā invited the ascetic into the house where she fed him freely from the things cooked for the Brahmans invited for the śrāddha ceremony, little thinking that her act of feeding a Jaina ascetic will be much resented by her husband and the Brahmans.

Just as the ascetic was departing from the house after having been sumptuously fed, Somaśarman came accompanied by the other Brahmans from the tank. On seeing the ascetic of alien faith coming out of his house he got angry, and the Brahmans refused to partake of his offerings as they considered what he would offer to them as polluted (uchchhishṭha). Somaśarman then drove his wife out of his house. Agnilā left the house with her two boys and an attendant woman and repaired to the Ūrjayanta hill where the ascetic Varadatta was doing penance. Arrived at the hill she found the ascetic in a cave and falling at his feet she craved him to give her dīkṣā or initiation. This the ascetic refused on the grounds that she had come there from her husband's protection with feelings of anger and resentment at his conduct and that she was the mother of the two boys whom also she had taken with her. He counselled her to leave the place and leave him alone as otherwise the world would begin to spread scandals about her. The disappointed lady took his advice and took her abode on an elevated place on the hill under the welcome shade of a tree which became by virtue of her spiritual greatness a kalpaka-vriksha or the "wish-tree" catering to her needs and those of her sons and the attendant woman that had accompanied her. And a dry tank near by began to overflow when she went to it for water.

¹ There is a copy of this in the Madras Government Oriental Mss. Library bearing No. I-5-51.

In the meanwhile the city of Girinagara witnessed the wrath of the gods in the shape of a great conflagration which consumed all the houses except that of Somaśarman. All the citizens assembled outside the city and proclaimed with one voice that the virtue of Agnilā alone saved Somaśarman's house from being consumed by the flames. The Brahmans that had refused to partake of Somaśarman's offerings on the ground that they were polluted by the Jaina ascetic's presence went to Somaśarman and requested him to give them the intended food which they said was purified and blessed by the touch of the ascetic who was none other than a god in disguise. There was universal gratification on that day and all the citizens were made to feel by the virtue accruing from the good deed of feeding the ascetic by Agnilā that they had all partaken of divine food.

Somaśarman was struck with remorse for his wicked act in driving his virtuous wife away and ran in search of her to the Ūrjayanta hill. Agnilā saw him coming at a distance and not knowing his reformed attitude towards her and feeling sure that he was only coming to torment her, left her sons in the charge of the attendant woman and killed herself by falling from a precipice into a cave below. The next moment she was born in the family of the *Vyantaras*¹ as a Yakshī called Āmbikā. As she was able to remember her past birth, compassion for her dear sons drove her to them. As however her changed appearance into that of a Yakshī would frighten her sons she assumed her original form, vis., that of Agnilā and lived beside them. Somaśarman came there and taking her for Agnilā besought her pardon for his vile and rash acts. Agnilā showed him her Yakshī form on seeing which Somaśarman fainted with fright and recovering realized that his wife Agnilā no longer lived. Unable to bear the grief he fell into the same cave and killed himself. According to his deserts he was born in the next birth as a lion, and so deep was his attachment for Agnilā in her changed form that he sat at her feet licking them and became eventually her vāhana. Thus he became the lāñchchhana or the device with which this Yakshī is associated in Jaina iconography². The sons, Śubhāmkara and Prabhāmkara led for a long time the lives of Jaina householders (grihasthas); and during the saṃavasaraṇa of Neminātha, the twenty-second Tirthaṅkara they got initiation or dīkṣā and obtained salvation. As for their mother who had become a Yakshī she obtained the unique honour of becoming the Yakshī or the attendant spirit of

¹ See Appendix III, pp. 229-230.

² See Appendix III, p. 209.

Neminātha, ever standing on one side of the Tirthāṅkara while on the other side stood the Yaksha Gomedha or Sarvāhṇa.

Various incidents from this story are present in the paintings under description. In No. 83 (pl. xxix) the following scenes run from left to right:—

In the first panel can be seen a pair seated, probably representing the Brahman Somaśarman and his virtuous wife Agnilā; an attendant woman is standing on their right gently fanning them.

In the second panel Agnilā is sitting between her sons while the attendant woman stands on the left and is fanning the party. The children are shown like child Kṛishṇa (cf. pls. xxv, xxvi) and are smelling flowers held in their right hands.

In the third panel the naked form of the ascetic Varadatta is discernible while Agnilā is shown before him in two attitudes; at first she is kneeling before him, thereby expressing her extreme regard and respect for the ascetic and then she gets up and with hands folded in añjali requests him to partake of her offering. The right hand of the sage indicates that he is in the act of addressing her while in his left he is holding a water vessel with a spout (kamaṇḍalu).

In the fourth panel she is offering him food taking convenient morsels from a tray placed on a stand.¹ The food that she is offering is heaped on the tray. Both the food and Agnilā are painted white while the sage who stands on the left is painted black as is also in the previous panel.

The next panel reveals the sage in the act of departing from the house. He is walking. The colouring is as usual in black on a white background.

What the succeeding panels contained is difficult to say as nothing remains on the beams, except a few patches figured in plate xxx as No. 84.

Painting No. 84 (pl. xxx).—These, however, appear to represent, from left to right, the following scenes from Agnilā's story:—

Agnilā is walking with her sons, one of whom walks in front of her, and is accompanied by the attendant woman referred to in the story. Evidently the whole relates to the departure of Agnilā with her sons and the attendant woman from her husband's house in Girinagara under the circumstances that have been narrated above. The attendant woman holds in her left hand something which may perhaps be a cloth or the apparel necessary for Agnilā. It looks, however, more like a garland, in which case the scene can be explained thus:—

The attendant woman is shown twice, first on the left with the garland in her hand ready to honour Agnilā who by then had become the Yakshī Ambikā, and next as standing on the left of the Yakshī herself and stretching her hands with the garland held between them to put it on her. The Yakshī is seated cross-legged and has a conical makuta on her head which is suggestive of her divine nature. She is, however, shown with two hands like any human being, the significance of which becomes clear when it is seen that by her sides stand her sons, one on her left and the other on her right. The latter stands between the Yakshī and the attendant-woman with the garland in her hands. Though she had by then become a Yakshī, Agniṣā was drawn towards her tender sons and comes to them not as the Yakshī lest they should get frightened but as their mother Agniṣā. Hence she is shown with two hands, the makuta and the particular yogic attitude serving to indicate that she was in reality the Yakshī Āmbikā. This is confirmed by the next panel where she is shown in her Yakshī form, sitting cross-legged, with a conical crown on her head and with four hands befitting her divine nature. While her lower hands are held in the abhaya (protective) and the varada (boon-conferring) poses her upper hands hold her usual emblems, viz., goad and noose¹. On her left stands a party of women, two of whom can alone be made out in the painting, the rest being completely washed out. One of them, the one standing nearest to the Yakshī holds in her hands a vessel from the mouth of which flames are issuing, suggesting that a light was burning in it. The other has a tray in her hands from out of which three flames can be seen issuing. Both the vessel and the tray are intended for particular lights which are considered as auspicious and the waving of these lights before gods and saintly persons is considered as a mark of respect and devotion shown towards the particular gods or saints.

¹ Cf. painting Nos. 35, 47 and 82.

The beams of the mukha-maṇḍapa of both the Vardhamāna and Trikūṭa-Bastī shrines show on their narrow sides designs of lotus petals (see Nos. 83-4) and on their broader sides rosettes and other floral motifs, in which the creeper figures most.

V

MISCELLANEOUS PAINTINGS.

Mention may also be made of stray paintings found on the eastern wall of the Trikūṭa-Bastī-ardhamaṇḍapa, which faces the Saṅgita-maṇḍapa and the Vardhamāna veranda wall. The temple priest explained to me that they were done some forty years ago and are hence very recent. The paintings found on the Trikūṭa-Bastī-ardhamaṇḍapa eastern wall may be described below:—

Studying them from south to north, the first panel shows Brahma Yaksha, the Yaksha attendant of Śīṭalanātha, riding his vāhana, the elephant. He has two hands, the right hand holding a goad and the left something that is not clear. In the next panel is the figure of Neminātha sitting cross-legged and in meditation. Two devas stand behind waving chāmaras while two women, each with a vessel from out of which a flame issues (kumbha-hārati)—an auspicious mark denoting devotion—stand on either side of the Tīrthaṅkara. In another panel can be made out faintly three figures; two of them represent Sarvāhṇa and Āmbikā or Kūṣhmāṇḍinī or Dharmadevī, the Yaksha and the Yakshī respectively of Neminātha. Both are sitting cross-legged and have four hands, the contents of which are blurred. The third figure is so faint that its details can hardly be made out.

¹ See Appendix III, p. 209.

On the Vardhamāna veranda wall can be made out in bright colours two dvārapālas, one on either side of the entrance to the Vardhamāna-ardhamandapa. They have as usual four hands, the upper hands carrying noose and goad, the lower showing the tarjinī or the pose of threat and carrying gadā or mace.

VI

FRAGMENTS OF EARLIER PAINTINGS.

The Saṅgita-mandapa contains on that part of its ceiling which is near the balipīṭha another row of paintings which is unfortunately much faded, the colour having fallen in many places. Very little of these scenes now remains, though there are here and there a few patches of colour displaying some figures. For this reason visitors to this temple are apt to overlook them. Indeed I had almost neglected them when my attention was luckily drawn to them by Prof. Norman Brown of the Philadelphia University whom I had the pleasure of conducting to this temple in 1927. It was not easy to take photographs of them as the colour employed is of the following composition—deep red, yellow, pink and black with occasional grey—colours which appear black in print. As, however these paintings are probably earlier than the other rows by at least a 100 years, and as the treatment of the subjects is different, in that the figures are larger and less conventional, and floral designs and ornamental patterns are differently rendered, a few patches that could be successfully photographed have been photographed and are figured in plates vi and vii.

Besides various designs (pl. vi, figs. 1 and 3), both floral and ornamental in which the lotus flower figures most, there are also scenes from the life of Vardhamāna, the twenty-fourth Tīrthaṅkara (pl. vii) to whom the temple is mainly dedicated. These are without labels. As already pointed out on page 18 all the early inscriptions in the temple are agreed in calling the temple after Vardhamāna to whom it was mainly dedicated. For this reason there was presumably no need to label them as the scenes painted would even otherwise be intelligible. From this we may argue indirectly that these paintings were put up at a time when the other Tīrthaṅkaras such as Rishabhadeva and Neminātha, whose lives are portrayed in the later paintings, had not been introduced into the temple or, if they were there already, had not acquired popularity sufficient to warrant their lives being painted. Another indication with regard to their early date is the location of scenes already described above (pp. 124-132) relating to Vardhamāna's samavasaraṇa (Nos. 49-64) in the veranda, i.e., the mukha-mandapas of the Trikuṭa-basti and the Vardhamāna shrines and not in the next row of the ceiling of the Saṅgita-mandapa where they might be expected if they were to run continuously with the others (Nos. 38-48) of the same series. This must have been done from regard for earlier paintings that then existed on the row in question. Even if many of these earlier paintings had fallen by then they might be left untouched by later painters, and the entire wing of the ceiling that once contained them would be likely to remain uninterfered with out of regard for them, especially as they would be considered in some special degree sacred being scenes from the life of Vardhamāna, to whom the temple is dedicated. A further indication of the earlier date of these paintings is the employment of such colours as black, yellow and red in preference to others. In the later paintings (Nos. 1-84) colours such as white, black, red, yellow, blue, grey and a mixture of black and red predominate though green is absent. It appears that the colour-scheme found in the earlier paintings here is similar to that found in the case of very early paintings such as those at Śittannavāsai, datable from seventh century A.D.¹ The later paintings in the temple (Nos. 1-84) exhibit a tendency, which is certainly modern, towards white and black and towards a representation in the form of miniatures of the subjects in a purely conventional manner. The labels appended to the later paintings, that must have been done about the same time as the paintings, are in modern Grantha-Tamil script. The date of the later paintings cannot be earlier than the latter part of the eighteenth century. We may tentatively suggest that this earlier series probably dates from at least about a century before the others, i.e., probably from about the seventeenth century.

The scenes in this earlier series may now be described² :—

Pl. vii-5.—Shows Priyakārinī, the mother of Vardhamāna, in labour. She is sitting on a seat (defaced), with the left leg hanging down and the right raised and resting on the seat vertically (utkuṭṭika), between her attendant women of whom, the one on the left of her is holding what looks like a mirror with both her hands and is looking at Priyakārinī's face with evident sympathy. The head of the devī is slightly lowered with down-cast looks suggesting labour. Her right hand is extended towards the attendant woman on the left as if seeking support and help, while her left hand rests on the seat by her side suggesting helplessness or ease. Her waist cloth has been drawn down revealing a swollen abdomen and the navel. The purpose of such a rendering is clear. The painter has brought out the idea that Priyakārinī is in labour, the swollen abdomen suggesting that she was not yet delivered of the divine child. A banner appears over the head of the attendant woman on the left. This was no doubt intended as a mark of royalty or divinity and was probably held by another attendant woman whose form cannot be made out in the painting which has crumbled badly here. On the right of the devī can be made out two women, probably attendants, engaged in conversation probably concerning the condition of their mistress. Or have we here Śacī (the figure on the extreme right) come to receive the child from an attendant (the figure on the left) for jāmbhisheka?

Pl. vii-4.—Shows the jāmbhisheka of the child, the ceremony of anointing him with celestial waters.

In the centre of the painting is a figure seated on a pedestal with legs crossed. The head and the body are defaced, the only distinguishable fragment being the left hand laid on the left thigh. This evidently represents Vardhamāna as the child engaged in the ceremony of janmābhisheka. There is a deva on the right pouring water on him from a vessel held over his head with both his hands. This deva wears a kirita on his head, patra-kundalas in his ears, armlets, necklaces and the waist-girdle round his waist. He must be Saudharmendra, the Indra of the first heaven. This identification is confirmed by the presence of a female figure similarly adorned, who is Śachī, his wife, on the right of Saudharmendra. Some other devas stood on either side of the child, of whom five can be made out in the painting. Two of these five stand on the right, behind Śachī. One of them is of short stature and has his right hand extended with the palm open suggesting wonder (vismaya). Nothing remains of the other except the crowned head. In the foreground an elephant is standing. This is Airāvata, the vehicle of Saudharmendra. The other three devas stand in a row, one behind the other on the left of the child. The one farthest from the child is bringing a vessel probably with the celestial water in it, the second takes it from him and carries it in both his hands to the third who after receiving it pours the water over the divine child's head. In the foreground, and in front of the second figure of these three, can be seen the fallen figure of another deva, similarly ornamented and dressed but with his back turned towards the child. He is evidently one of the many doubting devas that fell down when the child sneezed.

¹ Cf. Ind. Ant. Vol. LII, pp. 45-7. Jouveau Dubreuil, Pallava Painting, p. 2.

² I am indebted to Mr. D. P. Roy Chowdhury, Principal, Government School of Arts and Crafts, Madras, for rendering technical aid by touching up here and there the paintings figured in plate vii from photographs supplied to him.

Pl. vii-2 is in two panels. The one on the left shows the figure of Vardhamāna (defaced) seated on a pedestal and decorated with ornaments such as armlets, wristlets, kundalas and kirita and garlands. A cushion is placed behind him on which he is leaning. His left hand rests on his thigh suggesting ease, the idea being that he was thus installed by Saudharmendra and the other devas in order to give audience to them so that they could look at him all the time and delight themselves to their hearts' content by dancing, singing, etc. Indra is shown dancing in the next panel. Only the lower part of his body is visible, the rest having fallen. The legs are crossed as in painting No. 45 (pl. xix) suggesting that the figure is engaged in dancing.

Pl. vii-1 represents the scene portrayed in painting No. 45 (b) and described on p. 123. Saṅgama is here shown in the form of a snake, twisting himself round a tree with the tail laid on the ground and the hood spread on top of the tree. Vardhamāna is standing on the ground very near the tail evidently with the intention of climbing up and crushing the snake under his feet. He has his right hand raised as if speaking. Probably he is advising the deva Saṅgama to withdraw from the foolish wager into which he had entered before he was made to realize the consequences of his folly. The right hand and the right half of the body of a figure can be made out to the right of Vardhamāna.

Pl. vii-3 illustrates the samavasaraṇa of Vardhamāna. Though much of it has fallen what remains shows parts of the Lakshmivara-maṇḍapa which consisted of the twelve koshtas and the Gandhakuti in which the Tirthaṅkara was installed. Only three compartments of the Lakshmivara-maṇḍapa remain, each containing two figures. Proceeding clockwise, the first of these contains two representatives of the Bhavanavāsi-devas, both with their hands folded in worship (añjali) against their breasts. The next shows two winged men, seated cross-legged and with hands folded in worship (añjali). They represent the Gandharvas that form a division of the Vyantara or peripatetic devas. The next contains two figures which are those of the sun and the moon, the two important divisions of the Jyotishkas. They each have a halo round their heads which distinguishes them easily and have their hands folded in worship (añjali) against their breasts. As in the other paintings in this temple illustrating the samavasaraṇa only two figures are shown in each hall to represent the class of devas that should occupy it. In the centre bounded by two concentric circles is the Gandhakuti. Part of a throne is visible with its canopy and a cushion on it. But the portion showing the Tirthaṅkara has fallen. What now remains of this part of the structure shows the standing figure of a deva who waves a chāmara on the right side of the Tirthaṅkara.

Between the samavasaraṇa scene (3) and the Saṅgama scene (1) can be made out faintly a patch of colour, that could not be successfully photographed, in which two heads and small circular and irregular discs looking like flowers can alone be made out. Probably the heads are those of the Gandharvas who scattered flowers over the samavasaraṇa structure.

Pl. vi—2 shows women riding on horses in a circle (defaced) around a circular and embossed medallion in the centre. Originally there must have been eight such women each on her horse. But now most of the painting having fallen only two women can be made out, one of them clearly on the horse. The medallion contains a well-finished carving showing Saudharmendra, head westwards, riding his elephant, Airāvata with his wife, Śachi seated also on the back of the elephant behind him. Both have kīrtikas on their heads. Saudharmendra holds a flower in his right hand and carries a flower-garland in his left. Śachi's right hand holds a flower, while her left is hidden by Indra's right hand. The whole carving has been painted over but most of the paint has fallen.

Some other patches of colour (not photographed) reveal parts of scenes in which common folk, devas with parasols in their hands, men on horse-back and ornamental floral designs figure. These are so hopelessly fragmentary that the scenes portrayed cannot be identified.

APPENDIX I.¹

JAINA UNITS OF MEASUREMENT AND TIME.

UNITS OF MEASUREMENT.

The following tables of measurement are necessary to understand the pages devoted to Jaina cosmology, classification of souls, etc., where measurements of the universe and its various parts, of the respective heights, ages, etc., of the various souls, living in the universe, vis., human, sub-human, hellish, celestial and perfect are discussed :—

I

Samaya is the smallest unit of time. Innumerable samayas pass while one winks an eye or tears an old piece of cloth or snaps the finger or drives the sharp end of a pin into a lotus leaf or petal.

Innumerable samayas =	1 nimisha (time taken in raising the eye-lid).	30 muhūrtas	=	1 ahorātra (a day and a night).
15 nimishas	=	1 kāshthā .	30 days	=	1 māsa .
20 kāshthās	=	1 kalā .	2 māsas	=	1 ṛitu .
20 kalās and a little over	=	1 nālī or ghaṭī .	3 ṛitus	=	1 ayana .
2 ghaṭīs	=	1 muhūrta .	2 ayanās	=	1 saṁvatsara .
			70,560,000,000,000 saṁvatsaras .	=	1 pūrva .

Another classification of time starting from samaya as the smallest unit is as follows:—

Countless samayas = 1 āvalikā which is the next smallest division of time.

16,777,216 āvalikās = 1 muhūrta; also called antarmuhūrta. A muhūrta is equivalent to 48 minutes of English time.

30 muhūrtas = 1 ahorātra (i.e., a night and a day).

After ahorātra the Jains count like the Hindus the fortnight, months and years till they come to what is called a palya or palyopama, which is an inestimably long period of time. It is calculated thus:—

A vessel or circular pit with a diameter of one yojana, i.e., 2,000 krośas or 4,000 miles, and of an equal depth is filled with "the ends of the downy-hair of a lamb of seven days born in the highest bhoga-bhūmi (utkrishṭa-bhoga-bhūmi). " If one such hair is taken out every 100 years, the time required to empty the pit or the vessel is a palya or palyopama or as it is also called vyavahārapalya. Innumerable vyavahārapalyas make one uddhārapalya and innumerable uddhārapalyas make one addhāpalya.

¹ Concerning authorities consulted see preface.

Ten crores of crores of addhāpalya = 1 sāgara, i.e., one hundred millions of palya multiplied by one hundred millions make one sāgara or sāgaropama.

II

Infinite × Infinite atoms	=	1 utsanjñāsānjñā .
8 utsanjñāsānjñās	=	1 sanjñāsānjñā .
8 sanjñāsānjñās	=	1 truṭi-reṇu .
8 truṭi-reṇus	=	1 trasa-reṇu .
8 trasa-reṇus	=	1 ratha-reṇu .
8 ratha-reṇus	=	1 hair-point of a hairbin in the highest enjoyment-land (utkrishṭa-bhoga-bhūmī).
8 such hair-points	=	1 hair-point in the middle (madhyama) enjoyment-land.
8 do.	=	1 hair-point in the lowest (jaghanya) enjoyment-land.
8 do.	=	1 hair-point in the action-land (karma-bhūmī).
8 do.	=	1 līsha nit (young louse or egg of a louse).
8 nits	=	1 yūka louse.
8 lice	=	1 yava-madhya barley-seed (in its diameter).
8 barley-seeds	=	1 utsedha aṅgula (small finger in its breadth).
[500 utsedha aṅgulas	=	1 pramāṇa aṅgula (big finger).]
6 aṅgulas	=	1 pāda .
2 pādas	=	1 vitasti (span).
2 vitastis	=	1 hātha or hasta (cubit).
2 hāthas (cubits)	=	1 kiku .
2 kikus (or 4 cubits)	=	1 dhanushya or dhanusha or dhanus (bow).
2,000 dhanushyas	=	1 kośa .
4 kośas	=	1 yojana .
500 yojanas or 2,000 kośas	=	1 pramāṇa yojana or big yojana .

By the Pramāṇa Aṅgula and Pramāṇa Yojana (500 times of the ordinary measure) continents, oceans, etc., are measured.

A rajju is a certain inconceivably great measure of length.

Sāgara or sāgaropama, palya, and pūrva are names of high numbers.

DIVISIONS OF TIME.

In common with other oriental faiths Jainism speaks of time as an infinite series of aeons (kalpas) which are likened to a wheel rotating, now down and now up. Its downward course forms one era of an aeon, and its upward course the other era, each aeon having only two eras. The former era is known as avasarpinī, or the descending era, and the latter as utsarpinī or the ascending era. Both are under the influence of serpents, the former under that of a bad serpent and the latter under that of a good one. The wheel of time is said to have twelve spokes, six for each era.

AVASARPINI.—The era in which we are now living, and in which piety and truth go on decreasing until chaos prevails, has the following six divisions¹ :—

(1) Sushama Sushama (pure bliss) was an age of great happiness, lasting for four crores of crores of sāgara or sāgaropamas. In this age human beings lived for three palyas, had 256 ribs each, were six miles high and ate every fourth day. They had symmetrical bodies, with joints firmly knit and were always healthy. They were free from anger, conceit, greed, etc., and by nature shunned vice. The ten "wish-trees" (kalpa-vrikshas) supplied all their needs.² The children born in this age were always twins, a boy and a girl. In many Jaina temples one can see carvings representing these happy twins standing under the kalpa-trees that catered to their needs. The parents of the children died as soon as they were 49 days old, and the children could eat on and from the fourth day after they were born food equal to a grain of corn in size. They never increased the amount of their food, which they ate, as already said, every fourth day. The human beings of this period passed after death straight to devaloka, without ever having heard of religion. As this spoke of the wheel passed, the powers of the kalpa-trees slowly deteriorated.

(2) Sushama (bliss) was, as the name indicates, an age of happiness only a little reduced. It lasted for three crores of crores of sāgaras. This age was only half as happy as the first. Human beings were four miles high, had only 128 ribs, lived for two palyas and ate every third day. The ten kalpa-trees still continued their kind offices, though their powers were somewhat diminished. Abundance gradually decreased "like the size of an elephant's trunk." The parents of the children (twins again) lived longer now after they were born and died only when the latter were sixty-four days old. Food equal in size to a jujube fruit was now consumed every third day.

(3) Sushama Dushama (bliss-sorrow) was the next age when happiness had become mixed with sorrow. It lasted for two crores of crores of sāgaras. In this period human beings lived for one palya, were only two miles in height, had only sixty-four ribs and ate every second day. The power of the kalpa-trees became still further diminished. After death human beings still went to devaloka. It was during this period that Rishabhadeva was born, who taught the twins of this age seventy-two useful arts such as cooking, sewing, etc., "for he knew that the desire-fulfilling trees would disappear, and that human beings would have only themselves to depend upon." While he established a kingdom and introduced politics, etc., it was given to his illustrious daughter Brāhmī, the Jaina patron of learning, to invent during this period eighteen different alphabets

¹ Trilokaśūra, v. 780.

² The manner in which they supplied their needs is as follows:—

One tree gave them sweet fruits, another bore leaves that formed pots and pans, another murmured enchanting music with its rustling leaves and boughs, a fourth shed bright light, a fifth shone with radiance like little lamps, the flowers of a sixth gave forth scent and form (rūpa), a seventh bore food, both nice to behold and good to taste, the eighth had its leaves looking like jewels, the ninth was like a palace rising with many storeys to live in, while the tenth and the last supplied clothes with its bark.

"including Turkish, Nāgarī, all the Dravidian dialects, Canarese, Persian, and the character used in Orissa."

(4) Dushama Sushama (sorrow-bliss), the next age, was a period of misery with some happiness. It lasted for one crore of crores of sāgaras or sāgaropamas minus 42,000 years. Human beings lacked their former power and lived for one crore of pūrvas.¹ They were only five-hundred bows or spans tall and had thirty-two ribs. Women of this period ate twenty-eight morsels of food, the men thirty-two, and they both ate only once in the day. It was during this period that the Jaina religion was fully developed, and the remaining twenty-three Tirthaṅkaras, eleven Chakravartins, nine Baladevas, nine Vāsudevas and nine Prati-Vāsudevas belong to it. People of this period did not all go to devaloka, but might be reborn in any of the four gati, indicated by the svastika (hell, heaven, man or beast) or might become siddhas.

(5) Dushama (sorrow), is the age in which we are now living and is entirely evil as the name indicates. It began in about 523 B.C., i.e., 3 years and 8½ months after Vardhamāna obtained liberation and will last for 21,000 years, of which some 2,418 years have now passed. Life is limited to 125 years²; people do not have more than 16 ribs nor are they more than seven cubits or 10½ feet high.

No Tirthaṅkara can be born in this period. Ascetics and laymen cannot reach moksha without passing through at least one more birth, "so that there would not seem to be much use in becoming an ascetic nowadays!". The present age will witness worse things than it has yet seen and Jainism itself will slowly disappear³, a belief so firmly implanted in the minds of the Jaina that it paralyses all effort at the present time, "for the younger Jaina feel that anything they may do to spread their faith, for instance, is only building castles in the sand that must be swept away by the incoming tide of destruction."

(6) Dushama Dushama (sorrow-sorrow or pure sorrow), is the age of greatest misery which follows our present era and lasts for 21,000 years. Evil alone will prevail and mortals can live only for sixteen years or, according to some sects, twenty years at the most and cannot have more than eight ribs, nor will their height exceed one cubit or 1½ feet. Days will be hot and nights extremely cold; all kinds of diseases will spread, and chastity even between brothers and sisters will become non-existent. At the end of this period tempests will rend the earth when humanity will seek refuge in the Ganges, in caves and in the ocean.⁴

At the end of this age the utsarpiṇī era will begin and the wheel of time will start its upward revolution, when it will rain for seven days seven kinds of rain which will "so nourish the ground that the seeds will grow".

¹ One crore pūva = $7,056 \times 10^{17}$ years.

² According to Hemachandra life was limited to 100 years only. See Trishatkhilāṇśūpurushacaritra, Vol. I, edited by Helen M. Johnson, 1931, p. 95.

³ The last Jaina monk will be called Duppasahasārī, the last nun Phalguārī, the last layman Nāgīla and the last laywoman Satyaārī.

⁴ As the Jainas, unlike the Hindus, believe that their world was never created and as such can never be destroyed, they have no reason to apprehend that the earth is doomed to perish in these tempests.

UTSARPINĪ.—The six ages of the utsarpinī era have the same names as those of the avasarpinī but they occur in the reverse order, Dushama Dushama being the first. The first three ages of the avasarpinī and therefore the last three ages of the utsarpinī are the ages of bhoga-bhūmi or enjoyment.¹

In these men get what they want from the kalpa-trees, which means "that in the earliest periods of their existence men knew neither the arts and industries, nor the pastoral pursuits, nor agriculture, and that they kept body and soul together by a diet of fruits, roots, etc., wearing leaves and the bark of trees".²

The remaining three ages are those of karma-bhūmi or work.* In these men have to sweat for their livelihood and also for their comforts and blessings in the life to come. The duration of the two eras combined is twenty crores of crores of sāgaras or sāgaropamas.

Dushama, the second age in this era will bring slight improvement.

Dushama Sushama, the third age will be important for the reason that the first of the future twenty-four Tirthaṅkaras will appear. He will bear the name Padmanābha and will resemble Vardhamāna in accomplishing as much as the latter did in spreading the Jaina faith. During Vardhamāna's time he was a king in Magadha and he is now expiating his bad karma in the first hell. When the upward revolution of the wheel brings us to the age of Sushama, twenty-three other future Tirthaṅkaras will appear who will carry on the work of Padmanābha "and the world will grow steadily happier, passing through every stage till the happiest of all is reached, when the decline of the wheel must once more begin that leads at last to the destruction of Jainism, and so on in endless succession".⁴

¹ Bhoga-bhūmi means enjoyment-land. This is a condition of life where there is all enjoyment and no labour such as agriculture or manufacture. Life runs its full span and can never be cut short.

² Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, pp. xxvi-xxvii.

³ Karma-bhūmi, work-land, i.e., a condition of life where work, like agriculture, etc., is necessary for sustenance, and in which the span of life can be cut short by external causes such as disease, accident, suicide and the like.

⁴ Stevenson, The Heart of Jainism, p. 278.

APPENDIX II.¹

JAINA COSMOLOGY.

The universe (loka) is believed to have the shape of a man standing with arms akimbo² (pl. xxxvii) resembling at its top a cane-stand, in the middle a cymbal (ihālari) and at its bottom a drum (muraḥa). It is composed of three worlds, the lower, the middle and the upper. Its breadth at its lowest point (jagat-śreṇī) is 7 rajjus, its area at its base (jagat-pratara) is 7 rajjus × 7 rajjus = 49 square rajjus, and its total volume (jagat-ghana or loka) is 343 cubic rajjus (7³ rajjus).

It tapers up from the base till at the height of 7 rajjus, where we arrive at the navel or centre of the universe, it is only 1 rajjū wide. This part resembles the man's waist. From here it again bulges out till at half the remaining height it reaches the breadth of 5 rajjus. From here it narrows down gradually till at the top it is one rajjū wide only. The whole universe is enveloped in three atmospheres called vāta-valayas or wind-sheaths:—

- (1) the thick wind or very dense atmosphere (ghanodadhi-vāta-valaya),
- (2) the less thick or dense atmosphere (ghana-vāta-valaya),
- (3) the fine wind or rare atmosphere (tannu-vāta-valaya).

This threefold sheath of the universe is compared to the bark of a tree³. Through the centre of the universe runs a region figuratively referred to as a nerve (trasa-nāḍī) in which alone all mobile souls live. It is 14 rajjus high, one rajjū thick and one rajjū broad. It is generally called trasa-nāḍī because mobile (trasa) souls cannot live outside it. The special name given to this trasa-nāḍī or "the nerve of the mobile souls" is gṇa, which means "chord"⁴. It means to the universe what sap means to the tree⁵. All living beings, i.e., men, animals, devas, devils and gods and also many immobile souls live here.

THE LOWER WORLD (Adho-loka).

The lower part of the figure of the man, i.e., the legs, represent the lower world (adho-loka). It is made up of seven earths which lie one below the other with an intervening space of one rajjū separating one from the other. Each of these is surrounded and supported by three atmospheres, a gross air atmosphere (ghanavāta), a vapour atmosphere (aṁbuvāta), and a thin air atmosphere (tannuvāta), which are each 20,000 yojanas thick at the

¹ Concerning authorities consulted, see preface.

² It is an allegory, "of the human form divine, a microcosm of the universe roughly evolved from the human microcosm" (Jaini, Bright Ones in Jainism, p. 15). But the comparison cannot be stretched far, for it is quite superficial and is only intended to make the complications of Jaina cosmology easy to comprehend.

³ Trilokaśāstra, v. 123 " . . . ghanāśūbhaghaṇatanūnām bhāvet 1 Vātānām valayastrayaṁ vṛkṣakṣaya tṛgṇīva lokasya || ".

⁴ Trilokaśāstra, v. 143.

⁵ Trilokaśāstra, v. 143, " . . . vṛkṣiḥ tārā eva . . . " bottom of the universe. In these seven earths are located the abodes of the hell-inhabitants (Narakas). Counting from above downwards these earths are—

(1) Ratnaprabhā—also called Gharmā. It is in hue like gems or jewels (ratnas), whence its name. Sixteen kinds of precious stones such as diamond, ruby, etc., are found there¹.

(2) Śarkarāprabhā—also called Vaiśā. It is like sugar in hue.

(3) Vālukaprabhā—also called Meghā. It is like sand in hue.

(4) Pañkaprabhā—also called Añjanā. It is like mire in hue.

(5) Dhūmaprabhā—also called Ariṣṭā. It is like smoke in hue.

(6) Tamaḥ-prabhā—also called Maghavī. It is like darkness in hue.

(7) Mahātamaḥ-prabhā—also called Māghavī. It is like pitch darkness in hue.

The first earth is 180,000 yojanas thick or high and has three parts. The uppermost part is called Khara-bhūga. It is 16,000 yojanas thick and contains all the 16 kinds of jewels. In its middle 14,000 yojanas live all the ten classes of Bhavanavāsi or residential celestial beings except the *Asura-kumāras*², and all the eight classes of the Vyantarās or the peripatetic celestial beings except the *Rākshasas*³. The middle part of the first earth is called Pañkabhūga. It is 84,000 yojanas thick and the Asura-kumāras among the *Bhavanavāsi*s and the Rākshasas among the Vyantarās live there⁴. The lowest part of the first earth contains the first group of hells (i.e., in its trasa-nāḍī or mobile channel) and is called Abhahula-bhūga. It is 80,000 yojanas thick.

The second earth is 32,000 yojanas thick⁵ and contains the second group of hells.

The third earth is 28,000 yojanas thick⁶ and contains the third group of hells.

The fourth earth is 24,000 yojanas thick⁷ and contains the fourth group of hells.

The fifth earth is 20,000 yojanas thick⁸ and contains the fifth group of hells.

The sixth earth is 16,000 yojanas thick⁹ and contains the sixth group of hells.

The seventh earth is 8,000 yojanas thick¹⁰ and contains the seventh group of hells.

The number of hells in these earths is as follows :—

30 lakhs in the first earth.		99,995 in the sixth earth.
25 " second earth.		5 in the seventh earth.
15 " third earth.
10 " fourth earth.	Total ...	84 lakhs of hells.
3 " fifth earth.

These hells are huge holes in which hellish beings live. They are in 49 different layers (paṭalas), 13 for the first earth, 11 for the second, 9 for the third, 7 for the fourth, 5 for the fifth, 3 for the sixth and 1 for the seventh. In each layer there is a central hole called Indraka-bīla, and lines of holes (śreṇī-baddhas) in the four cardinal and four intermediate

¹ For their names see Trilokaśūtra, vv. 147-8.

² See below, p. 229.

³ Another version is 132,000 yojanas. See Trishashṭilālākāpuruṣacharitra, p. 380.

⁴ Trishashṭilālākāpuruṣacharitra, p. 380—128,000 yojanas.

⁵ Ibid.—120,000 yojanas.

⁶ Ibid.—118,000 yojanas.

⁷ Ibid.—116,000 yojanas.

⁸ Ibid.—108,000 yojanas.

directions. In the first layer there are 49 in each of the cardinal directions, and 48 in each of the intermediate ones. In the second layer the numbers are 48 and 47; in the third 47 and 46 and so on, till in the forty-ninth layer there is a central hole and 4 holes in the cardinal points, thus making 5. The total number of these holes or hells may be arrived at thus:—

49	central holes (Indraṅkas).
9,604	in the eight directions (Śreṇi-baddhas).
8,390,347	sporadic holes (Prakṛṇakas).
<hr/>
8,400,000	Total number of hells.

Hellish beings (nāraṅkas) have very bad "thought-colours" or *leśyas*¹. They have the lowest kinds of sense-perceptions and have ugly and grotesque bodies. Their "thought-colours" are always of the lower type; black, indigo and grey. Grey (kapota) is associated with those of the hells in the first and second earths, indigo (nīla) in the fourth, a mixture of indigo and black in the fifth, a mixture of grey and indigo in the third, black in the sixth and the seventh. The sound of these hellish beings is harsh, their touch rough and their person and environments are terrible to behold. Their bodies are grotesque and disproportionate; their heights vary with the different earths in which they live. Thus the height in the hells of the first earth is 7 bows, 3 cubits, and 6 fingers. It doubles at each successive earth till in the hells of the seventh earth it is 500 bows. These beings torture one another. They change their bodies at will, but the change is always for the worse, such as that of the raven, wolf, etc. The Asura-kumāras who live in the Pañka-bhūga of the Ratnaprabhā earth, though they are celestial beings, give torture to these beings (in the first, second, and third earths) or incite them to torture one another.

There are also other celestial beings (devas) engaged in this torturing. They are divided into fifteen classes according to their functions—(1) The Aṁba, who destroy the nerves of their victims; (as a mango is crushed in a man's hand to soften it, so do they wreck the nerves of the jīva they torture); (2) the Aṁbarasa, who separate flesh and bones; (3) the Śāma who beat men; (4) the Śabala who tear the flesh; (5) the Rudra who spear men; (6) the Mahārudra who cut flesh into mince-meat; (7) the Kāla who roast the flesh of the victims; (8) the Mahākāla who tear flesh with pincers; (9) the Asipaṇṇa who cut with swords; (10) the Dhann who shoot their victims with arrows; (11) the Kuṁbhā who torture with chillies; (12) the Vālu who steep men in hot sand; (13) the Vetaraṇī who duck the victims in boiling water and dash them against stones like a dhobi; (14) the Kharasvara who throw men on thorny trees; (15) the Mahāghoṣa who shut men up in black holes.

The maximum age of the hellish beings of the different earths are 1, 3, 7, 10, 17, 22 and 33 sāgaropamas of years respectively. All the hells in the first, second, third and fourth earths and the upper two lakhs¹ of the fifth earth are all very hot. The rest are very cold. It is said that the group of hells in the seventh earth is so horrid, and the pain there so acute, that our "degenerated race of the fifth age of the avasarpinī era is not strong and capable enough to sin so as to deserve being sent to this blackest spot in the universe!". While all these hells are situated in the region of the legs of the standing figure symbolising the universe there is a still worse place called Nigoda situated below its feet² in which are thrown evil jīvas who have committed sins like murder and who have no hope of ever coming out of it.

¹ Leśya is said to be that by means of which the soul is tinted with merit or demerit. It is translated as "tint" or "paint of body and thought."

Next above these hells is the waist of the figure, which stands for the middle world (madhya-loka) where we live.

THE MIDDLE WORLD (Madhya-loka).

The middle world is 100,040 *yojanas*³ high, and is a circular body consisting of a number of concentric rings called dvīpas or island-continent, separated from each other by ring-shaped oceans, each of these rings having twice the breadth of the one immediately preceding it. In the centre of this world, like the navel of the body, is Mount Meru, surrounded by the first continent Jambū-dvīpa. The names of the first sixteen and the last sixteen island-continent are—

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1. Jambū-dvīpa , one lakh of yojanas across, which is surrounded by the Lavaṇa-samudra or the salt-ocean, of two lakhs of yojanas of breadth. | 6. Gṛitavara-dvīpa ; Gṛitavara-samudra . |
| 2. Dhātākī-khaṇḍa-dvīpa , of twice the breadth of its preceding ring, viz., Lavaṇa-samudra . This island is surrounded by Kālodaka-jaladhī or Kālodadhī-samudra or ocean, of twice the breadth of the island it encircles. | 7. Kṣaudravara or Ikṣuvāra-dvīpa ; Kṣaudravara or Ikṣuvāra-samudra . |
| 3. Pushkaravara-dvīpa , which is surrounded by an ocean called Pushkaravara-samudra which takes its name from the island it encircles. From here onwards the oceans take their names after the dvīpas that they surround. | 8. Nandīśvaravara-dvīpa ; Nandīśvaravara-samudra . |
| 4. Vāruṇivara-dvīpa or island; Vāruṇivara-samudra or ocean. | 9. Arunavara-dvīpa ; Arunavara-samudra . |
| 5. Kṣīravara-dvīpa ; Kṣīravara-samudra . | 10. Arunābhāsavara-dvīpa ; Arunābhāsavara-samudra . |
| | 11. Kundala-vara-dvīpa ; Kuṇḍalavara-samudra . |
| | 12. Śaṁkhavara-dvīpa ; Śaṁkhavara-samudra . |
| | 13. Ruchakavara-dvīpa ; Ruchakavara-samudra . |
| | 14. Bhujagavara-dvīpa ; Bhujagavara-samudra . |
| | 15. Kuśagavara-dvīpa ; Kuśagavara-samudra . |
| | 16. Krauñchavara-dvīpa ; Krauñchavara-samudra . |

¹ 1/2 part according to Trilokaśāstra, see v. 152.

² 1 yojana = about 4,000 miles.

³ Pl. xxxvii.

From here onwards, after leaving countless dvīpas and samudras come the last sixteen dvīpas and their corresponding encircling oceans, which are—

- | | | | |
|---------------------------------|--------------------------------|------------------------------------|---|
| 1. Manah-śilā-dvīpa ; | Manah-śilā-samudra . | 9. Vajravara-dvīpa ; | Vajravara-samudra . |
| 2. Haritāla-dvīpa ; | Haritāla-samudra . | 10. Vaidūryavara-dvīpa ; | Vaidūryavara-samudra . |
| 3. Sindūravara-dvīpa ; | Sindūravara-samudra . | 11. Nāgavara-dvīpa ; | Nāgavara-samudra . |
| 4. Śyāmavara-dvīpa ; | Śyāmavara-samudra . | 12. Bhūtavara-dvīpa ; | Bhūtavara-samudra . |
| 5. Añjanakavara-dvīpa ; | Añjanakavara-samudra . | 13. Yakshavara-dvīpa ; | Yakshavara-samudra . |
| 6. Hingulikavara-dvīpa ; | Hingulikavara-samudra . | 14. Devavara-dvīpa ; | Devavara-samudra . |
| 7. Rūpyavara-dvīpa ; | Rūpyavara-samudra . | 15. Ahīndravara-dvīpa ; | Ahīndravara-samudra . |
| 8. Suvarṇavara-dvīpa ; | Suvarṇavara-samudra . | 16. Svayambhūramāṇa-dvīpa ; | Svayambhūramāṇa-samudra , which is the last ocean. |

The first three islands and the eighth island (Nandīśvaravara-dvīpa) must now be described, the former three for the reason that men can be found only in the first two islands and in the first half of the third island, and the latter for the reason that it is "a land of delights of the gods" who make in them with all splendour "eight-day festivals in the shrines on the holy days of the holy Arhats." The fact that the works I rely on for my study on this point speak of these particular islands specially and of the other islands in a general manner speaks for their relative importance.¹

Jambū-dvīpa.—In the centre of Jambū-dvīpa Mount Meru, golden and in the shape of a truncated cone, is buried 1,000 yojanas in the ground. Its diameter at the surface of the earth is 10,000 yojanas and 1,000 yojanas at its top, while its height is 99,000 yojanas. It is in three parts, being so divided by the three worlds. Its first part which is the 1,000 yojanas of it that are buried in the ground is taken to be in the adho-loka. This part consists of pure earth, stone, diamond and gravel. The second part which is 63,000 yojanas high is composed of gold, crystal, and *aśka*². The third part, which is 36,000 yojanas high, consists of slabs of gold, and is surmounted by a glittering peak made of vaidūrya (cat's eye), whose diameter at its base is 12 yojanas and height 40 yojanas. At the base of Mount Meru, on the level of the earth, there is a dense encircling grove called Bhadraśāla. At 500 yojanas height from Bhadraśāla, on a terrace³ of the mountain is situated another grove called *Nandana*⁴. 6,250 *yojanas*⁵ above Nandana is the third grove

¹ It is interesting to note that one of the inscriptions in the big temple, dealt with above on pages 56-7 speaks of one of the festivals conducted in the Nandīśvara-vara-island.

² It is not clear what aśka means here. But from among the numerous meanings available for the word the following three need to be mentioned:—an ornament, a mountain and water.

³ The word used is śaṇṇa, which literally means a peak. As this meaning is clearly impossible here I follow Hemachandra in translating it as "terrace."

⁴ This is the Hindu garden said to be in the world of Imra.

⁵ 62,500 according to Hemachandra.

called Saumanasa, also on a terrace. And 36,000 yojanas above Saumanasa is the fourth grove called Pāṇḍuka or Pāṇḍaka in the shape of a circle, also on a terrace. As mentioned on pp. 83-84 the Janmābhishekas of the Tirthaṅkaras are performed in this Pāṇḍuka grove (vana).

Jaṁbū-dvīpa is divided into seven kshetras or zones by six ranges of mountains running through it from east to west. These ranges are, from south to north:—(1) Himavān, (2) Mahāhimavān, (3) Nishadha, (4) Nīla, (5) Rukmin and (6) Śikharin. These ranges which are of equal dimensions, abound in various kinds of precious stones (maṇi) on their slopes, and touch the Lavaṇa-samudra or the salt ocean. The first mountain is of snow colour¹, the second of white, the third of burning or red-hot gold, the fourth of blue like the neck of the peacock, the fifth of silvery white and the sixth of golden colours. On the tops of these six mountains there are six lakes, Padma, Mahāpadma, Tigīñchha, Kesari, Mahāpuṇḍarīka, and Puṇḍarīka, respectively. The first lake has a length of 1,000 yojanas, a breadth of 500 yojanas, and a depth of 10 yojanas, and contains in its centre a lotus-like island, one yojana broad. Each of the three lakes up to Tigīñchha is twice as great in length, breadth and depth as the preceding lake and each of the three islands in them is also twice the length, breadth and depth of the island immediately preceding it. Thus Mahāpadma is twice the dimensions of the first lake Padma, and Tigīñchha is twice the size of Mahāpadma. Kesari is, however, equal to Tigīñchha, Mahāpuṇḍarīka to Mahāpadma and Puṇḍarīka to Padma. The same is the case with the islands in them. In these islands live six Devīs with life-periods of a palya attended by celestial beings of equal status called Samānikas, and with celestial beings who are members of their courts called Pārishadas. The Devīs (goddesses) are called Śrī, Hrī, Dhṛitī, Kṛtī, Buddhi and Lakṣmī, respectively.

The six mountains divide Jaṁbū-dvīpa into seven zones or kshetras which are, from south to north:—(1) Bharata-kshetra; (2) Haimavata-kshetra; (3) Hari-kshetra; (4) Videha-kshetra; (5) Ramyaka-kshetra; (6) Hairanyavata-kshetra; and (7) Airāvata-kshetra. In each kshetra is a pair of important rivers, one flowing eastwards and the other westwards, both falling into the salt ocean. They are as follows:—Gaṅgā and Sindhu in the Bharata-kshetra, the former flowing eastwards and the latter westwards, Rohit and Rohitāsyā in the second kshetra, Harit and Harikāntā in the third kshetra, Sītā and Sītodā in the Videha-kshetra, Nārī and Narakāntā in the Ramyaka-kshetra, Suvarṇakūlā and Rūpyakūlā in the Hairanyavata-kshetra, and Raktā and Raktodā in the Airāvata-kshetra. These rivers arise from the six lakes mentioned above in the following manner:—

Gaṅgā, Sindhu and Rohitāsyā spring from the lake Padma;

Rohit and Harikāntā spring from the lake Mahāpadma;

Harit and Sītodā spring from the lake Tigīñchha;

Sītā and Narakāntā spring from the lake Kesari;

Nārī and Rūpyakūlā spring from the lake Mahāpuṇḍarīka.

Suvarṇakūlā, Raktā and Raktodā spring from the lake Puṇḍarīka.

¹ Golden colour according to Umāsvāmi.

Gaṅgā and Sindhū have 14,000 tributaries each. Each pair of the others receives twice as many tributaries as the preceding pair up to Sitā and Sitodā, i.e., Rohit and Rohitāsyā have 28,000 each, Harit and Harikāntā have 56,000 each, and Sitā and Sitodā have 112,000 each¹. The northern rivers (north of Videha) are equal to the southern. Thus Nārī and Narakāntā have 56,000, Suvarṇakūlā and Rūpyakūlā 28,000, and Raktā and Raktodā 14,000 each.

Bharata-kṣetra is the zone to which we belong and is 190th part of the breadth of Jambū-dvīpa (जम्बुद्वीप), i.e., 526 $\frac{1}{2}$ yojanas wide, while its bounding mountain Himavān is twice its width, viz., 1,052 $\frac{1}{2}$ yojanas, according to the general rule noted above that every mountain and kṣetra has double the breadth of the mountain or kṣetra preceding it. This rule extends up to Videha-kṣetra. To the north of Videha-kṣetra the arrangement and extent of kṣetras, mountains, rivers, lakes, etc., exactly correspond to those south of it. In the Bharata and Airāvata-kṣetras, in the extreme south and north of Jambū-dvīpa, there is increase and decrease of age, height, bliss, etc., of their inhabitants in the two eras of time, Utsarpiṇī and Avasarpinī, while in the other five kṣetras they are constant, there being neither increase nor decrease in bliss, age, height, etc.

While the mountain Himavān bounds it there is another mountain called Vijayārdha, parallel to Himavān, which divides Bharata-kṣetra into a northern and a southern region. The northern region is peopled by Mlechchhas or barbarians that do not care for religion. Human beings that live in Jambū-dvīpa, Dhātaki-dvīpa and one half of Pushkaravara-dvīpa, which together are referred to as Adhāyī-dvīpa or the 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ regions, are of two kinds, Ārya and Mlechchha. Ārya is translated as "noble, worthy and respectable" and Mlechchha as "barbarian, non-Āryan, low and savage." But the real import of these two terms is as follows:—The Āryas are divided into Riddhiprāpta-Ārya, i.e., with supernatural powers, and Anriddhiprāpta-Ārya, without supernatural powers. The supernatural powers (riddhi) referred to are: enlightenment (buddhi), changing the body at will (vikriyā), austerities (tapas), giant-strength (bala), healing power (anśhadha), capacity of an evil eye and its opposite and the like (rasa), and capacity of making wealth, stores, places, etc., inexhaustible (akṣhīṇa). There are 64 sub-classes of these seven kinds of supernatural powers. Anriddhiprāpta-Āryas are divided into five classes:—(1) Kṣetra-Āryas, those born in Ārya-khaṇḍa, one of the six divisions of Bharata-kṣetra, to be described below. (2) Jāti-Āryas, born in illustrious families, such as Ikṣvāku, Sūrya-vamśa, etc. (3) Karma-Āryas, Āryas by their vocations, military, literary, trade, arts, science, agriculture, etc. (4) Chāritra-Āryas, Āryas by right conduct or sterling character. (5) Darśana-Āryas, Āryas by right belief.

The Mlechchhas are of two kinds:—(1) Karmabhūmija, born in work-land and (2) Antardvīpaja, "inter-continental" Mlechchhas. Karmabhūmija-Mlechchhas are born in 850 divisions of the Jambū-dvīpa, 800 in Videha-kṣetra, 25 in Bharata-kṣetra and 25 in Airāvata-kṣetra. Antardvīpaja-Mlechchhas or intercontinental Mlechchhas live in 24 islands which are arranged in a circle in Lavanodadhi or the salt ocean, the first eight, 500 yojanas from the circumference of Jainbū-dvīpa and the remaining sixteen, 550 yojanas from the circumference of Jainbū-dvīpa. Four of these in the cardinal points are 100 yojanas broad, four more in the intermediate corners are 55 yojanas and the remaining sixteen are 50 yojanas broad. The inhabitants of these islands are described to be grotesque creatures with heads of boars, horses, elephants, lions, etc., on human bodies, or with long ears, one leg, etc., from which features the islands derive their names as Ekoru, Hayakarna, Gajakarna, Gokarna, Śashkulikarna, Ādarśanukha, Meshamukha, Hayamukha, etc.¹ These Mlechchhas live on fruits and other tree-produce and their age-limit is one palya.

¹ According to Hemachandra 532,000 rivers each.

The Karmabhūmija-Mlechchhas are Śākas, Yavanas (Greeks, Romans), Śābaras, Barbaras, Kāyas, Muruṇḍas, Uḍras, Goḍras, Arapākas, Hūnas (Huns), Romakas, Pārasas, Khasas, Khāsikas, Patkaṇakas, Ḍombilikas, Lakūṣas, Bhīllas (Bhils?), Aṅghras, Bukkasas, Pulindas, Krauñchakas, Bhramararutas, Kuñchas, Chīnas (Chinese), Vañchukas, Mālavas, Draviḍas, Kulakshas, Kirātas, Kaikayas, and others who do not know even the word "dharma". It will be seen that the above list includes foreigners like Greeks and other invaders of India like the Huns and the Draviḍas or the early South Indians as Mlechchhas.

It was noted above that the Vijayārdha mountain divides Bharata-kshetra into a northern and southern regions. The northern region is peopled by Mlechchhas. The southern region is divided into three sections, western, middle and eastern, by the rivers Sindhu flowing in the west and Gaṅgā flowing in the east. The Mlechchhas again live in the extreme eastern and western sections while the middle section is peopled by Āryas and is therefore called Ārya-khaṇḍa where we (as Āryas) live. It will thus be seen that this Ārya-khaṇḍa is bounded by the Gaṅgā on the east, by the Vijayārdha mountain on the north, by the Sindhu on the west and the salt ocean on the south, and Bharata-kshetra is divided by the two rivers and the Vijayārdha mountain into six sections, five for the Mlechchhas and one (Ārya-khaṇḍa) for the Āryas. According to Jaini "our whole world, with its Asia, Europe, America, Africa, Australia, etc., are included in Ārya-khaṇḍa."²

To the north of the Nishadha mountain and to the south of Meru are the Vidyutprabha mountains and the Saumanasa mountains in the west and east respectively, in the shape of an elephant's tusk, almost touching Meru. Between them is the bhogabhūmi or enjoyment-land known as the Devakurus, 11,842 yojanas wide. The salient features of the bhogabhūmis have been set forth above on p. 72. In the Devakurus, on the east and west banks of the river Sitodā are two important mountains, Chitrakūṭa and Vichitrakūṭa, on which temples of the Jinas (Jinālaya) are worshipped. To the north of Meru and to the south of the Nīla mountain are the Gandhamādana and Mālyavat mountains, also in the shape of an elephant's tusk. Between them is the second bhogabhūmi called the Uttarakurus, where on the banks of the river Sitā are two mountains named Yamaka corresponding to the Chitrakūṭa and Vichitrakūṭa of the Devakurus. The Devakurus and Uttarakurus are said to be bhogabhūmis of the first or highest order; Hari and Ramyaka-kshetras are said to be bhogabhūmis of the second order, and Haimavata and Hairanyavata-kshetras are bhogabhūmis of the lowest order. The remaining kshetras are karmabhūmis, where people have to work for their livelihood; these are also regions of piety whence liberation can easily be attained.

¹ According to Hemachandra the Antardvīpas are 56 in number, but the surplus 32 can however be treated as just subdivisions of some among the 24 we have detailed here.

² See Outlines of Jainism, p. 124.

East of the Devakurus and Uttarakurus the region is called East Videhas and to the west, West Videhas. In each there are 16 provinces. Kachchā, Sukachchā, Mahākachchā, Kachchakāvati, Āvartā, Lāṅgalāvartā, Pushkalā, Pushkalāvati, Vatsā, Suvatsā, Mahāvatsā, Vatsakāvati, Rāmyā, Surāmyakā, Rāmanīyā and Maṅgalāvati are the 16 provinces of the East Videhas. The ones in West Videhas are Padmā, Supadmā, Mahāpadmā, Padmakāvati, Śamkhā, Nalinī, Kumudā, Sarit, Vaprā, Suvaprā, Mahāvaprā, Vaprakāvati, Gandhā, Sugandhā, Gandhilā and Gandhamālinī.¹ In Bharata-kshetra, on the southern and northern slopes of the Vijayārūpa mountain there are the cities of Vidyādhara, 50 in the south and 60 in the north. There are also a similar number of Vidyādhara cities in the Airāvata-kshetra, while in the Videha-kshetra they are 55 for each slope of the mountain.² Life in the Haimavata, Hari and Devakurus are respectively of one, two and three palyas. The same is the case with Uttarakuru, Rāmyaka, and Hairanyavata. But in Videha the maximum is one crore pūrvas and the least is antar-muhūrta (48 minutes). The age of human beings in the other regions ranges from a maximum of three palyas to a minimum of one antar-muhūrta.³

The countries (deśas) in the Ārya-khaṇḍa are Magadha, Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kāśī, Kāśī, Kāśī, Kosala, Kuru, Kuśārtaka, Pāṇchāla, Jāṅgala, Videha, Surāshṭraka, Vatsa, Malaya, Sandarbha, Varuṇa, Matsya, Chedi, Daśārṇa, Sindhu, Sauvīra, Śūrasena, Māsapurīvarta, Kuṇālaka, Lāṭa, and Ketaka. The cities of Ārya-khaṇḍa are Kshemā, Kshemapuri, Arishṭā, Arishṭapuri, Khadgā, Mañjūshā, Aushadhī, Puṇḍarikīṇī, Susīmā, Kuṇḍalā, Aparājītā, Prabhaṅkarā, Aṅkā, Padmāvati, Śubhā, Ratnasañchayā, Aśvapuri, Simhapuri, Mahāpuri, Vijayapuri, Arajā, Virajā, Aśoka, Vitasoka, Vijayā, Vaijayanti, Jayantā, Aparājītā, Chakrapuri, Khadgapuri, Ayodhya and Avadhya.⁴

¹ Trilokasāra, vv. 687-690.

² For the names of the cities see Trilokasāra, vv. 697-707.

³ Tattvārthasāhityasūtra, ch. III, sūtra 39:—

The sub-human beings (tiryakchāra) also have the same range of age—

	Maximum age.	Minimum age.
Earth-bodied (prithivībhūyika) ...	22,000 years	...
Vegetable-bodied (Vanaspatībhūyika) ...	10,000 "	...
Water-bodied (apbhūyika) ...	7,000 "	...
Air-bodied (vāyubhūyika) ...	3,000 "	...
Fire-bodied (agnibhūyika) ...	3 days	...
2 sensed (dvī-indriya) ...	12 years	...
3 do. (tri-indriya) ...	49 days	...
4 do. (chatur-indriya) ...	6 months	...
5 do. (pañcā-indriya), like fish	1 crore pūrvas of years	...
Mongoose ...	9 pūrvāṅgas of years	...
Serpent ...	42,000 years	...
Birds ...	72,000 "	...
Quadrupeds ...	3 palyas	...

One antar-muhūrta.

⁴ Trilokasāra, vv. 711-715.

The continent Jambū-dvīpa has a fortification consisting of a diamond wall, 8 yojanas high and 12 yojanas wide at its base. This wall contains four gates in the four cardinal points, which are called Vijaya, Vaijayanta, Jayanta and Aparajita respectively. The lord of Jambū-dvīpa is a Vyantara deva called Anādara.

Lavaṇa-samudra, the salt ocean.—Surrounding Jambū-dvīpa, and twice as wide, is the Lavaṇa-samudra with its water saltish in taste. It may be noted that the names of this ocean and the succeeding oceans indicate the taste of their waters. Thus, for instance, saltish for the salt ocean, the natural taste of water with slight variety in each case for Vārūṇivara, Kālodaka, Pushkaravara and Svayambhūramāṇa-samudras, taste of milk for Kṣhīravara-samudra, of clarified butter for Ghṛītavara-samudra and of sugarcane juice for Ikṣhvāra-samudra and the remaining samudras.¹ Aquatic souls (jalachara-jīva) live only in Lavaṇa-samudra, Kālodaka-samudra and the last samudra, Svayambhūramāṇa-samudra and nowhere else. The salt ocean is sunk 1,000 yojanas in the ground; in its centre is a crest 16,000 yojanas high and 10,000 yojanas wide. At the time of tides there is a decrease and increase of its water up to two gavyūtas or four miles. There are four Pātāla vessels in it which control the quantity of its water. They are called Vaṇavā-mukha, Keyūpa, Yūpaka and Īśvara respectively, beginning with the east. In them four devas, Kāla, Mahākāla, Velarūpa, and Prabhāñjana live respectively in pleasure-mansions. Nāga-kumāras, one of the ten classes of the Bhavaṇavāsi-devas, to the number of 42,000 are engaged in controlling the inner waves, while 72,000 more control the outer waves and 60,000 others keep guard over the crest waves. Island-mountains are found in this ocean among which mention may be made of the following which serve as the abodes of some of the devas: Gostūpa, Udakābhāsa, Śaṅkha, Udakasīmaka,² Kākotaka, Kārdamaka, Kailāsa, Aruṇaprabha.³

Twelve thousand yojanas from Jambū-dvīpa, in the east are two islands for the moon, both 12,000 yojanas wide. At the same distance in the west are two islands for the sun. These islands contain in them palaces wherein live the inner and outer suns and moons. Removed from Jambū-dvīpa by the same distance is another island, Gautama-dvīpa, which is the abode of Susthita, the lord of the salt-ocean.

Dhātakikhaṇḍa-dvīpa.—In the Dhātakikhaṇḍa, the next region after the salt-ocean, the number of kshetras, rivers, mountains, lakes, etc., is double that found in Jambū-dvīpa, and their names are as in Jambū-dvīpa. It is divided by the Ishvākāra mountains which run from north to south. There are also other mountains dividing this region into zones as in Jambū-dvīpa. The Ishvākāra and other mountains are like the spokes of a wheel, high as the Nishadha mountains of Jambū-dvīpa, and touching the Lavaṇa and Kāloda-oceans. The zones are between the spoke-like mountains. Two devas are the lords of this region, Prabhāsa and Priyadarśana by name. There are four small Merus, smaller than the Meru of Jambū-dvīpa by 15,000 yojanas.

¹ Cf. Trilokasāra, v. 319.

² According to Hemachandra the abodes of the Indras of the Velādūhūras.

³ The latter four are according to Hemachandra the abodes of the Indras of Anuvēlādūhūras.

Kālodadhi-samudra.—The ocean surrounding Dhātakī-khaṇḍa, 800,000 yojanas wide is Kālodadhi or Kāloḍa. Aquatic souls live here as in Lavana-samudra. Its lords are two, Kala and Mahakala by name.

Pushkaravara-dvīpa or the "lotus-island."—This is the next region or island-continent. It is divided by Mount Mānushottara running all round it, which is called Mānushottara because man is not born except on this side of it. This mountain is the ultimate limit of the region inhabited by human beings. Thus it will be seen that human beings live in $2\frac{1}{2}$ continents, Jambū-dvīpa, Dhātakī-dvīpa and the first half of Pushkaravara-dvīpa. This mountain is round like a city-wall, surrounding the whole human world. It is golden, 1,721 yojanas high, deep in the ground by $430\frac{1}{4}$ yojanas, 1,022 yojanas in diameter at the base, 723 at the middle and 424 at the top. On the other side of it, mortals are neither born nor die. Even animals, etc., do not die if they have gone to the other side of it. Beyond it there are no rivers, clouds, lightning, fire, time, etc. The number of kshetras, rivers, mountains, etc., in the first half is twice that of *Jambū-dvīpa*¹.

There are four small Merus in this half, smaller than Meru of Jambū-dvīpa by 15,000 yojanas. Their diameter at the base is less than Meru's by 600 yojanas. They have also the four groves, Bhadraśāla, Sanmanasa, Nandana and Pāṇḍuka.

Thus it will be seen that the human world according to the Jāinas consists of $2\frac{1}{2}$ continents (adhāyi-dvīpa), 2 oceans, 35 zones, 5 Merus, 35 zone-mountains, 5 Devakurus, 5 Uttarakurus, and 160 provinces. Of these the Bharata, Airāvata and Mahāvīdeha zones, except the Devakurus and Uttarakurus are Karmabhūmis. The lords of the first half of Pushkaravara-dvīpa are Padma and Puṇḍarikā, while the lords of the half on the other side of Mount Mānushottara are Chakshushmān and Suchakshushmān.

Pushkaravara-samudra.—Twice as large as the continent of that name, with water that can be drunk. Its lords are Śrīprabha and Śrīdhara.

Vāruṇivara-dvīpa.—Twice as large as the previous samudra, with two lords of the names of Varuṇa and Varuṇaprabha.

Vāruṇivara-samudra.—Twice as large as the continent of the same name, with water sweet and pleasing with "varied beverages." Its lords are Madhya and Madhyamadeva.

Kṣīravara-dvīpa.—Twice as large as the previous samudra, with two lords, Paṇḍura and Pushpadanta.

Kṣīravara-samudra.—Twice as large as the previous continent, with its water resembling "milk with one-fourth part of ghee mixed with candied sugar." Its lords are Vimala and Vimalaprabha.

Ghṛitavara-dvīpa.—Twice as large as the previous ocean, with two lords, Suprabha and Mahāprabha.

Ghṛitavara-samudra.—Twice as large as the previous continent, with water "of freshly boiled cow's ghee." Its lords are Kanaka and Kanakaprabha.

¹ According to Hemachandra it is twice the number of those of Dhātakī-khaṇḍa.

Ikshvara-dvīpa.—Twice as large as the previous ocean, with two lords, Puṇya and Puṇyaprabha.

Ikshvara-samudra.—Twice as large as the previous continent, with its water resembling the juice of sugar-cane. Its lords are Devagandha and Mahāgandha. Then comes the eighth continent which is compared to heaven.

Nandiśvaravara-dvīpa.—Twice as large as the previous ocean. The diameter of its outer circle is 1,638,400,000 yojanas. It is a land of delight to the devas who go there to worship the Jinas installed in temples in "gardens of manifold designs." In it there are several mountains of which the most important are three mountain ranges called Añjana, Dadhimukha and Ratikara, with shrines of the Jinas on their tops. The whole continent is filled with "temples, theatre-pavilions, arenas, jewelled platforms, beautiful stūpas and statues, fair chaitya-trees, indra-dhvajas, and divine lotus-lakes in succession."¹

In the various temples and palaces here the devas in all their splendour, together with their retinues, celebrate "eight-day festivals" on the holy days of the Arhats or the Jinas.

The religious importance of these festivals in the Nandiśvaravara-dvīpa can be realized if it is pointed out that in one of the inscriptions in the Vardhamāna temple² a gift is made for the performance of one of these festivals (ārambha-Nandi) in the temple. This is further augmented by symbolical representations both in stone and metal, of this land where the Jinas are worshipped in temples by the devas and other highly spiritual souls. One is in metal (pl. xxxi, fig. 3) and is pyramidal in shape rising in six tiers with a finial top. Several siddha figures can be made out sitting on the sides of the pyramid in meditation. The other (pl. xxxi, fig. 4) which is in stone is bigger, being shaped like a vimāna superimposed on a square base, the sides of which reveal several seated siddhas in meditation. The vimāna has for each side a niche surmounted by an arch with the figure of a seated Tirthaṅkara below it (arch). A finial surmounts the whole giving it the dignified appearance of a shrine (Jina-bhavana).

The lords of this continent are Nandi and Nandiprabha.

Nandiśvaravara-samudra.—Twice as large as the previous continent with its water resembling sugar-cane juice. Its lords are Bhadra and Subhadra.

The continent Aruṇa-dvīpa surrounds Nandiśvaravara-samudra. Its lords are Aruṇa and Aruṇaprabha. Aruṇa-samudra comes next and its lords are Sasugandha and Sarvagandha. Then come Aruṇābhāsa-dvīpa and Aruṇābhāsa-samudra and so on with two lords for each, the former ruling over the southern part and the latter over the northern part. The remaining continents and oceans are like those discussed above, each twice as large as the preceding one. The last continent is Svayambhūramāṇa-dvīpa which has a mountain called Svayamprabha running through it like the Mānushottara mountain of ¹ For details regarding the names of the lakes, the number of palaces and the dimensions of the mountains and for the worship of the Jinas by the devas see Trilokaśāstra, vv. 966-990.

² See above, pp. 56-57.

Pushkaravara-dvīpa. The last ocean which surrounds Svayambhūramaya-dvīpa is Svayambhūramaya-samudra, with its water drinkable like that of Kālodadhi and Pushkaravara-samudra. And like Lavana-samudra and Kālodadhi it is filled with aquatic souls like fish, tortoise, etc.

The five classes of Jyotishka Devas or *Stellars*¹—1. Suns (Ādityas), 2. Moons (Chandras), 3. Planets (Grahas), 4. Constellations (nakshatras), and 5. Scattered stars (prakṛnaka-tāras)—extend up to the last ocean of the middle world. At 790 yojanas above the surface of the earth (middle world) is the lower level of the Jyotishkas. The lowest are the stars. The suns are ten yojanas above them. Eighty yojanas above the suns are the moons. Four yojanas above the moons are the 27 nakshatras, Kṛttikā, Rohiṇī, Mṛgaśīrṣhā, Ārdrā, Punarvasu, Pushya, Āśleshā, Maghā, Pūrvāṣṭhā, Uttarāṣṭhā, Hasta, Chitrā, Svāti, Viśākhā, Anurādhā, Jyeshthā, Mūlam, Pūrvāshāḍhā, Uttarāshāḍhā, Abhijit, Śravana, Dhanishthā, Śatabhishak, Pūrvottarāshāḍhā (or Pūrvāshāḍhā and Uttarāshāḍhā), Revatī, Āśvini and Bharanī. Four yojanas above the nakshatras is Budha, the planet Mercury. Three yojanas above Budha is Śukra, the planet Venus; three yojanas above Venus is Bṛhaspati (Jupiter); three yojanas above Bṛhaspati is Angāraka (Mars), and three yojanas above Angāraka is Śanaiścara (Saturn). So in height the Stellar world is 110 yojanas or 900 yojanas from the surface of the earth. In the $2\frac{1}{2}$ dvīpas, where human beings live, the Stellars move round their respective Merus, but the nearest point on their orbits is 1,121 yojanas from the centre of the Meru of *Jambū-dvīpa*². Divisions of time are caused by the movements of the Stellars. There are two moons and two suns belonging to Jambū-dvīpa; four moons and four suns for Lavana-samudra, 12 moons and 12 suns for Dhātakikhaṇḍa-dvīpa, and 42 moons and 42 suns for Kālodadhi-samudra. To the first half of Pushkaravara-dvīpa belong 72 suns and a similar number of moons. Thus there are 132 moons and 132 suns in the human world. Each moon has a retinue of 88 planets, 28 constellations and of 6,697,500,000,000,000,000 stars. The width and length of a moon's car (vimāna) is $\frac{2}{3}$ of a yojana; of the sun's car $\frac{3}{4}$ of a yojana; of those of the planets $\frac{1}{2}$ a yojana; of those of the constellations $\frac{1}{4}$ yojana; of those of all the stars that have the maximum life $\frac{1}{8}$ yojana; of those of all the stars having a minimum life $\frac{1}{16}$ yojana or 500 bows. This is the case with the Stellars in the human world ($2\frac{1}{2}$ dvīpas).

Beyond the Mānushottara mountain-range the Stellars are fixed and never move. The suns and moons stand still and their sizes are half those of the suns and moons of the human world. Their number increases according to the successive increase in the circumference of the various island-continent. Their retinue consists of innumerable planets, constellations and stars, brilliant and bell-shaped and the whole group is finally bounded by the Svayambhūramaya ocean.

¹ See below, pp. 230-231.

² According to Hemachandra the Jyotiḥchakra or circle of heavenly bodies moves continually in a circle at 1,121 yojanas from the borders of Meru. The pole star is fixed. Beyond the $2\frac{1}{2}$ dvīpas constituting the human world the Jyotiḥchakra remains fixed in a circle, "not touching the end of the world, at a distance of 1,121 yojanas."

THE UPPER WORLD (Ūrdhva-loka).

Going upwards in the trasa-nāḍī we reach the upper world where the Vaimānika-devas and still higher celestial beings and perfected and liberated souls live. The upper world is above Mount Meru and is seven rajjus high less 900 yojanas. It can be divided, starting from below, into (1) Kalpas, (2) Graiveyakas, (3) Anudīśas, (4) Anuttaras and (5) Siddha-kshetra. The Kalpas which are 16 in number rise above Mount Meru and are situated in eight superposed pairs which are compared to the ribs of a man. Above the last of the kalpas rise the Graiveyaka heavens which correspond to his neck, hence called Graiveyakas (Grīva, neck). They are in three layers each divided into three parts. Then come the Anudīśas which correspond to the chin of the figure; they form one layer and are nine in number. Then come the Anuttaras which are five in number; they correspond to the five openings in the face, two eyes, two nostrils and one mouth. The whole is capped by the "crown of Siddha-kshetra" which is in the shape of a "half-moon-like dome"; this region corresponds to the crown of the human head. The devas of the kalpas are called *Kalpavāsī-devas*¹; those of the Graiveyakas, Anudīśas, and Anuttaras are called Ahamindras,² while the liberated souls that occupy Siddha-kshetra are called Siddhas.³

The kalpas must now be described. They are sixteen in number and are situated in pairs like the ribs of a man, one pair above the other. They are—

(1) Saudharma, (2) Aśāna, (3) Sanatkumāra, (4) Māhendra, (5) Brahma, (6) Brahmottara, (7) Lantava, (8) Kāpishṭa, (9) Śakra, (10) Mahāśakra, (11) Śātara, (12) Sahasrāra, (13) Anata, (14) Prānata, (15) Āraṇa, (16) Achyuta.

The first kalpa, Saudharma, is the nearest to the middle world, because its central heavenly car or abode (Indraka-vimāna) is only one hair's breadth from the top of Mount Meru.

The first two kalpas are founded on thick water; the next three on thick wind; the next three on thick water and thick wind; and the heavens above these rest on space. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ rajjus from the level of the ground to the first pair of kalpas; $2\frac{1}{2}$ rajjus up to Sanatkumāra and Māhendra; 5 rajjus to Sahasrāra, and 6 up to the sixteenth kalpa. There are thus 7 rajjus up to the top of the universe. The fifth kalpa is 5 rajjus wide and is situated in the place that corresponds to the elbow of the man representing the universe.

The upper world has in all 63 layers (patala), each layer being coextensive with the mobile channel (trasa-nāḍī). In the centre of each layer is the central abode or car (Indraka-vimāna) of that layer. The respective Indras live only in these cars or vimānas. The Indraka-vimāna of the first layer is a circle with a diameter of 45 lakhs yojanas; then it goes on decreasing in size till in the sixty-third layer it is a circle of one lakh yojanas diameter. Apart from the central cars there are also other cars or vimānas in each patala in the four cardinal points. Thus in the first layer there are 62 such cars or vimānas in each direction, in the second layer 61, in the third 60 and so on till in the sixty-second and sixty-third layers there is only one car for each in each direction. In the intermediate directions and all over the rest of these layers there are innumerable other vimānas also. The arrangement of the layers are as follows:—

¹ See below, p. 231.² See below, pp. 231, 234.³ See below, p. 189.

The 16 kalpas have 52 layers as detailed below:—

31 layers for the first pair of kalpas .				1 layer for the sixth pair of kalpas .
7	do.	second	do.	6 layers for the seventh and eighth pairs of kalpas .
4	do.	third	do.	—
2	do.	fourth	do.	52 layers.
1	layer for the fifth	do.		—

The Kalpātita heavens have eleven layers as follows:—

9 for the 9 Graiveyakas.

1 for the 9 Anudīśas.

1 for the Anuttaras.

—
11 layers.
—

The Kalpātita part of the upper world where the Ahamindras live are as we have seen the Graiveyakas, the Anudīśas and the Anuttaras.

The Graiveyakas are nine in number, being arranged in three rows one above the other. The bottom row consists of three named Sudarśana, Suprabuddha and Manorama; the middle row of three called Sarvabhadra, Suviśala and Sumanas; and the upper row of three more called Saumanasa, Prītikara and Āditya.

The Anudīśas are also nine and they are arranged, four for the cardinal points, four for the intermediate directions and one for the centre. The four in the cardinal points are called Archiḥ, Archimālīnī, Vairā and Vairochanā; the intermediate four are Soma, Somarūpa, Anka and Sphaṭika; and Āditya is the name of the central one.

Above the Anudīśas are the Anuttara heavens which are five in number; they are arranged as follows: Vijaya in the east, Vijayanta in the south, Jayanta in the west and Aparājita in the north and Sarvārthasiddhi in the centre. Those that get born in the Anuttaras, excepting Sarvārthasiddhi, and in the nine Anudīśas will attain liberation after undergoing at most two births as human beings. But those in Sarvārthasiddhi will have only one more birth before liberation.

Twelve yojanas above Sarvārthasiddhi at the summit of the universe is the Siddha-kṣetra, the place of liberated souls, which is situated in the middle of the eighth world (dhara) called Iśatprāghāra. This Iśatprāghāra world is one raju broad, one raju long and eight yojanas high. In its centre, radiant like silver and shaped like a parasol or canopy, is the Siddha-śilā or kṣetra, eight yojanas broad and 45 lakhs of yojanas wide, tapering up towards the top. Above this Siddha-śilā, at the end of the nparima-tanu-vāta-valaya or outermost atmospheric sheath, the Siddhas live in "the blissful possession of their infinite quaternary." Their happiness in a second (kṣaṇa) compares with that for all time of all human beings, kings, Indras, devas and Ahamindras put together.

APPENDIX III.¹

JAINA CLASSIFICATION OF SOULS.*

Jainism is accused of being atheistic, which is however not true. The numerous gods (Tīrthaṅkaras, Yakshas, Yakshiṇīs, Indras, etc.) that fill the Jaina pantheon speak for the Jaina belief in godhood. But their gods are not creators of the universe, for creation implies volition or desire to create which can be spoken of only if there is anything which hitherto is not but must come into existence. The world is infinite and was never created at any particular moment. It is subject to integration and dissolution. Its constituent elements or magnitudes (astikāyas) including the soul are eternal and indestructible; but they change their forms and conditions. These changes take place in the two eras avasarpinī and utsarpinī above explained (pp. 167—169). The desire to create would imply imperfection which will have to be attributed to God if he is to be the creator of the universe. Also the theory of creation, if accepted, will give rise to theories of a more complicated nature such as causation, which must eventually point to imperfection. The creator will be only a man, needy and therefore imperfect as any other. Jainism attempts to raise man to godhood and to inspire him to reach it as nearly as possible by "steady faith, right perception, perfect knowledge, and, above all a spotless life."² Thus it will be seen that Jainism believes in godhood and Jaina iconography speaks of innumerable gods. Here it should be noted that in Jainism a sharp line of distinction is drawn between gods and devas; the former are called Siddhas and the latter are described as mundane souls. All souls can aspire to godhood.

Jaina iconography as it is available to us to-day is so mixed up with Hindu iconography³ and has been drawn so much from Hindu mythology⁴ that a correct description

¹ Concerning the authorities consulted, see preface.

² Though the popular heading "Jaina Iconography" might be expected here, it is not adopted because the heading "Jaina classification of souls," being wider, deals not only with those Supreme Beings (Souls) that are covered strictly by the term "Iconography" but also with other mundane souls that are privileged to attain to godhood by a particular course of conduct. See table below, p. 187.

³ J. L. Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, pp. 4-5.

⁴ See above, pp. 9, 10 and 33.

⁵ Ibid., pp. 9, 10, 133-149.

of the various gods and goddesses occupying the Jaina pantheon is necessary to prevent them from being confused with their present equivalents in the Hindu pantheon. Though Brahmanical divinities have been included they have been accorded only inferior positions—a feature that luckily marks them out clearly. The whole system of the Jaina gods and goddesses appears to-day as an elaborately constructed system, probably synchronizing in its origin with the period in Hindu iconography which witnessed a similar construction of a system of gods in accordance with certain dogmas that were made to standardize the various icons, till then loosely and freely fashioned. More than this we cannot say as materials are lacking for a chronological study of the Jaina system of divinities. Much reliance cannot be placed on the Jaina tradition that the system of Jaina divinities was evolved immediately after Mahāvīra, for if this were admitted it would carry the gods and goddesses back to very early centuries before the birth of Christ. Even very orthodox Jains who accept the above tradition, will hesitate to assign the various Brahmanical divinities that have crept into their iconography to such a remote past, for they have undoubtedly been taken into the system as C. R. Jain says “to placate the Brahmanical hatred and win them over to protect the Jains against bitter persecutions at the hands of their co-religionists (Hindus).”¹ And so far as South India is concerned the need for protection appears to have arisen only about the seventh century A.D. The utmost that can be expected in the early centuries of the Christian era is that there was then a pantheon of gods, not so bewilderingly big as is found now, but probably consisting of only a select few. The membership may even have been so circumscribed that only the 24 Tirthaṅkaras and some members of their families like Bāhubali or Gommateśvara (Śravaṇa Belgola) and Bharata, etc., were admitted. But as years rolled on a regular Jaina hierarchy of munis or sages and Āchāryas or apostles came to be evolved. Very soon these came to be deified by their followers. Close on the heels of this visible apostle-worship came religious persecution. Both combined to elaborate for the modern Jaina the present iconography that he boldly and with legitimate pride presents to his erstwhile Hindu persecutor.

As in Hindu iconography, so also in Jaina, the gods and goddesses are classified into orders, and convenient groups; they are mostly mortal and are mostly distinguished by lāñchchhanas or cognizances. The most prominent among these gods as well as the most ancient are the 24 Tirthaṅkaras or the perfected teachers who belong to the present age (avasarpinī).

Luckily we have ample materials concerning these Tirthaṅkaras², and if to-day we have not a sufficiently satisfactory compendium of Jaina iconography it is not because materials are lacking.

¹ Īśvārābhāṣya, p. 102.

² Thanks to the philanthropist Mr. J. L. Jaini, who has made endowments for the speedy publication of several Jaina works, and Dr. F. W. Thomas, the erudite scholar who in his capacity as President of the Jaina Literature Society is bringing to light several of these works.

The classification of souls¹ in Jainism can be seen in the following table:—

Table of Classification of Souls.

Siddhas, arhats, āchāryas, upādhyāyas and sādhus are called pañcha-parameshthins or the five supreme ones, to whom the Jainas pray and bow many times every day with the following invocation (mantra):—

Namo arahantāṇaṃ, namo siddhāṇaṃ, namo āyārkyāṇaṃ, namo uvajjhāyāṇaṃ, namo loye sabba-sāhūṇaṃ.

"Salutation to the arhats, to the siddhas, to the āchāryas, to the upādhyāyas and to all the sādhus of the world."

With the above invocation repeated millions of times every day the Jainas bow with hands folded in añjali (worship) in the four cardinal directions, east, south, west and north.⁴ The main import of such a prayer is three-fold:—

(1) Worship is given to all human souls worthy of it, in whatever clime they may be, (2) Worship is impersonal. It is the aggregate of the qualities that is worshipped

* An asterisk denotes the special importance of the class to which it is affixed.

¹ As the subject of Jaina iconography deals with the Jaina gods and goddesses, who are all classified as souls, it is treated here under the wider heading "Jaina classification of souls" instead of going as a separate appendix.

² Ārya-devīs are not included in this table as they are females. Being the leaders of the female converts to Jainism they rank with Āchāryas. See below, p. 218.

³ These four groups were contemporaneous with the 24 Tīrthaṅkaras of the present age, forming with them a group of 63 great and spiritual persons collectively known as the 63 Sādhū-purushas.

⁴ For details regarding the worship of the pañchaparameshthins see Indranandin's Pañchaparameshthi-pūjā; Hemachandra's Abhikāśa-chintāmaṇi; Amṛtachandra Sūri's Purushārtha-siddhyupāya.

rather than any individual, (3) The arhat, "the living embodiment of the highest goal of Jainism", is mentioned first and then the siddha who is disembodied and consequently cannot be appealed to or approached by humanity. As the siddha is without body the Jainas feel that they can never pray to the siddha alone and pre-eminently. A siddha has, however, 108 attributes, some of which have been enumerated above (p. 64) and these the Jainas recite, telling their beads. By this they do not worship or salute the siddha but tell their beads "only with the object of stirring up their spiritual ambition and in order to remind themselves of the qualities a siddha must possess, in the hope that some day they too may reach their desired goal, and rest in perfect bliss in the state of nirvāṇa, doing nothing for ever and ever."

The Jainas include Aum (Om) also in their incantation and interpret it as consisting of the following five sounds, standing for the five supreme ones (Pañcha-parameshthins): a, ā, u and m; a stands for arhat; ā stands for āśarīra, i.e., "disembodied", i.e., siddha; u stands for āchārya; m stands for muni, i.e., saint, who is the sūdhū.

Images and sculptures containing figures of these five supreme ones (pañcha-parameshthins) can be seen in Jaina temples. They are invariably in the shape of chakras standing on padmāsanas. A very interesting specimen of this symbolic worship is found in the temple at Tiruparuttikunram which is figured as No. 2 on plate xxxvi. The whole is in the form of a chakra which is supported by a crouching lion and two rearing yālīs in turn standing on a padmāsana attached to a rectangular bhadrāsana. The chakra can compare well with the Hindu chakra which is associated with Vishṇu. Within the chakra is placed an eight-petalled lotus (aṣṭadala-padma), each petal bearing a seated figure or some article. The figures are those of the five supreme ones (arhat, siddha, āchārya, upādhyāya and sūdhū) while the articles are a dharmachakra or the wheel of the law¹, a wooden rest supporting the Jaina scripture called śruta or *śruta-jūṇā*² and a temple (Jina-ālaya). In the centre of the lotus where one would expect the seed-vessel of the lotus, is the seated figure of the Tirthāṅkara in all his glory, attended by chāmaras, triple-parasol, halo and the like. Mr. Mallinath explains this in a different way, which has much in its favour. According to him the whole specimen is symbolical of the worship of the Navadevatās or the "nine deities," they being the five pañchaparameshthins and dharmachakra, śruta, chaitya and chaityālaya. The pañchaparameshthins occupy the centre and the four cardinal points of the lotus while the latter four go in the petals alternately in the following order: proceeding clockwise dharmachakra first, then śruta, then chaitya (an idol), and lastly chaityālaya or temple.

The evolution of souls is based on three fundamental principles, vis., that man is not perfect, but can improve and can achieve perfection, that man's personality is dual, material and spiritual, and that by his spiritual nature man can and must control his material nature. The second of the principles is in striking contrast with the Hindu Advaitic doctrine of Brahman, or one soul which is in all and is all. When the material nature is entirely subjugated the soul is said to have been liberated or to have attained perfection. In its perfection-condition the soul "enjoys its true and eternal character, whereof the characteristic is the four infinities—infinite perception or faith, infinite knowledge, infinite power and infinite bliss." And such a soul is called a Siddha.

¹ See above, pp. 109-110.

² The śāḍga literature and the like.

SIDDHAS.

These perfect and free souls are of two kinds, Sāmānya-siddhas and Tīrthāṅkara-siddhas. Sāmānya-siddhas are "disembodied and in nirvāṇa at the summit of the Universe, steady and in bliss unending." They are commonly referred to simply by the term "siddhas." Tīrthāṅkara-siddhas are those perfect souls in nirvāṇa, who in their embodied condition preached and propounded the Truth. There have been 24 of them in the current cyclic era, the avasarpinī.

Both kinds of Siddhas have innumerable qualities, but eight qualities of the Sāmānya-siddhas or Siddhas and 46 of the Tīrthāṅkara-siddhas are the most important. The perfect soul, without body (siddha) has the following eight:—

(1) Infinite and perfect faith (ananta-darśana), (2) Perfect perception, (3) Perfect knowledge (ananta-jñāna), (4) Being neither light nor heavy (agurulaghu), (5) Infinite capacity for penetrability, (6) Extreme refinement beyond sense-perception, (7) Infinite power (ananta-vīrya), (8) Immunity from disturbance of all kinds.¹

TĪRTHĀṅKARA-SIDDHAS.

The 46 most important qualities of a Tīrthāṅkara-siddha can be analysed under the following five broad heads:—

I. Four attributes in their infinity called ananta-chatuṣṭaya, viz., (1) infinite perception, (2) infinite knowledge, (3) infinite power and (4) infinite bliss.

II. By birth he attains: (1) A handsome body, beyond the powers of description, (2) a natural pleasing fragrance emanates from the body, (3) No sweat forms on it, (4) No excreta comes out of it, (5) The limbs are perfect in proportion, (6) The joints, bones, nerves and sinews are strong and unbreakable, (7) There are something like 1,008 lucky signs or auspicious marks on the body, (8) Immeasurable strength characterises the body, (9) The blood is of milk-white purity, (10) Speech is sweet and harmless.

III. By achieving omniscience (Kevala-jñāna) he performs the following:— (1) Averts famine within a circular area of 800 miles' radius, (2) Remains always raised above the ground, whether walking, sitting or standing, (3) Appears to face every one in all the four directions, (4) Removes all destructive inclinations and impulses of people near him, (5) He is free from pain and disturbance (upasarga), (6) Lives without food, (7) Is master of all arts and sciences, (8) His nails and hair do not grow, (9) His eyes are always open and the lids do not wink, and (10) His body does not cast a shadow.

¹ A slightly different list of these eight qualities from Pañcāṅga-pratīkṛamāṇa-siddhānta, Bhavnagar, 1926, p. 2, is as follows:—(1) Anantadarśana, infinite faith, (2) Ananta-jñāna, infinite knowledge, (3) Ananta-kāritra, perfect conduct or infinite good-conduct, (4) Avyābhāṅga-sukha, undisturbable bliss, (5) Aśhaya-sthiti, permanent state as Siddha, (6) Arūpa-tva, state of being a pure spirit, (7) Agurulaghu, being neither too light nor too heavy, (8) Ananta-vīrya, infinite power.

IV. The effects of his achieving omniscience, which are also treated as his attributes are:—(1) The heavenly bodies attain a general mastery over the Ardha-māgadhi language, the language in which he spoke,¹ (2) All the beings near him cherish nothing but friendly feelings towards each other, (3) The skies are always clear, (4) The directions and the whole atmosphere are all clear, (5) Trees and plants bear fruits and flowers in all seasons, (6) Space around the Tirthaṅkara of eight miles radius (one yojana) is clean, (7) When he walks the devas place under his feet golden lotuses, (8) Shouts of "Jai! Jai!, victory, victory," rend the air, (9) Pleasant, mild and fragrant breeze blows all round, (10) The earth gets cooled by sweet-scented showers, (11) The horns of the earth are all removed scrupulously by the devas of the air (Vānavyantarās), (12) Every being is endowed with supreme joy and happiness, (13) The dharmachakra, or the "wheel of the law" goes in front of the Tirthaṅkara when he is taken in procession, (14) Eight kinds of auspicious marks or things (aṣṭamaṅgalas) attend the procession, i.e., parasol, chāmara, flag, svastika, mirror, a kind of vase (kalāśa), a powder-flask (vardhamānaka) and a throne seat.*

V. Eight kinds of heavenly signs called prātihāryas appear miraculously:—

(1) Aśoka tree, (2) Showers of celestial blooms, (3) Heavenly music or "wordless speech flowing from the Lord" (divya-dhvaṇī), (4) Chāmara held by the Yakshas, (5) A śīṃhāsana, (6) Aura of beautiful radiance (bhū-maṇḍala), (7) Heavenly drum, and (8) Triple parasol (trichhatra).

TIRTHAṅKARAS OF THE PAST AGE (Atitakāla-Tirthaṅkaras).—Endowed with the abovementioned qualities there were 24 Tirthaṅkara-siddhas in the past age. They are as follows:—

(1) Nirvāṇa, (2) Sāgara, (3) Mahāsādhū, (4) Vimalaprabhā, (5) Śrīdhara, (6) Sudatta, (7) Amalaprabhā, (8) Uttara, (9) Aṅgira, (10) Sanmati, (11) Sindhu, (12) Kusumāñjali, (13) Śivagaṇa, (14) Utsāha, (15) Jñāneśvara, (16) Parameśvara, (17) Vimaleśvara, (18) Yaśodhara, (19) Kṛishṇa, (20) Jñānamati, (21) Śuddhamati, (22) Śrībhadrā, (23) Atikrānta, and (24) Śānta.

Little is known of the iconography of these 24 Tirthaṅkaras of the past age. It is only when we come to the Tirthaṅkaras of the present age that our search for iconographic details is amply rewarded.

TIRTHAṅKARAS OF THE PRESENT AGE (Vartamānakāla-Tirthaṅkaras).—Images of the 24 Tirthaṅkaras of the present age are usually placed on highly sculptured āsanas, generally padmāsanas. In Śvetāmbara temples they are generally of marble, white mostly except in the cases of Mallinātha, Munisuvrata, Neminātha and Pārśvanātha, where they are often black. There is no such preference in South India for white marble and though we do find it in some of the Jaina temples here it is due to North Indian influence. Ordinary granite is more often selected for image-making than polished stone or any other material, it being maintained that the colossal statues at Śravaṇa Belgola, Karkal and Yenur which are hewn out of rocks justify the selection.

¹ The original language of the Jaina canon was a Prākṛit, an early derivative of Sanskrit, spoken in Bihar, which is known as Arāka or Ardha-Māgadhi. Dr. F. W. Thomas observes, "In the existing Śvetāmbara texts, modified by time, two dialects are distinguished, one being confined to verse, while the Digambaras employ a third. The early commentaries were in Prākṛit. Sanskrit, first employed by the Digambaras, has been predominant since about 1000 A.D., although the Prākṛit has continued in use. Of modern dialects the Mārwārī, a special form of Hindi, and Gujarātī are preferred."—Jaini, Outlines of Jainism, p. xxv, n.1.

* For a slightly different list of the aṣṭamaṅgalas see Trilokaśāra, v. 989.

* The names given here are taken from the Jayamālā, which the temple priest was kind enough to show me.

Tirthaṅkara images are luckily found only in two attitudes, sitting and standing. There, however, appears to be a marked preference for the former attitude. Twenty-one Tirthaṅkaras are said to have attained nirvāṇa in the *kāyotsarga*¹ attitude, i.e., standing erect as do Bharata and Bahubali at Śravaṇa Belgola, while the other three did so while sitting on a padmāsana. These three are Rishabhadeva, Neminatha, and Mahāvīra, who are considered the most important of all. The attitude in which they attained nirvāṇa was thus specially emphasised and came later to be sometimes associated with all the twenty-four. When colossal statues of any Tirthaṅkara were made they were hewn out of boulders, the standing posture being mostly preferred².

Seated images of Tirthaṅkaras always have the legs crossed in front, the toes of one foot resting close upon the knee of the other, and the right hand placed on the left in the lap, both the palms facing upwards. All are so alike when thus represented that the need appears to have been felt to differentiate them by certain devices which are known as chihnas or lāñchhanas. These have been given in the table below under emblems. These emblems are usually carved on the pedestals or āsanas on which the images are installed. In the case of Pārśvanātha, snake-hoods numbering seven are shown over his head and sometimes a snake with a single hood or without hood on the pedestal. This is to distinguish him from Supārśvanātha, the seventh Tirthaṅkara, who has also snake-hoods over his head, though the number of the hoods rarely exceeds five. To avoid even the slightest confusion the svastika symbol has been prescribed for Supārśvanātha, which is scrupulously engraven in all images of this Tirthaṅkara. Digambara images are all nude while those of the Śvetāmbaras (there are a few of them in South India) are dressed and sometimes decorated with crowns and ornaments. They have a triple umbrella called muk-kodai in Tamil over their heads which is surrounded by a bhā-maṇḍala or halo. At the base of the āsanas are sometimes found nine figures representing the nine planets (navagrahas). On the front of the āsanas are usually carved two small figures. To the right of the Tirthaṅkara stands a male figure representing the Yaksha or male attendant deva of that particular Tirthaṅkara; to his left stands the corresponding female figure representing the particular Yakshinī or female attendant devī of that particular Tirthaṅkara. Sometimes between these attendants is a small panel in which the figure of a devī is often shown.

The iconography of the twenty-four Tirthaṅkaras is shown in the following table.

¹ Helen translates kāyotsarga as "indifference to the body by one standing or sitting, with the arms hanging down" (Yogaśāstra by Hemachandra, 4, 133). Another term which indicates much the same idea is pratiṃd which also involves meditating in a particular posture. But in pratiṃd the meditator must always stand while in kāyotsarga he may be either standing or seated. See Hemachandra, Trishastīśālaśāpurushacharitra, Vol. I, Helen's edition, 1931, pp. 16n, 34n.

² But the general way of representing the kāyotsarga, judging from images and sculptures, appears to be to show it standing. See Trishastīśālaśāpurushacharitra, pp. 68, 323-4.

³ C. R. Jain, Rishabhadeva, pls. 1, 6, 8 and 9.

The Twenty-four

Number and name of the Tirthankara.	Vishva (heaven) from which he descended for incarnation.	Birth place.	Father and mother.	Age.	Colour.	Height.	Nakshatra.
(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)
1. Rishabhadeva or Adinatha.	Sarvārthasiddhi.	Ayodhya ...	Nabhi : Maru-Dev.	84 lakhs of Pūrva.	Golden yellow.	500 dhanushas. ²	Uttara shatā.
2. Ajitanatha ...	Vijaya ...	Do. ...	Jinadasa : Vijaya Dev.	72 lakhs of Pūrva.	Do.	450 dhanushas.	Rohini ...
3. Sambhavanatha ...	Uparima-graiveyaka.	Śrāvasti ...	Jināri : Sena ...	60 lakhs of Pūrva.	Do.	400 dhanushas.	Pūrvāshadha.
4. Abhinandana ...	Jayanta ...	Ayodhya ...	Sakvaya : Siddhārtha.	50 lakhs of Pūrva.	Do.	350 dhanushas.	Punarvasu ...
5. Sumatinatha ...	Do. ...	Do. ...	Meghavantha : Sumangala.	40 lakhs of Pūrva.	Do.	300 dhanushas.	Magha ...
6. Padmaprabha ...	Uparima-graiveyaka.	Kausambi ...	Dharaṇa : Sridhara : Susmita.	30 lakhs of Pūrva.	Red (rakta).	250 dhanushas.	Chitra ...
7. Supārivanatha ...	Madhyama-graiveyaka.	Vātsīpi (Benares).	Supratichha : Tīrthi.	20 lakhs of Pūrva.	Green. ²	200 dhanushas.	Vishākhā ...
8. Chandraprabha ...	Vaijayanta ...	Chandrapur ...	Mahitana : Lakshmanā.	10 lakhs of Pūrva.	White.	150 dhanushas.	Anurādhā ...
9. Pushpadanta or Suvaidhinatha.	Ānanta ...	Kākaṇṭhi or Kānarpānaga-ri.	Sugriva : Rāma.	2 lakhs of Pūrva.	Do.	100 dhanushas.	Mūla ...
10. Śālanatha ...	Achyuta ...	Shalapurā or Bhadri.	Dridhanatha : Sunanda.	1 lakh of Pūrva.	Golden yellow.	50 dhanushas.	Pūrvāshadha.
11. Śreyāmdanatha ...	Do. ...	Simhapur ...	Vishnu : Vishal or Vishvadev.	84 lakhs common years.	Do.	80 dhanushas.	Śravanā ...
12. Vāspatya ...	Paikata ...	Champapur ...	Vaspatya : Vijaya (Jayā).	72 lakhs of years.	Red ...	70 dhanushas.	Śatabhishak.

¹ The iconography of Yakshas and Yakshis is dealt with separately (pp. 196-212).² Dhanusha or dhanus = 4 cubits (see table on p. 166).

Tirthaṅkaras.

Tirtha- vithāna.	Emblem or cognizance.	Place of Nirvāṇa.	Number of Gaganadhara or apostles; their chief.	First Ārya or leader of the female converts.	Yaksha or attendant god. ¹	Yakshi or Yakshini or attendant goddess. ¹	Interval to next Tirthaṅkara.
(9)	(10)	(11)	(12)	(13)	(14)	(15)	(16)
Ruqyas tree.	Bull	Mt. Kailāsa (or Aśvī- pada. ²)	84; Vṛsha- bhāsana (Pundarikā).	Brāhmā ..	Gōmukha ..	Chakreśvari (Śv. Apoṣṭhākrā).	50 lakhs of crores sāgaras.
Śāla (Shorea robusta).	Elephant ..	Sammet- śikhara or Mt. Paras- nāth. ³	90; Simha- sana.	Phālgv ..	Mahiyaksha ..	Rohini (Śv. Ajita- tālā).	30 lakhs of crores sāgaras.
Prayāga (Dro- seria latifolia).	Horse	Do.	105; Chāru.	Śyāmā ..	Trinakla ..	Prajāpati (Śv. Dur- lābā).	10 lakhs of crores sāgaras.
Priyanga (Panicum distachyon).	Monkey or the ape	Do.	101; Vajra- nābha.	Ajita ..	Yaksheshvara (Śv. Yakshasvika).	Vajradantāhārī (Śv. Kālā).	9 lakhs of crores sāgaras.
Śāla (Shorea robusta).	Wheel or disc or Car wheel (Sraṇṇā).	Do.	116; Chāru- na.	Kāyapa ..	Tambura ..	Purnahatā (Śv. Matākā).	90,000 crores sāgaras.
Cochin (Anodonta siva).	Red lotus ..	Do.	111; Pradyo- tana.	Rati ..	Kusuma ..	Manovagā or Māno- gupti (Śv. Syāmā or Achyuta).	9,000 crores sāgaras.
Sirisha (Acacia Soriba).	Srīvāṇa on the crown and 5 snake hoods over his head.	Do.	95; Vidar- bha.	Soma ..	Vamanādi (Śv. Mānā).	Kālī (Śv. Sāntā) ..	900 crores sāgaras.
Nāga tree ..	Crescent moon ..	Do.	93; Dīpa.	Sumanā ..	Syāma or Vijaya (Śv. Vijaya).	Jyēṣṭhā (Śv. Bhī- kṛ).	90 crores sāgaras.
Śāli ..	Makara (croco- dile) or the crab.	Do.	88; Vāra- haka.	Vārāṇ ..	Ajita ..	Mahāśālī or Ajitā (Śv. Sūlā).	9 crores sāgaras.
Priyanga (Panicum distachyon).	Śrīvāṇa or wishing tree; Śrīvāṇa mark according to Svetishvara.	Do.	81; Nanda.	Syāma ..	Brāhmā or Brāh- māvara.	Mānvi (Śv. Adakā).	1 crore, less 100 sāgaras.
Tapobha tree.	Deer or Rhino- ceros or Garuḍa.	Do.	77; Kāyapa.	Dharmā ..	Hvara (Śv. Yak- shet).	Gaurī (Śv. Mānvi).	54 sāgaras.
Pātala (Ficus mucronata).	Buffalo or bul- lock.	Champāpurī (in North Bengal).	66; Subhā- ma.	Dharmā ..	Kamā ..	Gāndhārī (Śv. Chan- drā or Chāṇḍā).	30 sāgaras.

¹ Supposed to be Sātrudhaya in Gujarat.² In Western Bengal.³ Śv. Golden yellow.

The Twenty-four

Number and name of the Tirthankara.	Vimāna (heaven) from which he descended for incarnation.	Birth place.	Father and mother.	Age.	Colour.	Height.	Nakṣatra.
(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)
13. Vimalanātha ...	Mahāloka ...	Kāmpilya ...	Kṛtavarman : Sarasvati Syaṁā.	50 lakhs of years.	Golden yellow.	60 dha- nushas.	Uttarāṣṭhā.
14. Anantanātha (pl. xxvi, fig. 3).	Prāgata ...	Ayodhya ...	Simhasena : Sarasvati Syaṁā.	30 lakhs of years.	Do.	50 dha- nushas.	Revati ...
15. Dharmānātha ...	Vijaya ...	Ratnapur ...	Bhānna : Sarasvati.	10 lakhs of years.	Do.	45 dha- nushas.	Puṣya ...
16. Śāntinātha ...	Sarvārthasiddhi.	Hastinapura ...	Vijayena : Arbha.	1 lakh of years.	Do.	40 dha- nushas.	Bharani ...
17. Kumhānātha ...	Do.	Do.	Sūrya (Sūra) : Sri Devī.	95,000 years.	Do.	35 dha- nushas.	Kṛttikā ...
18. Arunātha ...	Do.	Do.	Sudarśana : Mitra Devī.	85,000 "	Do.	30 dha- nushas.	Rohini ...
19. Mallinātha ...	Jayanta ...	Mithilāpurī (Mathurā).	Kumbhā : Rakṣitā (Pra- bhavati).	55,000 "	Do.*	25 dha- nushas.	Āśvini ...
20. Munisuvrata ...	Aparāṅga ...	Rājagṛha or Kundagrāma.	Sumitra : Padmā- vatī.	30,000 "	Black	20 dha- nushas.	Śrāvastī
21. Neminātha, Nimi or Nimesvara.	Prāgata ...	Mithilāpurī (Mathurā).	Vijaya : Vasudhā.	10,000 "	Golden yellow.	15 dha- nushas.	Āśvini ...
22. Neminātha or Arishṭanemi.	Aparāṅga ...	Saurāṣṭra or Devāśikā.	Sudarśana : Sri Devī.	1,000 "	Black (cuma)	10 dha- nushas.	Chitra ...
23. Pārśvanātha (pl. xxiii, fig. 2).	Prāgata ...	Kāśī (Benā- res).	Aśvameha : Vāṁā.	100 "	Blue	9 hastas or hands.	Tvṣṭāśikā.
24. Mahāvīra or Vardhamāna (pls. iii, fig. 2, xxiv, fig. 2).	Do.	Kundagrāma or Kundagrāma.	Siddhārtha : Priyāṅkari (Trisālā).	72 "	Golden yellow.	7 hastas or hands.	Hastā ...

* Blue, according to Śvetāmbara version.

Tirthankaras—cont.

Dharmaviksha.	Emblem or cognizance.	Place of Nirvāṇa.	Number of Gaṇadhara or apostles; their chief.	First Ārya or leader of the female converts.	Yaksha or attendant god ¹ .	Yakshi or Yakshini or attendant goddess ¹ .	Interval to next Tirthankara.
(9)	(10)	(11)	(12)	(13)	(14)	(15)	(16)
Jambu (Eugenia jambolana).	Bear ...	Mt. Parivānāth or Sammetādikha.	55; Mandara.	Dhara.	Shamukha Kartikeya.	Vairōpi or Vairātyā (Śv. Vidyā).	9 sāgaras.
Alaka (Isomeria alaka).	Bear (falcon according to others).	Do.	50; Yama.	Padma.	Patila ...	Anantamati (Śv. Anukūṭa).	4 sāgaras.
Dadhivara (Cissampelos).	Vajra-danda (thunderbolt).	Do.	43; Ariṣṭa.	Arthadīva.	Kinnara.	Mānas (Śv. Kandar-pā).	3 sāgaras, less by 2 paṇas.
Nandi (Cervus tinnis).	Deer (tortoise according to others).	Do.	36; Chakra-yakha.	Suchi ...	Kimpurakha (Śv. Garuḍa).	Mahāmānas (Śv. Nirvāṇa).	1 paṇa.
Bhilaka tree.	Goat ...	Mt. Parivānāth.	35; Samba.	Dimoli.	Gandharva.	Vijaya or Jaya (Śv. Sālā).	1 paṇa, less by 6,000 crores years.
Mango tree.	Fish (Śv. Nandiyavarta diagram).	Do.	30; Kumbha.	Rakshina.	Kendra (Śv. Yakshendra or Yakshet).	Ajita (Śv. Ushiripi or Dhanā).	1,000 crores, less 6,584,000 years.
Aśoka tree.	Water pot or jar.	Do.	28; Alhika-shaka.	Randhamaṭi.	Kesava ...	Aparijita Valrotya Dhanapapalya.	54 lakhs years.
Champakā (Michelia champaka).	Tortoise ...	Do.	18; Malli.	Pashpa-vati.	Vasava ...	Bahurūpi Naraḍattā.	9 lakhs years.
Bakula (Miconia polystachya).	Blue water-lily...	Do.	17; Śubha.	Anila.	Etirakoti.	Chāmasati Gāndharī.	5 lakhs years.
Vetasa.	Conch ...	Mt. Girnar.	11; Varsadatta.	Vaksha-dina.	Sarvāna (Śv. Gomadha).	Kāśhmasatini or Dharma-Devī. (Śv. Adhika).	84,000 years.
Dhātaki (Griseola dentata).	Serpent on the seat and seven snake-hoods over his head.	Mt. Parivānāth.	10; Aryadina.	Pashpa-chida.	Dhanapendra or Parivayakha.	Padmavati ...	250 years.
Śāla, or teak tree.	Lion ...	Pāṇipuri.	11; Indrabhūti.	Chandrabala.	Mānaga ...	Siddhāyini or Siddhāyika.

¹ The iconography of Yakshas and Yakshis is dealt with separately (pp. 196-212).

ŚĀSANADEVATĀS.—The names of the Yakshas and the Yakshīs or Yakshīṇīs are given in the table against the particular Tirthaṅkaras with whom they are associated. In the Jaina purāṇas legends are given accounting for these associations. These Yakshas and Yakshīṇīs are called the Śāsanadevatās of the Tirthaṅkaras by Hemachandra (twelfth century A.D.),¹ the celebrated author of two works on Jaina iconography and mythology, the Abhidhānachintāmaṇi and the Trishashṭiśālākā-purusha-charitra from which I have drawn for my study. As these Śāsanadevatās form almost the whole of the Jaina pantheon and include such Brahmanical divinities as have found a place in it they receive elaborate treatment at the hands of Hemachandra, which gives his work a special value to students of Jaina iconography for they are important “not only on their own account, but because they help to identify the statues of the Jinas.” The account given by Hemachandra is strictly the Śvetāmbara version and differs so much from the Digāmbara version current in South India that given images designed according to one version they cannot always be recognized from the description found in the other. Hemachandra discusses each Śāsanadevatā under convenient heads such as name, colour, vāhana, hands and the emblems in them, and other particular features.

The Digāmbara version that is known at Tiruparuttikupram is the one current in the Kanarese districts of the Madras Presidency, for the temple priest, who was asked by me to recite the dhyāna-ślokas or meditation-verses on these Śāsanadevatās, poured out a volley of verses in Kanarese. As he is a Tamilian I asked if he knew Kanarese to which he replied that it did not matter, he was only concerned in getting these verses by rote for there was much merit accruing out of memorising them—indeed it was his duty to do so.

It thus appears that no Tamil version is known and that apparently this Kanarese version is the only one extant here. It agrees closely with the iconographic notes given by Burgess in the Indian Antiquary, vol. xxxii, pp. 461-3. On comparing it with the Śvetāmbara version given by Hemachandra, however, several points of difference appear. It is therefore necessary to give both the versions side by side, but in doing so we have refrained from going into the details of the Śvetāmbara version as our main concern is to concentrate on the Digāmbara. The difference is not only in the details of name, emblems and objects held in the hands but also in the attitudes of the figures. The Śvetāmbara admits of such variety that it is a relief to find in the Digāmbara that there is much greater uniformity in attitude, etc.

Before proceeding to details it is necessary to indicate the features that are common to all these Śāsanadevatās. All have head-dresses, high and tapering, that resemble the karaṇḍa-makuta known to the Hindu iconographer. All are seated in the lalita-pose, i.e., with one leg down and the other tucked up on the seat (āsana) in front. They are naked up to the waist, disclosing the navel; the Yakshīṇīs are sometimes clad with the right arm and shoulder bare. All except the first Yaksha, Gomukha who has a cow's face, have earrings in the ears of the Hindu patra-kunḍala type which is associated with

¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. LVI, p. 72.

Hindu devīs and inferior gods. All the Yakshiṇīs have generally more than two hands except Siddhāyini, the Yakshiṇī of the last Tīrthaṅkara, who has usually two hands.

In the following summary of the iconography¹ of the Śāsanadevatās (Yakshas and Yakshīs or Yakshiṇīs) the Digambara version is the one in Kanarese which has just been mentioned. The Śvetāmbara version is taken from Hemachandra's works mentioned above. These versions have been supplemented from two palm-leaf manuscripts in the possession of the temple priest at Tiruparuttikūṅgam, one without any title and the other having the title "Yaksha-Yakshī-lakṣhaṇa", both in a badly moth-eaten condition. They are referred to below as numbers (i) and (ii), respectively.

And luckily the bronze images (utsava-vigrahas) of the temple representing some of the Śāsanadevatās, which the temple priest very kindly permitted me to photograph, are illustrated in this bulletin itself (plates xxxi-xxxv), so that our information on the subject is not only further supplemented but also receives confirmation in most places. Description of the temple images is necessarily brief and is given at the end of the respective items.

Gomukha (Yaksha of the first Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Of golden colour. Head of a cow or ox. Seated on an āsana with the left leg hanging down and the right tucked up on the seat in front.* Four arms; the upper right with a rosary, lower right showing *abhaya*²; upper left with axe, lower left with pomegranate fruit (mātulaṅga). The bull is his cognizance even as it is for his Tīrthaṅkara. It may either be engraved on the seat or shown as a separate vāhana.

Śvet.—Of golden colour. Right hands rosary and *varada*²; left hands with a citron and noose (pāśa). An elephant is his vāhana.

(i) In agreement with (ii).

(ii) Of golden colour, with the head of an ox, and with four arms, carrying in them axe, citron (bīḷāpura), rosary and showing the varada-hasta. Carries the dharmachakra on his head. The bull is his vāhana.

Chakreśvari (Yakshiṇī of the first Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Gomukha. Has 16 arms, one right showing abhaya and the corresponding left in the kaṭaka pose, another right and the corresponding left resting on lap, and the rest with weapons of war. Garuḍa is her vāhana or cognizance.

¹ It has been necessary to refer to several well-known poses (mudrās). A brief description of these will be found on pp. 17-18 of "Catalogue of the South Indian Hindu metal images in the Madras Government Museum" [Bulletin, Madras Government Museum (N.S.) G.S. 1 (2)].

² There appears to be some confusion in the use of the terms abhaya and varada by the Jains. While the Digambaras assign these to any hand, the Śvetambaras, as we gather from Hemachandra's works, assign the varada always to the right hand. From this it has been deduced that "apparently, the Jain use of these two terms is just the opposite of the Buddhist and the Hindu" (Ind. Ant., Vol. LVI, p. 72), or, "that in the case of the Śvetambaras, at least, the very ordinary right hand position, usually called abhaya-hasta may also be on the left side." So far as the Digambaras are concerned there is no confusion, for from what I could gather they understand the terms much in the same manner as Hindus do. The varada and abhaya might thus be expected in any hand (cf. Varadarāja, Pūṇya, Śrinivāsa).

Śvet.—Also called Apratichakrā. Golden in complexion; rides a Garuḍa and has eight arms; right hands varada, arrow, chakra and noose; left hands vajra or thunderbolt, bow, chakra and elephant-goad.

(i) Golden in colour. Has three eyes and twelve arms: śakti, vajra, discus in eight hands, one in each, varada and padma. Garuḍa is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Twelve arms. Thunderbolt in two hands, one in each, discus in eight hands, one in each, citron (bijāpura), and varada. Garuḍa is her vāhana.

Mahāyaksha (Yaksha of the second Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Dark in colour. Seated on a snake. Has eight arms with weapons of war in six of them, like sword, daṇḍa, goad, axe, trident, discus, the seventh (the front right) with lotus and the eighth varada. Elephant is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Colour dark. Has four heads and eight arms. Right arms, hammer, rosary, pāśa and varada; left arms, citron, goad, spear and abhaya. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Dark colour. Eight arms: sword, lotus, discus, trident, varada, elephant-goad, stick or staff and axe. Serpent is his vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Four heads and eight arms: discus, sword, trident, staff, lotus, axe, goad and varada. Elephant is his vāhana.

Rohiṇī (Yakshini of the second Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with her right leg down and left tucked up in front. Has four arms; upper arms with a chakra in each; lower right abhaya, and lower left kaṭaka. A stool or seat is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Ajitabala or Ajitā. Seated on an iron seat. Golden yellow in colour. Has four arms; right varada and noose; left citron, and goad.

(i) Red colour (kunkuma). Has four arms: thunderbolt (vajra), elephant-goad, dart or dagger (śaṅku), lotus. Crocodile (makara) is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: varada, abhaya, conch, discus. Sits on a metal seat.

Trimukha (Yaksha of the third Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Śyāma in colour. Seated with left leg down and right tucked up in front. Has three faces and six arms: right arms, trident, noose or vajra, abhaya; left arms, sword, goad, book? or closed but with a tendency to show the palm outwards. Peacock is his symbol.

Śvet.—Dark in colour, with three faces, three eyes and six arms: right arms, mongoose, mace and abhaya; left arms, citron, wreath of flowers and rosary. Peacock is his vāhana.

(i) Dark-blue in colour (śyāma). Has six arms: sword, shield, dagger (kattī), discus, trident and staff. His vāhana is an active monkey (vīramarkata).

(ii) Dark-blue (śyāmala) in colour. Has three heads, three eyes, and six arms: discus, sword, staff, trident, elephant-goad, a weapon called satkīrtika. Peacock is his vāhana.

Prajñapti (Yakṣinī of the third Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg down and right tucked up in front. Has six arms: right arms, axe, sword, abhaya; left arms, noose, chakra, kaṭaka. Haṁsa or duck is her vāhana.

Śvet.—Called Duritārīh. Her colour is gaura or fair-white. Has four arms: right, varada, rosary; left, abhaya, serpent. Her vāhana is a ram.

(i) Dark-blue in colour (śyāma). Has two arms: varada and lotus. Horse is her vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has six arms: crescent or half-moon, axe, fruit, varada. The contents of the remaining two arms are not given. A bird is her vāhana.

Yakṣeśvara (Yaksha of the fourth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg down and right tucked up in front. Has four arms: right arms, sword, abhaya; left, shield, bow. A spear or arrow leans on the right shoulder. Elephant is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Called also *Yakṣaṇḍyaka*¹. Dark in colour. Has four arms: right, citron, rosary; left, mongoose, goad. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Blue in colour. Has four arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow. Elephant is his vāhana.

(ii) Dark-blue in colour (śyāma). Has four arms: arrow furnished with a heron's feathers (kaṅkapatra), bow, sword and shield. Elephant is his vāhana.

Vajraśṛīṅkhala (Yakṣinī of the fourth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg hanging down and right tucked up in front. Has four arms: right, rosary, abhaya; left, snake, kaṭaka. Haṁsa is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Kalikā. Dark in colour. Seated on a lotus which is also her cognizance. Has four arms: right, varada, noose; left, snake and goad.

(i) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has four arms: discus, water-jar (kamaṇḍalu), varada, lotus. Monkey is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: varada, fruit, noose, rosary. Haṁsa is her vāhana.

Tumburu (Yaksha of the fifth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg down and right tucked up in front. Has four arms: upper arms with snakes; lower right abhaya, lower left kaṭaka. Garuḍa is his cognizance.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has four arms: right, varada, spear; left, mace, noose. Garuḍa is his vāhana.

(i) Golden colour. Has four arms: sword, shield, thunderbolt, fruit. Lion (raja kaṇṭhīra) is his vāhana.

(ii) Dark-blue in colour (śyāma). Has four arms: snake in two hands, one in each, fruit, varada. A snake serves as his yajñopavīta. Lion? (gōdadhīpati) is his vāhana.

¹ Abhidhānaśāntī, v. 41.

Purushadattā (Yakshinī of the fifth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, chakra, vajra; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Elephant is her vāhana.

Śvet.—Called Mahākālī. Golden yellow in colour. Has four arms: right, varada, noose; left, citron, goad. Lotus is her symbol.

(i) Golden colour. Has two arms: abhaya, goad. Dog is her vāhana.

(ii) Has four arms: discus, thunderbolt, fruit, varada. Elephant is her vāhana.

Kusuma (Yaksha of the sixth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg hanging down and right tucked up in front on the seat. Has four arms: upper, spear, shield; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Bull is his symbol.

Śvet.—Blue in colour. Has four arms: right, abhaya (or varada), fruit; left, mongoose, rosary. Deer is his vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: a lotus or turner's lathe (kuṇḍa), shield, varada, abhaya. A spotted deer (kṛishṇasāra) is his vāhana.

(ii) Dark-blue in colour (śyāma). Has four arms: varada, abhaya, lance (kuṇṭa), shield. Deer is his vāhana.

Manovegā or Manogūptī (Yakshinī of the sixth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Kusuma. Has four arms: upper, sword, shield; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Horse is her vāhana.

Śvet.—Called Śyāmā or Achyutā. Dark in colour. Has four arms: right, varada, noose; left, bow, abhaya. Her vāhana is a man.

(i) Red colour (kuṅkuma). Has four arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow. Deer (kṛishṇasāra) is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: varada, shield, sword, fruit. Horse is her vāhana.

Varanandī (Yaksha of the seventh Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Kusuma. Has two hands only: right, trishūla; left, rod or cane. Lion is his symbol.

Śvet.—Called Mātāṅga. Blue in colour. Has four hands: right, śrī-phala (bīlva fruit), noose; left, not known. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Also called Mātāṅga. Blue in colour. Has two arms: trident, staff. Lion is his vāhana.

(ii) Called Mātāṅga. Dark colour (asita). Has four arms: trident, staff, lotus, lotus. Lion is his vāhana.

Kālī (Yakshinī of the seventh Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the Yaksha Varanandī. Has four arms: upper, trident, bell; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Bull is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Śāntā. Golden in colour. Has four arms: right, rosary, varada; left, abhaya, trident. Elephant is her vāhana.

(i) Deep dark colour (kāla). Has four arms: añjali (by two hands), varada, rosary. Peacock is her vāhana.

(ii) White colour. Has four arms: bell, trident, fruit, varada. Bull is her vāhana.

Śyāma or Vijaya (Yaksha of the eighth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Varanandī. Has four arms: lower right abhaya, rest not known. Hansa is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Vijaya. Green in colour. Has two arms: right, chakra; left, hammer. Hansa is his vāhana.

(i) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has four arms: whip (kaśā), noose, varada, elephant-goad. Dove is his vāhana (kapotavara).

(ii) Also called Vijaya. Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has three eyes, and four arms: fruit, rosary, axe, varada. Dove is his vāhana.

Jvālāmālīnī (Yakshi of the eighth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Vijaya, the Yaksha. Has eight arms: right, trident, arrow, snake, abhaya; left, vajra, bow, snake, kaṭaka. Flames issue out of her makūṭa as in Hindu Kālī. Bull is her emblem.¹

Śvet.—Called Bhṛīkuṭī. Yellow in colour. Has four arms: right, sword, hammer; left, tablet, axe. Swan (maṇḍala) is her vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has eight arms: discus, crocodile (makara), flag, arrow, bow, trident, noose, varada. Buffalo is her vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has eight arms: arrow (kūṇḍa), discus, trident, varada or fruit, bow, noose, fish (jhaṣa), shield. Buffalo is her vāhana.²

There is a bronze image of Jvālāmālīnī in the temple at Tiruparuttikunṅam (pl. xxxv, fig. 1) which is carried in procession (utsava-vigraha). The Yakshi is represented as seated in the lalita pose on a padmāsana placed on the back of a bull, with a kirita-makūṭa framed as it were by an aureole of flames, and showing the seated figure of Chandra-prabha in its front, adorning her head. She has eight arms that carry the following: upper row, chakra and conch; second row, bow and arrow; third row, sword and shield; fourth or the bottom row shows abhaya and varada. A yajñopavīta can be seen on her body.

Ajita (Yaksha of the ninth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated as Śyāma. Has four arms: right, rosary, abhaya; left, spear, pomegranate fruit. Tortoise (kūrma) is his cognizance.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has four arms: right, rosary, citron; left, mongoose, spear. Tortoise is his symbol.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: whip (kaśā), staff, trident, axe. Tortoise is his vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has four arms: fruit, rosary, trident, varada. Tortoise is his vāhana.

¹ M.E.R., 1929, p. 88:—In the Ādinātha temple at Ponnūr in the North Arcot District there are a few well-made metallic images (utsava-vigrahas), carried in procession, of Chandra-prabha, Pārivanātha, Mahāvīra, Śāhubalin, etc., and of minor deities like Jvālāmālīnī. The image of Jvālāmālīnī is represented here "with an aureole of flames framing its head, and with eight arms carrying the characteristic attributes in the following order: right series—chakra, abhaya, gadā, and a śūla; and the left series—śaṅkha, khṛjā, kapāla and a gustaka(?)".

² Cf. Hindu Mahāśūrasamardīni.

Mahākālī or Ajitā (Yakshinī of the ninth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated as Yaksha Śyāma. Has four arms: upper, rod, fruit or vajra; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Has no cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Sutārā or Sutārakā. Gaura or fair-white in colour. Has four arms: right, rosary, varada; left, water-pot, goad. Bull is her vāhana.

(i) Golden colour. Has four arms: sword, fruit, thunderbolt, lotus. Lion (rāja-kaṇṭhīra) is her vāhana.

(ii) Black in colour. Has four arms: Sarvajña? (probably a weapon or jñāna-mudrā, the pose of knowledge), hammer (mudgara), fruit, varada. Tortoise is her vāhana.

Brahmeśvara or Brahmā (Yaksha of the tenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated as Yaksha Śyāma. Has three eyes, four heads and eight arms: six arms with weapons like mace, sword, shield, rod, and the remaining two abhaya and kaṭaka. Lotus-bud is his cognizance.

He is often confused with the Hindu Aiyanār¹, whose other names such as Hariharaputra and Śastā are also in vogue among the Jains. Though he is the special attendant of Śītalānātha he is also represented in the form in which we recognize Aiyanār, either as seated with an elephant below him as in fig. 2 of plate v, or as mounted on horseback, with four hands, holding whip, reins, sword and shield. In the former he is two-handed, the right holding a crooked stick called śeṇḍu and the left stretched in ease with its elbow resting on the left knee, which is placed vertically on the seat and is secured by a yoga-band going between the left leg and the waist, the attitude suggested by the figure being one of serenity and inner contemplation.² Sometimes Pūrṇā and Pushkalā, the two goddesses that Hindu iconography speaks of as the wives of Aiyanār are associated with this Yaksha. Yet another form of this Yaksha which conclusively proves his confusion with the Hindu Aiyanār is supplied by a group of three bronze images used in worship in the temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam (pl. xxxi, fig. 1). The three images represent Brahmadeva or Brahmeśvara and Pūrṇā and Pushkalā. The Yaksha stands in the middle on a padmāsana in the sama-bhaṅga pose, wearing a jaṭā-makuṭa on his head, makara-kunḍalas in his ears, and a yajñopavīta on his chest besides other ornaments serving a decorative purpose. He has four arms, the upper two holding a goad and noose and the lower two the śeṇḍu and fruit. Pūrṇā stands on his right on a padmāsana in the tribhaṅga pose bending towards him and wearing besides other ornaments a karaṇḍa-makuṭa on her head, patra-kunḍalas in her ears, the breast-band over her breasts and a yajñopavīta across her body. Her right hand is hanging down like the tail of a cow while her left holds a lotus. Pushkalā stands on the left of the Yaksha and is similarly equipped except for a water-lily that she holds in her right hand, makara-kunḍalas in her ears and the absence of the breast-band. Both

¹ Cf. "Catalogue of the South Indian Hindu Metal Images in the Madras Government Museum", p. 14—Madras Museum Bulletin, New Series, General Section, Vol. I, part 2.

² Pl. v, fig. 2.

Pūrṇa and Pushkalā are provided by the temple priest with the tāli, symbol of marriage-tie, round their necks. Given this group and a group of Aiyanār with consorts according to the Hindu canon it will be difficult to say which is which.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has three eyes, four faces and eight arms: right, citron, hammer, noose, abhaya; left, mongoose, mace, goad, rosary. He is seated on a lotus.

(i) White in colour. Has eight arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, axe, thunderbolt, noose, abhaya, or varada. Lion is his vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has four heads and eight arms: sword (aṭṭahāsa), shield, varada, arrow, bow, staff, axe, thunderbolt. Red lotus is his vāhana.

Mānavī (Yakṣiṇī of the tenth Tīrthāṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Yaksha Śyāma. Has four arms: upper, rosary, fish; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. No cognizance is given.

Śvet.—Called Aśokā. Of bean-colour. Has four arms: right, noose, varada; left, fruit, goad. Her vāhana is a cloud.

(i) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has two arms: varada, lotus. Crocodile (makara) is her vāhana.

(ii) Dark? (hisatvarṇa?) in colour. Has four arms: fish (jhaṣa), rosary, garland, varada. Black boar or pig (sūkara) is her vāhana.

Īśvara (Yaksha of the eleventh Tīrthāṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated as the Yaksha Śyāma. Has four arms: right, kaṭaka and abhaya; left, triśūla and rod. A crescent is attached to the outer side of the makuta. Nandī or the bull is his vāhana. Surely in this Yaksha we can recognize Śiva who carries the moon on his head and who rides on Nandī.

Śvet.—Called also Yakṣeṭ. White in colour. Has three eyes and four arms: right, citron, mace; left, mongoose, rosary. Bull is his vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: arrow, bow, trident, staff. Bull is his vāhana.

(ii) Colour not mentioned. Has three eyes, four arms: fruit, abhaya, trident, staff. Bull is his vāhana.

Gaurī (Yakṣiṇī of the eleventh Tīrthāṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Īśvara. Has four arms: right, water-pot, abhaya; left, varada rod. The bull (Nandī) is also her vāhana. The crescent is also attached to the outer side of her makuta. Surely this is Gaurī or Pārvatī or Umā, the wife of Śiva.

Śvet.—Called Mānavī. Fair white (ganra) in colour. Has four arms: right, varada hammer; left, axe and goad. Her vāhana is a lion. Surely the lion is the vāhana assigned to Ambikā or Devī in Hindu iconography.

(i) White in colour. Has two arms: whip (kaśā), elephant-goad. Haimsa is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: lotus, hammer? (munira, probably mudgara) vessel (kalāṣa), varada. Deer is her vāhana.

Kumāra (Yaksha of the twelfth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Īśvara. Has three heads and six arms: right, noose, spear, abhaya; left, vajra?, bow, varada. His cognizance is the peacock. This is the Hindu Subrahmaṇya, also called Kumāra.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has four arms: right, citron, arrow; left, mongoose, bow. Haṁsa is his vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: arrow, bow, fruit, staff. Haṁsa is his vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has three heads and six arms; contents of arms not mentioned. Haṁsa is his vāhana.

Gāndhārī (Yakshinī of the twelfth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Kumāra. Has four arms: upper, 2 mirrors; lower right abhaya, lower left, rod or cane. Serpent is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Chandrā or Chandā. Dark in colour. Has four arms: right, varada, spear; left, flower, mace. Horse is her vāhana.

(i) Dark blue (śyāmā) in colour. Has two arms: varada, pose indicative of knowledge (jñāna-mudrā). Haṁsa is her vāhana.

(ii) Green in colour. Has four arms: varada, pestle (mṛsala), lotus, lotus. Makara is her vāhana.

Shaṇmukha or Kārttikēya (Yaksha of the thirteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with the right leg hanging down and the left tucked up in front on the seat. Has six heads and twelve hands, one of the latter showing abhaya. The cock (kukkuṭa) is his cognizance. This is the same Shaṇmukha, the six-headed form of Subrahmaṇya known to the Hindu.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has twelve arms: right, fruit, chakra, sword, noose, rosary; left, mongoose, discus, bow, tablet, goad and abhaya. Peacock is his vāhana.

(i) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has twelve arms: sword, shield, axe, varada in eight arms, and pose of knowledge (jñāna-mudrā). Monkey is his vāhana.

(ii) Fair in colour. Has twelve arms: axes in eight arms, one in each, shield, sword, staff, and rosary. Peacock is his vāhana.

Vairoṭī or Vairāṭya (Yakshinī of the thirteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Shaṇmukha. Has four arms: upper, snakes; lower right, abhaya, lower left, kaṭaka. A spear leans against her right shoulder. The serpent is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Viditā. Yellowish-green in colour. Has four arms: right, noose, arrow; left, snake and bow. Seated on a lotus which serves as her vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: arrow, bow, varada, lotus. Spotted deer (kṛishṇasāra) is her vāhana.

(ii) Green in colour. Has four arms: snakes in two arms, one in each, arrow, bow. A kind of snake (gonasa) is her vāhana.

Pātāla (Yaksha of the fourteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated as Shapmukha. Has three heads and six arms: right, rod, spear, abhaya; left, axe, noose, hook or spear. Makara or the crocodile is his emblem.

Śvet.—Red in colour. Has three heads and six arms: right, lotus, sword, noose; left, mongoose, tablet, rosary. Crocodile (makara) is his vāhana.

(i) Red (kuṅkuma) in colour. Has three heads, and six arms: whip (kaśā), elephant-goad, fruit, varada, trident, noose. Makara is his vāhana.

(ii) Red in colour. Has three heads and six arms: arrow, elephant-goad, plough, trident, fruit, lotus. A snake surrounds his head. Makara is his vāhana.

Anantamati (Yakshi of the fourteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Pātāla. Has four arms: upper, arrow, bow or crook; lower right abhaya, lower left kaṭaka. Hansa is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Aṅkuṣā. Fair-white (gaura) in colour. Has four arms: right, sword, noose; left, tablet, goad. Lotus is her vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has two arms: varada, lotus. Peacock is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: bow, arrow, fruit, varada. Hansa is her vāhana.

Kinnara (Yaksha of the fifteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has three heads and six hands: right, rosary, rod, abhaya; left, śakti, spear, mālā or garland or kaṭaka. Fish is his emblem.

Śvet.—Dark-red in colour. Has three heads and six arms: right, citron, club, abhaya; left, mongoose lotus, rosary. Tortoise is his vāhana.

(i) Red (kuṅkuma) colour. Has six arms: *mudga*¹ or a kind of kidney-bean, discus, thunderbolt, rosary, varada, elephant-goad. Fish is his vāhana.

(ii) Red like lotus. Has six arms: discus, hammer or club (mudgara), thunderbolt, elephant-goad, varada, rosary. Fish is his vāhana.

Mānasi (Yakshi of the fifteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: right, goad, spear or arrow; left, flower or chakra, hook or bow. Lion is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Kandarpā. Fair-white (gaura) in colour. Has four arms: right, goad, nīlotpala; left, abhaya, lotus. Fish is her vāhana.

(i) Yellow in colour. Has four arms: arrow, bow, varada, lotus. Spotted deer (kṛishnasāra) is her vāhana.

(ii) Red like coral (vidrumaprabhā). Has six arms: lotus, bow, varada, elephant-goad, arrow, water-lily (utpala). Tiger is her vāhana.

Kimpurusha (Yaksha of the sixteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, chakra, śakti; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Bull is his emblem.

¹ What was probably intended is mudgara, i.e., hammer or club.

Śvet.—Called Garuḍa. Has the head of a (?) boar. Black in colour. Has four arms: right, citron, lotus; left, mongoose, rosary. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Blue in colour. Has four arms: thunderbolt, lotus, discus, lotus or abhaya or varada. Garuḍa is his vāhana.

(ii) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has four arms: thunderbolt, fruit, discus, lotus. Boar is his vāhana.

Mahāmānast (Yakṣiṇī of the sixteenth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, dart, chakra; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Peacock is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Nirvāṇī. Fair-white (gaura) in colour. Seated on a lotus. Has four arms: right, nīlotpala, book; left, water-pot, lotus. Lotus is her cognizance or vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has four arms: sword, shield, lance (śakti), noose. Crocodile (jalacharagraheshu grāhavaram) is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: fruit, sword, discus, varada. Peacock is her vāhana.

Gandharva (Yaksha of the seventeenth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, snakes; lower, spear or arrow, crook or bow. Deer is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Black in colour. Has four arms: right, noose, varada; left, citron, goad. Haima is his vāhana.

(i) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has four arms: arrow, bow, noose, noose. A car? (ratha-nandana) is his vāhana.

(ii) Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has four arms: noose in two, bow, arrow. Bird is his vāhana (pakshi-yāna).

Vijayā or Jayā (Yakṣiṇī of the seventeenth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, chakras; lower, abhaya, sword. Peacock is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Balā. Fair-white (gaura) in colour. Has four arms: right, trident, citron; left, a stick or rod of iron four cubits long (muṣaṇḍhū), lotus. Peacock is her vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has two arms: varada, blue water-lily. Haima is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: conch, sword, discus, varada. A black boar is her vāhana.

Kendra (Yaksha of the eighteenth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has six heads and twelve arms: one pair lying in his lap; another pair, abhaya, kaṭaka; a third pair, crook and snake; the rest with other emblems not specified. Peacock is his vāhana.

Śvet.—Called Yakshendra or Yakshet. Dark in colour. Has three eyes, six faces and twelve arms: right, citron, arrow, sword, hammer, noose, abhaya; left, mongoose, bow, shield, trident, goad, rosary. Conch is his emblem or vāhana.

(i) Also called Jaya. Blue in colour. Has two arms: trident, staff. His vāhana is said to be Ambārāvana, the meaning of which is not clear.

(ii) Colour and vāhana not mentioned. Has twelve arms: bow, thunderbolt, noose, hammer or club (mudgara), elephant-goad, varada, arrow, lotus, fruit, ladle (srukā), garland, rosary.

Ajitā (Yakshiṇī of the eighteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, snakes; lower, abhaya, śakti. Haṁsa is her emblem.

Śvet.—Called Dhārīṇī or Dhanā. Blue in colour. Seated on a lotus. Has four arms: right, citron, nīlotpala; left, lotus, rosary. Lotus is her vāhana.

(i) Also called Vijayā. Dark-blue (śyāma) in colour. Has six heads and twelve arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, discus, elephant-goad, staff, rosary, varada, blue water-lily, abhaya, fruit. Bull is her vāhana.

(ii) Called Vijayā. Golden colour. Has four arms: snake, thunderbolt, deer, varada. Haṁsa is her vāhana.

Kṛbera (Yaksha of the nineteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has four heads and eight arms: right, sword, javelin, dagger, abhaya; left, arrow, bow or crook, double-pointed javelin or mace, kaṭaka or with some other weapon. Elephant is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Of rain-bow colour. Has four heads and eight arms: right, axe, trident, abhaya, varada; left, citron, spear, hammer, rosary. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Red (kuṅkuma) in colour. Has four heads, eight arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, fruit, axe, varada and śaṇḍa-mudrā?. Elephant is his vāhana.

(ii) Red in colour. Has eight arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, lotus, staff, noose, varada. Elephant is his vāhana.

Aparājītā (Yakshiṇī of the nineteenth Tirthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four hands: upper, sword, shield; lower right abhaya, lower left kaṭaka. Haṁsa is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Vairotīyā or Dharaṇapriyā. Black in colour. Seated on a lotus which is also her vāhana. Has four arms:—right, lotus, varada; left, citron, spear.

(i) White in colour. Has two arms: varada, maddar flower (satara). Fox is her vāhana.

(ii) Green in colour. Has four arms: fruit, sword, shield, varada. A spider or a fabulous animal called Śarabha (aṣṭāpada) is her vāhana.

Varuṇa (Yaksha of the twentieth Tirthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has seven heads and four hands: right, flower (lotus), abhaya; left, kaṭaka, shield. He has no cognizance.

Śvet.—White in colour. Has three eyes, four heads with matted hair (jaṭās) and eight arms: right, citron, mace, arrow, spear; left, mongoose, rosary, bow and axe. Bull is his vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has five heads, eight arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, fruit, noose, varada, staff. Makara is his vāhana.

(ii) White in colour. Has three eyes and four arms: sword, varada, shield, fruit. Bull is his vāhana.

Bahurūpī (Yakṣiṇī of the twentieth Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper, sword, shield; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Her cognizance is a snake.

Śvet.—Called Naradattā. Fair (gaura) in colour. Seated on a throne. Has four arms: right, varada, rosary; left, citron, trident. The throne is perhaps her vāhana.

(i) Goddess of learning (vidyā-yakṣī). Has two arms: sword, shield. Peacock is her vāhana.

(ii) Golden colour. Has four arms: shield, sword, fruit, varada. Black snake is her vāhana.

Bhṛikuṭī (Yaksha of the twenty-first Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has four heads and eight arms: right, sword, dart, flower, abhaya; left, shield, crook or bow, arrow and kaṭaka. Bull is his vāhana or cognizance.

Śvet.—Golden colour. Has three eyes, four heads and eight arms: right, citron, spear, hammer, abhaya; left, mongoose, axe, thunderbolt, rosary. Bull is his cognizance.

(i) Also called Vidyut-prabha. Red (kunkuma) in colour. Has four heads and eight arms: sword, shield, arrow, bow, discus, elephant-goad, varada, mango-flower (sahakāra-pushpa). Haṁsa is his vāhana.

(ii) Red in colour. Has four heads and eight arms: shield, sword, arrow, bow, discus, lotus, elephant-goad, varada. Nandī or bull is his vāhana.

Chāmūṇḍī (Yakṣiṇī of the twenty-first Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the Yaksha Bhṛikuṭī. Has four arms: right, rosary, sword or abhaya; left, rod, kaṭaka. Makara or the crocodile is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Gāndhārī. White in colour. Has four arms: right, sword, varada; left, citrons. Haṁsa is her vāhana.

(i) White in colour. Has two arms: varada, lotus. Haṁsa is her vāhana.

(ii) Of terrible form. Green in colour. Has four arms: sword, staff, shield, rosary. Makara is her vāhana.

Sarvāṅga (Yaksha of the twenty-second Tīrthaṅkara)—

Diḡ.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has three heads and six arms: right, śakti, flower, abhaya; left, rod, axe, kaṭaka. A small temple is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Called Gomedha. Dark in colour. Has three heads and six arms: right citron, axe, chakra; left, mongoose, trident, spear. A man is his vāhana.

(i) Dark-blue in colour. Has three heads, six arms: whip (kaśā), hammer or club (mudgara), fruit, axe, varada, staff. Rides on a man.

(ii) Called Gomedha. Dark-blue in colour. Has four arms: abhaya, elephant-goad, noose, varada. Carries in his head a dharmachakra or "wheel of the law." A flower serves as his cognizance.¹ Elephant is his vāhana.

Answering fairly well this description (ii) is a bronze image in the temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam (pl. xxxii, fig. 1) which superficially resembles Hindu images of Chandraśekhara. It stands in the śamabhaṅga pose on a padmāsana, the lower part of which reveals the form of a bull, meant to be the Yaksha's vāhana. This is a deviation from the text which speaks of the elephant as the vāhana. The apparent resemblance of this figure to the Hindu Chandraśekhara whose vāhana is a bull, is obvious. The arms carry the prescribed emblems. A kirita-makuta surmounted by a dharmachakra and with the figure of the Tīrthāṅkara Neminātha in its front adorns the head. Other features worth noting are patra-kunḍalas and makara-kunḍalas in both the ears, a yajñopavīta and the exquisite drapery of the under-garment. The temple priest informed me that this image and that of Dharma-Devī to be described below, also of the temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam, are the oldest in the whole temple collection of utsava-vigrahas. To me these two appear to date from about 1600 A.D.

Kūshmāṇḍinī (Yakshinī of the twenty-second Tīrthāṅkara)—

Dig.—Also called Dharma-Devī. Seated like the Yaksha. Has four arms: upper arms, sword, chakra; lower resting on the lap and supporting two children, her sons, seated one on each thigh. A lion is her cognizance. It is believed that the lion represents her husband.²

Śvet.—Called also Āmbika. Golden in colour. Has four arms: right, noose and cluster of mangoes; left, child, goad. Her vāhana is a lion.

(i) Dark-blue in colour. Has two arms: fruit, varada; lion (rājakañṭhitrava) is her vāhana.

(ii) Also called Dharma-Devī. Seated with her two sons on her lap, one on each thigh. Has four arms: two support the sons, one left arm holds a bunch of mango flowers, the corresponding right is extended towards the lion that serves as her vāhana.

The bronze image of this Yakshinī in the temple at Tiruparuttikunṇam (pl. xxxii, fig. 3) represents her as standing, slightly bent, on a padmāsana, the lower part of which reveals the lion, her vāhana. Her right hand holds a lotus bud while her left hangs down. A jaṭā-makuta showing the seated figure of the Tīrthāṅkara Neminātha in front adorns her head; makara-kunḍalas adorn her ears. Other features worth noting are the yajñopavīta, the exquisite drapery of the under-garment and an artificial (removable) tāli, the last mentioned provided by the temple priest.

¹ I take the flower to be cognizance, though the text has it as a vāhana or vehicle, for elephant is also referred to as vāhana.

² See above, p. 158.

Dharaṇendra or Pārsvayaksha (Yaksha of the twenty-third Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has a single head over which rise five snake-hoods. Has four arms: upper, snakes; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. A tortoise is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Dark in colour. Has the head of an elephant and a serpents' hood for an umbrella. Has four arms: right, citron, serpent; left, mongoose, serpent. Tortoise is his vāhana.

(i) Blue in colour. Has four arms: water-vessel (kalāśa), noose, goad and fruit. Tortoise is his vāhana.

(ii) Black in colour (śyāma). Has four arms: noose, goad, fruit, water-lily? (utphulla-dhara?) or water-vessel? (kalāśa?). Tortoise is his vāhana. A snake is seen over his head.

In the temple at Tiruparuttikupṇam there is a bronze image of Dharaṇendra (pl. xxxiii, fig. 1) representing him standing in the sama-bhaṅga pose on a padmāsana resting as it were on a tortoise, the whole supported by a bhadrāsana. The Yaksha wears a kirīṭa-makuṭa presenting the seated figure of his Tīrthaṅkara in its front and surmounted by a cobra with five hoods. He has makara-kundalas in his ears and wears a yajñopavīta, while his arms, of which there are four, hold the goad and noose in the upper two and a fruit (pomegranate) in the lower left while the lower right presents the abhaya. The image, though modern looking, is highly interesting as also another of the same Yaksha (pl. xxxii, fig. 2) which is at present in household worship, being in the possession of the temple priest's son. The latter is similar to the former except that its lower left hand indicates the varada instead of holding the fruit and that the tortoise underneath the padmāsana is not shown.

Padmāvatī (Yakshiṇī of the twenty-third Tīrthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated with left leg down and right tucked up in front. Has four arms: upper, axe, thunderbolt; lower, abhaya, kaṭaka. Has five snake-hoods (śeṣha-phaṇā) over her makuṭa. Haṁsa is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Golden colour. Has four arms: right, lotus, noose; left, fruit, goad. Her vāhana is a kukkūṭa-sarpa.

Monier Williams translates the term kukkūṭa-sarpa, whose other equivalents are kukkūṭābha and kukkūṭāhi as "a kind of snake compared to a fowl perhaps from having a crest or comb."

(i) Yellow in colour. Has three eyes and four arms: goad, noose, varada and lotus. Kukkūṭa-sarpa is her vāhana.

(ii) Red in colour. Has three eyes and four arms: noose, goad, fruit, varada. Snake is her vāhana and a snake is seen over her head.

There are three bronze images of this Yakshiṇī (pls. xxxi-xxxiii) in the temple at Tiruparuttikupṇam, two of them standing and the third sitting on padmāsanas. One of the standing ones (pl. xxxii, fig. 2) belongs to the temple priest's son and is therefore in household worship. The other (pl. xxxiii, fig. 3) represents the Yakshī as wearing a kirīṭa-makūṭa surmounted by a cobra with five hoods and showing the seated figure of the Tirthaṅkara in its front, makara-kunḍalas in her ears, and as carrying in her upper two arms goad and noose and in her lower two a water-lily (utpala) and a fruit, probably pomegranate, while her cognizance, the kukkūṭa-sarpa can be seen in front of the lower part of the padmāsana. The image in private ownership (pl. xxxii, fig. 2) is much similar to this but shows abhaya in the lower right and wears patra-kunḍalas in the ears while the kukkūṭa-sarpa is not in evidence. The sitting one (pl. xxxi, fig. 2) is similar to the latter except that its right leg rests on the kukkūṭa-sarpa while the cobra over the makūṭa is bigger.

Mātaṅga (Yaksha of the twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like the previous Yaksha. Has four arms: upper arms are lifted up in worship and are applied to the sides of his makūṭa; lower right, abhaya; lower left, open with its fingers hanging down and the palm inwards. Elephant is his cognizance.

Śvet.—Black in colour. Has two arms: right, citron; left, mongoose. Elephant is his vāhana.

(i) Blue in colour. Has six arms: dharmachakra, whip (kaśā), noose (pāśa), thunderbolt (vajra), staff (daṇḍa), and varada.

Answering this description there is a bronze image at Tiruparuttikunram (pl. xxxiv, fig. 1) which shows this Yaksha as standing in the sama-bhaṅga pose on a padmāsana, the lower part of which shows the carving of a lion which is intended to be his cognizance¹. The Yaksha has six arms which are characterised by the following emblems: dharmachakra and vajra in the upper row; goad and noose in the middle row; and whip and varada in the lower one. Makara-kunḍalas adorn his ears while a kirīṭa-makūṭa showing the seated figure of the Tirthaṅkara Vardhamāna in front rests on his head.

(ii) Green in colour (mudga-varṇa). Carries dharmachakra on his head. Has two arms: varada, pomegranate fruit. Elephant is his vāhana.

Siddhāyini or Siddhāyikā (Yakshī of the twenty-fourth Tirthaṅkara)—

Dig.—Seated like Padmāvatī. Has two hands only: right, abhaya; left, open with its fingers hanging down and the palm inwards. Haṁsa is her cognizance.

Śvet.—Green in colour. Has four arms: right, citron, lute; left, book, abhaya. Lion is her vāhana.

(i) Golden colour. Has twelve arms: sword, shield, flower, arrow, bow, noose, discus, staff (daṇḍa), rosary, varada, blue water-lily (nīlotpala) and abhaya. Garuḍa is her vāhana.

¹ All the versions are agreed in claiming for him the elephant as the vāhana or cognizance. This deviation would therefore speak for the tendency to manipulate iconographical details over and above those warranted by the canon.

Answering this description there is a bronze image of this Yakshinī in Tiruparuttikunram (pl. xxxiv, fig. 3) which represents her as standing in the samabhaṅga pose on a padmāsana, the lower part of which shows the carving of a Garuḍa, her cognizance. She wears a karaṇḍa-makuta showing the seated figure of Vardhamāna in front, on her head, patra-kunḍalas in her ears and a yajñopavīta on her body while her arms, of which there are twelve, carry the following emblems and weapons: first row of two chakra and conch, second row goad and noose, third row arrow and bow, fourth row sword and shield, fifth row water-lily or lotus and lotus, sixth and bottom row rosary and varada.

(ii) Golden colour. Has two arms.

TIRTHAṆKARAS OF THE FUTURE AGE (Bhāvikāla-Tirthaṅkaras).—The Jains believe that 24 Tirthaṅkaras will appear in the coming age, the first of them with life duration of 116 years and height of 7 cubits (hastas) and the last of them with life duration of a koti of pūrvas and height of 500 *dhanushas*¹. They are ²:

1. Mahāpadma or Padmanābha, who will appear in the Dushama Sushama age of the coming era as was seen above (p. 169).

2. Suradeva, the first of the remaining 23 Tirthaṅkaras who are to appear in the Sushama age of the coming era. Supārśva, who was an uncle of Vardhamāna and who is now in the second kalpa (heaven) will be born as this Tirthaṅkara.

3. Supārśva. Udayī, the son of Kuṇika, who is now in the third kalpa will become the third Tirthaṅkara of the coming era.

4. Svayamprabha.³ Prosthila, now in the fourth kalpa, becomes the fourth of these Tirthaṅkaras.

5. Sarvātmabhūta.⁴ Dṛḍhaketu, now in the second kalpa, will become the fifth Tirthaṅkara.

6. Devaputra.⁵ Kārttikaśreshṭha, now in the first kalpa, will become the sixth Tirthaṅkara.

7. Kulaputra,⁶ becomes the seventh.

8. *Udaṅka*⁷ becomes the eighth.

9. Prosthila, becomes the ninth.

10. Jayakīrti, will become the tenth.

11. Munisuvrata. Devakī, the mother of Kṛishṇa, now working out her karma in the eighth kalpa will become the eleventh.⁸

12. Ara,⁹ will become the twelfth Tirthaṅkara.¹⁰

¹ Trilokaśūra, v. 876.

² The list given below is taken from Trilokaśūra, vv. 872-5 and from Jayamālā.

³ The Śvetāśvara list is different. It is as follows:—

1-3 the same as in our list. 4. Svayamprabha 5. Sarvātmabhūti. 6. Devaputra. 7. Udayaprabhu. Sadākaśrāvaka, now in the twelfth kalpa becomes this Tirthaṅkara. 8. Peṭhāla, Anandaśrāvaka, now in the first kalpa, will become the eighth. 9. Peṭhāla. Sunandaśrāvaka, now in the first kalpa, will become the ninth. 10. Śataakīrti. A man named Śatakaśrāvaka, now in the third kalpa, will become the tenth.

⁴ These are some of the "elements of the Hindu influence" taken in deliberately or unconsciously by the Jains to placate Brahmanical hatred, to which we drew attention at the beginning of this paper. See above, pp. 9-10.

13. Nishpāpa,¹ will become the thirteenth Tirthaṅkara.*
14. Nishkashāya,¹ will become the fourteenth Tirthaṅkara.*
15. Vipula,² will become the fifteenth Tirthaṅkara.
16. Nirma'a,¹ will become the sixteenth Tirthaṅkara.
17. Chitrāgupta,¹ Rohiṇī, the mother of Baladeva and step-mother of Kṛishṇa, who is at present in the second kalpa, will become the seventeenth Tirthaṅkara.*
18. Samādhi-gupta,¹ will become the eighteenth Tirthaṅkara.
19. Svayambhūh,¹ do. nineteenth do.
20. Anivartaka,¹ do. twentieth do.
21. Jaya,¹ do. twenty-first do.*
22. Vimala,¹ do. twenty-second do.
23. Devapāla,¹ do. twenty-third do.
24. Anantavīrya,¹ do. twenty-fourth do.

ARHATS.

Souls that like Tirthaṅkaras are embodied and have attained omniscience, but unlike them "have not yet discarded the last vestments of the human body" are the arhats. They await going to nirvāṇa after shedding the "kārmaṇa" body. They have the following twelve chief qualities:—

1-8. The prātihāryas.³ 9. Complete freedom from any kind of harm or injury (apāyāpagamātisaya). 10. Perfect knowledge (jñānātisaya). 11. Worship by every one (pūjātisaya). 12. Supernatural characteristics of speech (vachanātisaya), which are 35 according to Hemachandra*.

* The Śvetāśvara list is different:—

12. Aśama, Kṛishṇa himself, now in the third kalpa, will become the twelfth.*
13. Nishkashāya, Harasātyaki, the guru of Rāvaṇa, now in the fifth kalpa, will become the thirteenth.*
14. Nishpūlaka, Baladeva, the brother of Kṛishṇa, now spending his time in the sixth kalpa will become the fourteenth.*
15. Nirmama, Sulasa, a man now in the fifth kalpa, will become the fifteenth.
16. Chitrāgupta.*
17. Sumādhi, Revatī, a woman, now in the twelfth kalpa, will become the seventeenth.
18. Saivaranātā, a lady of the name of Subalā in her past birth and later a chaste woman of the name of Magavati, who is now in the eighth kalpa, will become the eighteenth.
19. Vaiśākhara, Dvaipāyana, who set fire to Dvārakā, and is now one of the Agnikumāras will become the nineteenth.*
20. Vijaya. Kuṇḍika, who in his past birth was named Javakumāra and a relative of Kṛishṇa, is now in the twelfth kalpa, and will be born as the twentieth.*
21. Mallinātā or Malyadeva. Nārada, a layman in the time of Rāvaṇa of Hindu mythology, who is now in the fifth kalpa, will become the twenty-first Tirthaṅkara.
22. Devajina. Atthada, a layman or ascetic in his past birth, who is now in the twelfth kalpa, will become the twenty-second.
23. Anantavīrya. Amara, now in the ninth Graiveyaka, becomes the twenty-third.
24. Bhadrajiṇa. Svayambuddha, now in the highest of all the devalehas (Sarvārthasiddhi) will become incarnate as the twenty-fourth and last.

* These are some of the "elements of Hindu influence" taken in deliberately or unconsciously by the Jainas to placate Brahmanical hatred, to which we drew attention at the beginning of this paper. See above, pp. 9-10.

¹ See above, p. 190.

² See his Abhidhānachandimāṇi.

ĀCHĀRYAS.

Āchāryas are the heads of groups of saints or sages. They have among others 36 qualities, which can be classified under five heads:—

I. Twelve kinds of penance (tapas)—1. Not taking food (anāśana). 2. Eating less than necessary (anavāpta). 3. Vrata-parisainkhyāna, a pledge taken by a saint on the way to receive food, that he will accept it only if a particular thing is fulfilled, otherwise go without it. This pledge, of course, is secret and extempore. 4. Renunciation and suppression of taste (rasaparityāga) and of tasteful things. Six such tasteful things are milk, ghee, curds, sugar, salt and oil. 5. Sitting or sleeping alone (vivikta-śayyāsana). 6. Self-mortifications (kāya-kleśa), not by inflicting injuries on the body but by refusing it many comforts and necessities. These six are called external tapas. The remaining six which constitute internal tapas are—7. Penance to expiate sins or faults committed knowingly or otherwise (prāyaścitta). 8. Zeal in the pursuit of right faith, knowledge, conduct and proper tapas or restraint, and also loving obedience to superiors (vinaya). 9. Service in the manner of attending on old, infirm or sick ascetics and elders (vaiyāpritya). 10. Studying the scriptures (svādhyāya). 11. Detachment to the body (vyutsarga). 12. Meditation (dhyāna).

II. Ten kinds of duties or *dharma*s—1. The highest type of endurance, complete annihilation of feelings of anger, etc., and a ready spirit of forgiveness of all injuries, real or imaginary (uttama-kṣama). 2. Gentleness or humility (mārdava). 3. Frankness or frank straightforwardness (ārjava). 4. Truth in mind, speech and action or conduct (satya). 5. Purity and freedom from sinful feelings such as avarice, hatred, etc. (śaucha). 6. Restraint (saṁyama), which is of two kinds: restraint of the senses, and practice of compassion towards six kinds of living beings, viz., (a) mineral life which is the lowest, (b) aquatic life, (c) fire-life, (d) air-life, (e) vegetable-life, and (f) animal-life. 7. Asceticism (tapas) mainly of the various kinds enumerated under the first heading. 8. Benevolence (tyāga). This term is also generally interpreted as gift of knowledge by means of lessons and precepts when applied to the āchāryas as here, and sometimes as renunciation of all worldly connections as applied to all ascetics. 9. Beggary or development of the feeling, "nothing is mine," more probably the latter (ākiñchana). 10. Chastity (brahmacharyā). Jaini translates it as "the devoted contemplation of the self by the soul" which could be attained "by securing self-concentration through celibacy and other means of freeing the mind from the bondage of worldly care and attachment."¹

III. Six kinds of daily duties called āvāśyakas—1. Cultivating in slow degrees and peacefully a spirit of indifference to worldly things with a view to attain eventually tranquillity of mind and thereby equanimity of soul (sāmāyika). 2. Worshipful bowing before perfect souls and their images (vandana). 3. Singing the praises of perfect souls and other holy beings (stuti). 4. Repentance for sins and faults already done which have "attached themselves to the soul" (pratikramaṇa). 5. Zeal to avoid such faults adhering to the soul in future (pratyākhyāna).¹ Sometimes svādhyāya, or studying scriptures, is given in the place of pratyākhyāna. 6. Detachment from the body and practice of self-contemplation (kāyotsarga).

¹ See Outlines of Jainism, p. 132.

IV. Five kinds of exercises (āchāras)—practice with a view to (1) induce strong and steady faith (darśanāchāra), (2) increase knowledge (jñānāchāra), (3) improve daily life or conduct (chāritrāchāra), (4) to become a great ascetic (tapāchāra), and (5) to increase power, which is here the power of one's inner self (vīryāchāra).

V. Three kinds of restraint—(1) restraint of mind (mano-guṇṭi), (2) of speech (vachana-guṇṭi), and (3) of body (kāya-guṇṭi).

A list of āchāryas, who were historically important and pre-eminently great, is available from a palm-leaf manuscript (without heading) in the temple of Vardhamāna, wherein the subject is dealt with under the caption Āchāryapraśasti or "Praise of Āchāryas." After Vardhamāna attained nirvāṇa propagation of the religion that he had founded was taken up first by the apostles and next by their successors who thus established a continuous line of pontiffs. While the earlier ones knew all the teachings of Vardhamāna comprised in the twelve āṅgas, fourteen pūrvas,² etc., the later ones were successively less and less learned in them till the time came when they were masters of but a fraction of what Vardhamāna taught the world. These pontiffs of the Jaina faith are—

Eleven Gaṇadharas or apostles, that explained things in accordance with Vardhamāna's teachings—

1. Śrī Gautama.	5. Maurya.	9. Akampana.
2. Vāyubhūti.	6. Mandara.	10. Achelaka.
3. Agnibhūti.	7. Putra.	11. Prabhāsa.
4. Sudharma.	8. Maitreya.

Five Pañcha Sarvāṅga-Dharas, who were masters of all the āṅga literature and the pūrvā literature³—

1. Viṣṇu.	3. Aparājita.	5. Bhadrabāhu (I).
2. Nandimitra.	4. Govardhana.

Eleven Pūrvā-Dharas, masters of all the fourteen kinds of pūrvā literature—

1. Viśākha.	5. Nagasena.	9. Buddhila.
2. Prosthila.	6. Siddhartha.	10. Gaṅgadeva.
3. Kshatriya.	7. Dhṛitishēṇa.	11. Dharmasena.
4. Jaya.	8. Vijaya.

Five Āṅga-Dharas, masters of eleven *āṅgas*⁴—

1. Nakshatra.	3. Pāṇḍu.	5. Kāṁsa.
2. Jayapāla.	4. Dhruvasena.

¹ Roughly pratikramana and pratyākhyāna correspond to two of the seven principles (śatras) of Jainism, nirjara which means the falling away of kārmic matter from the soul, and rasāvara, which means karma-check, i.e., checking the inflow of kārmic matter.

² See below, p. 219.

Four Āchārāṅga-Dharas, masters of one aṅga, the āchāra-aṅga—

- | | |
|----------------|---------------------|
| 1. Subhadra. | 3. Bhadrabāhu (II). |
| 2. Yaśobhadra. | 4. Lohachārya. |

From here follow propagators of the Jaina faith who had not perfect knowledge of even one aṅga. But the line of pontiffs, was never broken.

Mukhya-Pañchamakāla-Dharma-pravartakas, principal propagators of dharma of the fifth age (dushama), through which we are now passing—

- | | | |
|-----------------------|--------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1. Arhadbali. | 14. Nēmichandra. | 23. Śiva-Gupti-Bhaṭṭāraka. |
| 2. Māghanandi. | 15. Prabhāvachandra. | 24. Samantabhadra. |
| 3. Pushpadanta. | 16. Vāsavachandra. | 25. Śivakōṭi. |
| 4. Umāchārya. | 17. Bālachandra. | 26. Pūjya-pāda. |
| 5. (H)elāchārya. | 18. Meghachandra. | 27. Akalaṅka. |
| 6. Kundakunda. | 19. Sarvabhūtahita-Bhaṭṭāraka. | 28. Nishkalaṅka. |
| 7. Griddhrapiñchchha. | 20. Tribhuvana-Svayambhū-Bhaṭṭāraka. | 29. Anantavīrya. |
| 8. Mayūrapīñchchha. | 21. Śruta-Sāgara-Bhaṭṭāraka. | 30. Vidyānanda. |
| 9. Dharasena. | 22. Samādhi-Gupti-Bhaṭṭāraka. | 31. Māṇikyānanda. |
| 10. Virasena. | | 32. Kaviparameshthi. |
| 11. Jinasena. | | 33. Vardhamāna. |
| 12. Rāmasena. | | 34. Guṇabhadra. |
| 13. Jinachandra. | | |

Jaini's list of sages¹ is critical and has been drawn after a careful comparison of the various pañṇāvalis recording the extant traditions concerning the sages. It is worth quoting here for comparison with the list of sages culled from the temple manuscripts given above:—

Serial number of saint.	Name.	Number of years that he was head of Jainism.	From and to the year of Lord Mahāvīra, i.e., after Mahāvīra's Nirvāṇa—527 B.C.
-------------------------	-------	--	--

I

3 Kevali (for 62 years).

1	1. Gautama Svāmi ...	12	1-12 A.V.
2	2. Sudharmāchārya ...	12	13-24 "
3	3. Jambu Svāmi ...	38	25-62 "

II

5 Śruta Kevali (100 years).

4	1. Viṣṇudhara ...	14	63-76 A.V.
5	2. Nandimitra ...	16	77-92 "
6	3. Aparājita ...	22	93-114 "
7	4. Gauvardhana ...	19	115-133 "
8	5. Bhadrabāhu I ...	29	134-162 "

¹ Umāsvāmi, Tattvārthadhigamaśāstra, pp. ix-x.

Serial number of saints.	Name.	Number of years that he was head of Jainism.	From and to the year of Lord Mahāvira, i.e., after Mahāvira's Nir- vāṇa—527 B.C.
-----------------------------	-------	--	---

III

II Ten-Pūrvi (181 years).

9	1. Viśakhāchārya ...	10	163-172 A.V.
10	2. Proshṭilāchārya ...	19	173-191 "
11	3. Kshatriyāchārya ...	17	192-208 "
12	4. Jayasenāchārya ...	21	209-229 "
13	5. Nāgasenāchārya ...	18	230-247 "
14	6. Siddārthāchārya ...	17	248-264 "
15	7. Dhṛitishenāchārya ...	18	265-282 "
16	8. Vijayasenāchārya ...	13	283-295 "
17	9. Buddhiliṅgāchārya ...	20	296-315 "
18	10. Devāchārya ...	14	316-329 "
19	11. Dharmasenāchārya ...	14	330-343 "

IV

5 Eleven-Aṅgins (123 years).

20	1. Nakshatrāchārya ...	18	344-361 A.V.
21	2. Jayapalakāchārya ...	20	362-381 "
22	3. Pāṇḍavāchārya ...	39	382-420 "
23	4. Dhruvasenāchārya ...	14	421-434 "
24	5. Kāmsāchārya ...	32	435-466 "

V

4 Minor Aṅgins (99 years).

25	1. Subhadrāchārya ...	6	467-472 A.V.
26	2. Yaśobhadrāchārya ...	18	473-490 "
27	3. Bhadrabāhu II ...	23	491-513 "
28	4. Lohāchārya ...	52	514-565 "

VI

5 One-Aṅgins (118 years).

29	1. Arhadbali ...	28	566-593 A.V.
30	2. Maghanandi ...	21	594-614 "
31	3. Dharasena ...	19	615-633 "
32	4. Pushpadanta ...	30	634-663 "
33	5. Bhutabali ...	20	664-683 "

After Bhūtabali, there was no one who had perfect knowledge of even one āṅga. But the line of Jaina pontiffs was never vacant, and the list of Jaini continues as follows:—

Name.	Became Pontiff on	Remained Pontiff for	A.V. from and to
1. Guptigupti	... Phālguna, Sudi 14, Śaka 26	... 10 years.	683-693 A.V.
2. Maḡhanandi	... Āśvina, „ 14 „ 36	... 4 „	694-697 „
3. Jinachandra	... Phālguna, „ 14 „ 40	... 9 „	698-706 „
4. Kundakunda	... Pausa Badi 8 „ 49	... 52 „	707-758 „
5. Umāsvāmi.	... Kāntika Badi 8 „ 101	... 40 years, 8 days.	759-799 „

As Mr. Jaini admits, the dates that he has assigned to these sages and pontiffs tentatively are not to be relied upon as absolutely correct, for different dates are given to them in other pañcāvalis resulting in a discrepancy of a few years which “is inevitable.” The dates found in Jaini's list must therefore be taken to be rough and approximate. The sequence of the tradition regarding these saints is however universally acknowledged and may be relied upon thoroughly.

There is also another palm-leaf manuscript in the temple in which a list of these sages (muniśvarar varalāru) is found. According to it numbers 17 and 18 of Jaini's list¹ are Buddhila, Gaṅgadeva; No. 29 is Arhadbali; Vṛishabhāchārya, and Uchchāraṇāchārya take the place of Guptigupti, Maḡhanandi, and Jinachandra of Jaini's list.

Ārya-Devis.—From yet another palm-leaf manuscript entitled “Puṇyāhavachana” preserved in the temple the following list is available regarding the Ārya-devīs, or leaders of the female converts to Jainism, associated with the twenty-four Tirthankaras², whose position corresponds to that of the Āchāryas in our classification of the souls:—

1. Brāhmī.	9. Ghoshavati.	17. Bhavaśrī.
2. Prāgabjā.	10. Dharāṇaśrī.	18. Kūrmaśrī.
3. Dharmāśrī.	11. Dhāraṇā.	19. Buddhishenā.
4. Paurushenā.	12. Varasenā.	20. Pushpadanta.
5. Anantamati.	13. Padmaśrī.	21. Maṅginī.
6. Rātrishenā.	14. Sarvaśrī.	22. Yakshaśrī.
7. Mīnaśrī.	15. Suvratā.	23. Sulochanā.
8. Varuṇaśrī.	16. Harishenā.	24. Chandanā.

¹ See Introduction of Jaini to Umāsvāmi's Tattvārthasūtra, vii-8.

² See above, table on p. 187.

UPĀDHYĀYAS.

Upādhyāyas are teaching saints who have twenty-five qualities inasmuch as they have to study and teach Jaina scripture consisting of the eleven aṅgas and fourteen pūrvas.¹

SĀDHUS.

All ascetics or saints are sādhus. They have twenty-eight chief qualities among several other subsidiary ones, which can be arranged under five broad heads:—

- I. Restraint of the five senses (touch, taste, smell, sight and hearing).
- II. Six daily duties or āvaśyakas specified under āchāryas.²
- III. Seven other duties—1. Not to bathe. 2. To sleep on the ground. 3. Nakedness. 4. Pulling the hair on the face and the head with one's own hands (loch). 5. Eating very little food and that once a day. 6. Desisting from the use of tooth-brushes. 7. Receiving food in the hollow of the hands held together and eating it standing (cf. paintings Nos. 35, 47, 82).
- IV. Five saṃitis or religious observances:—1. To walk observing carefully all the things and insects, if any in the way, $3\frac{1}{2}$ yards ahead at least (Iryū). 2. To speak relevantly and that in a manner prescribed by the scriptures (Bhāṣā). 3. To partake of pure food, not however specially prepared for the person concerned (Eṣhaṇā). 4. To handle very carefully the things in the possession of the sādhū such as water-bowl (kamaṇḍalu), scriptures, peacock-brush, etc. (Ādāna-nikshepaṇa). 5. To select with great care places where the sādhū should answer calls of nature, etc. (Pratishṭhāpana or Pārishṭhāpanikā).
- V. Five great vows or austerities (mahā-vratas)—1. "Not to cause, or tend to cause, pain or destruction to any living being, by thought, speech, or conduct" (ahimsā). 2. Truth in thought, speech and deed (satya). 3. To take nothing unless offered (asteya). 4. Chastity (brahma-charyā) as in the case of āchāryas. 5. Renunciation of all worldly things and concerns (parigrahyāga).

NON-ASCETIC GREAT SOULS.

The non-ascetic class of the human mundane souls as opposed to the ascetic class described above can be divided into Ordinary and Great souls. Such human beings as ¹ The Aṅgas are:—1. Āchāra-aṅga, 2. Sūtrakṛita-aṅga, 3. Sthāna-aṅga, 4. Samavāya-aṅga, 5. Vyākhyā-prajñapti, or Bhagavati or Pivāka-prajñapti, 6. Dharma-kathā-aṅga, also called Jñātyidharma-kathā-aṅga, 7. Upāsā-sādhyayana-aṅga, 8. Antakṛd-daiḥ-aṅga, 9. Anuttaregaṣṭhaka-daiḥ-aṅga, 10. Pratna-vyākaraṇa-aṅga, and 11. Vipāka-sūtra-aṅga. Sometimes a twelfth aṅga is added to these which is called Dṛishṭi-pravāda-aṅga.

The 14 Pūrvas or Pūrvagatas as they are called are:—1. Utpāda-pūva, 2. Agrāyanīya-pūva, 3. Vṛyānuvāda-pūva, 4. Ātināsti-pravāda-pūva, 5. Jñāna-pravāda-pūva, 6. Satya-pravāda-pūva, 7. Ātma-pravāda-pūva, 8. Karma-pravāda-pūva, 9. Pratyākhyāna-pūva, 10. Vidyānuvāda-pūva, 11. Kalyāṇa-vāda-pūva, 12. Prāṇa-vāda-pūva, 13. Kriyā-vilāsa-pūva, and 14. Triloka-bindu-sāra-pūva. For details of the contents of the aṅgas and the pūrvas see Jaini, Outline of Jainism, pp. 135-145; Jaina Gazette, 1905, pp. 133-140; Nemichandra, Gommat-sāra, Jiva-kāṇḍa; Tattvārthasūtra by Umāsvāmī, edited by J. L. Jaini, 1920, pp. 29-31 and 32-36.

² See above, pp. 214-215.

are great in life and have superior status, attainments and the like are called pre-eminently great souls. They are—

TWELVE CHAKRAVARTINS OR CHAKRINS.—These were universal monarchs and lived during the times of the Tirthaṅkaras of the present age. All of them were golden in colour and belonged to the gotra of Kāśyapa. They are—

1. Bharata, the son of Ṛishabhadeva, the first Tirthaṅkara and therefore nearly contemporaneous with him. His height was 500 dhanushyas or bows and he lived for 84 lakhs of pūrvas. Soon after death he reached moksha.

2. Sagara of Ayodhyā, the son of Sumitra through Yaśomati and contemporaneous with Ajitanātha, the second Tirthaṅkara. His height was 450 bows and he lived for 72 lakhs of pūrvas. After death he went to moksha.

3. Maghavā, born in Śrāvastī to Samudravijaya and Bhadra, in the interval between Dharmanātha and Śāntinātha, the fifteenth and the sixteenth Tirthaṅkaras. His height was $42\frac{1}{2}$ bows and he lived for five lakhs of years. After death he went to the third heaven (kalpa), Sanatkumāra.

4. Sanatkumāra, who must be distinguished from Sanatkumāra-Indra, the Indra of Sanatkumāra, the third heaven. He was born in Hastināpura to Aśvasena and his wife Sahadevī, in the interval between Dharmanātha and Śāntinātha. His height was $41\frac{1}{2}$ bows and he lived for three lakhs of years. After death he reached the Sanatkumāra-kalpa like Maghavā.

5. Śāntinātha.
6. Kunthunātha.
7. Aranātha. } These three were both Tirthaṅkaras and Chakravartins. For their description, see pp. 192–195.

8. Subhauṃsa, son of Tārā and Kṛitavīrya. He lived in Hastināpura in the interval between Aranātha and Mallinātha, the eighteenth and nineteenth Tirthaṅkaras. His height was 28 bows and he lived for 60,000 years. After death he reached the seventh earth, or seventh hell as it is more often called, Mahātamaḥ-prabhā.

9. Mahāpadma, also called Padma or Padmanābha, son of Padmottara and Jvālā. He lived in Vārāṇasī (Benares) in the interval between Mallinātha and the next Tirthaṅkara Munisuvrata. His height was 22 bows according to Trilokasāra (verse 819), and 20 bows according to Hemachandra's Trishashṭīśālākāpurushacharitra. He lived for 30,000 years, and after death went to moksha.

10. Harishena, son of Merā and Mahāhari. He lived in Kāmpilya in the interval between Munisuvrata and the next Tirthaṅkara Naminātha. His height was according to Trilokasāra (verse 819) 20 bows, and according to Trishashṭīśālākāpurushacharitra 15 bows. He lived for 10,000 years and soon after death went to moksha.

11. Jaya, also called Jaya-sena. He was born in Rājagriha as the son of Vijaya and Vaprā in the interval between the Tirthaṅkaras Naminātha and Neminātha. His height according to the Trilokasāra was fifteen bows and according to the Trishashṭīśālākāpurushacharitra twelve bows. He lived for 3,000 years and after death went to moksha.

12. Brahmadatta, son of Chulanī and Brahma. He ruled in Kāmpilya in the interval between Neminātha and Pārśvanātha. His height was seven bows and he lived for 700 years. After death he went to the seventh hell, Mahātamaḥ-prabhā, as he had engaged in evil meditation.

NINE NĀRĀYANAS OR VĀSUDEVAS OR ARDHACHAKRINS.—They were all black in colour, and ruled over three parts of the earth and enjoyed half the power of the Chakravartins. All of them belonged to the family of Gautama, except the eighth who belonged to the Kāśyapa family. They were—

1. Triprishṭha, son of Prajāpati and Mṛigavattī. He lived in the city of Potana in the time of Śreyāmsanātha, the eleventh Tīrthaṅkara. His height was 80 bows and he lived for 84 lakhs of years. After death he went to the seventh hell.

2. Dvipriṣṭha, son of Padmā and Brahmanandana. He lived in Dvārāvattī in the time of Vāsupūjya, the twelfth Tīrthaṅkara. His height was 70 bows and he lived for 72 lakhs of years. After death he went to the sixth hell, Tamaḥ-prabhā.

3. Svayambhūh, son of Bhadrarāja and Prithvīdevī. He lived in Dvārāvattī and was a follower of Vimalanātha, the thirteenth Tīrthaṅkara. His height was 60 bows. After living for 60 lakhs of years he reached the sixth hell.

4. Purushottama, son of Soma and Sītā. He lived in Dvārāvattī in the time of Anantanātha, the fourteenth Tīrthaṅkara. His height was 50 bows and he lived for 30 lakhs of years. After death he went to the sixth hell.

5. Purushasimha, also called Narasimha, son of Śiva and Rājamṛitā. He ruled in Aśvapura in the time of Dharmanātha, the fifteenth Tīrthaṅkara. He was 45 bows tall and lived for 10 lakhs of years, after which he went to the sixth hell.

6. Purusha-puṇḍarīka, also called Puṇḍarīka, son of Lakṣmīvattī and Mahāśiras. He ruled in Chakrapurī in the interval between Aranātha and Mallinātha, the eighteenth and the nineteenth Tīrthaṅkaras, respectively. His height was according to Trilokasāra 29 bows, but according to Trishasṭīśalākāpurushacharitra 19 only and he lived for 65,000 years. After death he went to the sixth hell.

7. Purusha-datta, also called Datta or Datta-deva, son of Agnisimha and Śeshavattī. He ruled in Vārāṇasī in the interval between Mallinātha and Munisuvrata, the nineteenth and twentieth Tīrthaṅkaras, respectively. He was 22 bows high according to Trilokasāra, and 26 according to Trishasṭīśalākāpurushacharitra, and lived according to the former for 32,000 years and according to the latter for 56,000 years. After death he went to the fifth hell (Dhūma-prabhā).

8. Nārāyaṇa, in some works also called Lakṣmaṇa, son of Daśaratha and Kaikeyī (cf. the Hindu Rāma). He lived in Rājagṛīha in the interval between Munisuvrata and Naminātha, the twentieth and twenty-first Tīrthaṅkaras. His height was 16 bows and he lived for 12,000 years, after which he went to the fourth hell (Pañka-prabhā) according to Trilokasāra, and to the third hell (Vāluka-prabhā) according to Trishasṭīśalākāpurushacharitra.

9. Kṛishṇa, son of Vasudeva and Devakī. He was born in Mathurā and ruled in Dvārāvati in the time of Neminātha, the twenty-second Tīrthāṅkara, who was his cousin. His height was 10 bows and he lived for 1,000 years. After death he went to the third hell (Vāluṅka-prabhā).

NINE PRATI-NĀRĀYAṆAS OR PRATI-VĀSUDEVAS.—They were the respective foes of the nine Nārāyaṇas or Vāsudevas, and each shared with his particular foe the latter's height, period of life, and destination (hell). They fought against these foes with the chakras (discus) and perished from their own chakras which went to their foes' hands. They were—

1. Aśvagrīva, foe of Triprishṭha.
2. Tāraka, foe of Dvipriṣṭha.
3. Meraka, rival of Svayambhūḥ. In some books he is called Naraka.
4. Nisumbha, rival of Purushottama.
5. Madhukaitābha, sometimes merely called Madhu. Rival of Purushasimha.
6. Bali. In some works the next (seventh) Prati-Vāsudeva is given as the sixth and Bali is treated as the seventh. He was the rival of Purusha-puṇḍarīka.
7. Praharāṇa, sometimes called Prahlada and treated as the sixth Prati-Vāsudeva. Rival of Purusha-datta.
8. Rāvāṇa, rival of Nārāyaṇa.
- The above eight Prati-Vāsudevas moved in the sky. The ninth, Jarāsandha, to be described now, was alone a denizen of the earth like any mortal.
9. Jarāsandha, rival of Kṛishṇa.

NINE BALADEVAS OR BALABHADRAS¹.—They were all white in colour and were the half-brothers of the respective Vāsudevas. The father of each Baladeva is the same as that of the corresponding Vāsudeva, the Baladeva being the son of a co-wife. The first eight Baladevas went to moksha, while the ninth and the last (Padma) went to Brahma-kalpa from where he will come down to Bharata-kshetra and attain moksha in the coming utsarpiṇī era when Kṛishṇa becomes the Tīrthāṅkara, Amama². The Baladevas are—

1. Vijaya. In some texts he is given as the second, the second being treated as the first³. He was son of Subhadra and was of the same height as his half-brother, the Vāsudeva, Triprishṭha. He lived for 87 lakhs of years⁴.
2. Achala. In some works Achala is treated as the first Baladeva. He was the son of Bhadrā, and was of the same height as his half-brother, the Vāsudeva Dvipriṣṭha. He lived for 77 lakhs of years⁵.

¹ The four groups, viz., Chakravartins, Nārāyaṇas, Prati-Nārāyaṇas, and Baladevas were contemporaneous with the 24 Tīrthāṅkaras of the present age, forming with them a group of 63 great and spiritual persons collectively known as the Trishasṭi-Śalākā-purushas.

² See above, p. 213.

³ See Hemachandra, Trishasṭi-Śalākā-purushacharitra, p. 351.

⁴ According to Hemachandra, he lived for 75 lakhs of years.

⁵ According to Hemachandra, he lived for 85 lakhs of years.

3. Sudharma. In some works he is called Bhadra or Dharma-prabha. He was the son of Suprabha and was of the same height as his half-brother, the Vāsudeva Svayambhūḥ. He lived for 67 lakhs of years.¹

4. Suprabha, son of Sudarśanā. He was of the same height as the fourth Vāsudeva, his half-brother. He lived for 37 lakhs of years.²

5. Sudarśana, son of Vijayā. He was of the same height as the Vāsudeva, Puruṣaśiṃha. He lived for 17 lakhs of years.

6. Nandī. In some texts he is called Ānanda. Son of Vaijayantī, he was of the height of the sixth Vāsudeva, Puruṣa-puṇḍarīka. He lived for 67,000 years.³

7. Nandimitra, sometimes called Nandana. Son of Jayantī, he shared the height of his half-brother, the Vāsudeva Puruṣa-datta, and lived for 37,000 years.⁴

8. Rāma, also called Rāmachandra.⁵ Son of Aparājita, he shared the height of the Vāsudeva Nārāyaṇa, and lived for 17,000 years.⁶

9. Padma,⁷ son of Rohiṇī. He shared the height of his half-brother Kṛishṇa and lived for 1,200 years.

Besides these 63 great ones Jaina hagiology recognizes other less important classes of great souls that also find prominent places in Jaina mythology. They are—

14 Kulakaras or Manus.

24 fathers of Tirthaṅkaras } see under Tirthaṅkaras, pp. 192-195.

24 mothers of Tirthaṅkaras }

9 Nāradas.

11 Rudras.

24 Kāmādevas.

Total ... 106

FOURTEEN KULAKARAS OR MANUS. — They were wise men who arose from time to time and laid the foundation of civilization, for which reason the Jains call them saviours.

The first Manu was Pratiśruti. He is sometimes called Prati-Svāti. In his time the trees that were shedding light till then disappeared and the sun and the moon that were till then overshadowed by the lumination of the light-shedding kalpa-trees became visible. The people of the world who saw them for the first time became bewildered and were running helter-skelter when Pratiśruti came to their rescue and explained to them the significance of the two new lights. The division of day and night dates from ¹ According to Hemachandra, he lived for 65 lakhs of years.

² 55 lakhs of years according to Hemachandra.

³ 85,000 years according to Hemachandra.

⁴ 65,000 years according to Hemachandra.

⁵ A different version is obtained from Hemachandra's Tīrthāṅgīśāhāṃśa-puruṣa-śaṅkarīya which is as follows:—

8. Paama, son of Aparājita, with a life of 15,000 years.

9. Rāma. The ninth will be Rāma, son of Rohiṇī, living for 1,200 years.

⁶ 15,000 years according to Hemachandra.

his time. He was also instrumental in establishing a sort of rule approaching kingship, and offences were almost unknown as the people were simple folk, strangers to fraud and vice.

Sanmati, the second Manu, explained to the people the significance of the seasons. In his time the light-giving trees had become so feeble that even the stars appeared to the people. It was given to this Manu to define the different constellations. It was therefore said of him that he was the "first astronomer of the half-cycle."

Kshemañkara, the third Manu, taught the world the nature of animals and of men and that the latter should not imitate the former. In his time animals began to grow troublesome as, owing to changed conditions and the inactivity of the feeding-trees that were till then supplying both animals and men with food, they were forced to fend for themselves. He was also responsible for drawing a distinction between domestic and wild animals and for teaching people how to make use of the former with advantage.

Kshemandhara, the fourth Manu, advised men, who were becoming the prey of food-hunting wild animals, to protect themselves from them with the aid of stones, missiles, weapons of wood and stone and sticks.

Simañkara, the fifth Manu, was so called because he fixed the simās or boundary marks of property and proprietorship. In his time people were fighting for the individual possession of a few kalpa-trees that remained. He determined their proprietorship, assigning them to the possession of groups or communities of men.

Stmandhara, the sixth Manu, who continued the work of the former and determined the individual ownership over these kalpa-trees. The quarrels of the people over these trees had become so intense that he had to set marks on them.

Vimalavāhana, the seventh Manu, taught men how to make use of certain domestic animals like the elephant and the horse by inventing the tethering rope, the bridle and the like.

Chakshushmān, the eighth Manu, who explained to the world the nature of *bhogabhūmi*¹ and the causes for the changes in that world such as parents not dying at the birth of their progeny. Hitherto the rule in the bhogabhūmi was that parents died as soon as they gave birth to children, a rule which was necessary to restrict the number of its residents.

Yasasvān, or Yasasvin, the ninth Manu, who taught men how to regard their children as their own, how to rear them up and bless them.

Abhichandra, the tenth Manu, who made some more changes in the old order of things and taught men to play with their children and give them useful instruction. It is said that this Manu came to acquire the name Abhichandra as he was the first to play with his children in moon-light.

Chandrābha, the eleventh Manu, who also devoted his time to the betterment and proper guidance of children.

¹. See above, pp. 72, 177-178.

Marudeva, the twelfth Manu, who established state-control over all the kalpa-trees that still remained in the country and taught men among other things navigation and engineering work, as for instance, building forts, halls, steps, boats and ships. Many small hills, lakes and rivers came into existence during his time and there was rainfall for the first time, though scanty and irregular.

Prasenajit, also called Prasena-chandra, the thirteenth Manu, about whose work the Śrī Purāṇa is silent, appears to have acquired such a name owing to the fact that in his time children were first born with the prasena or amnion, the membrane in which a child is born. Prior to his time children appear not to have been born wrapped in a membrane.

Nābhi Mahārāja,¹ the fourteenth and the last Manu, is said to be the wisest of all and appears to have earned the name Nābhi from the fact that he taught men how to cut the navel chord called nābhi. He taught men how to make use of vegetables, fruits, grain and other eatables and thereby appease hunger. In his time the kalpa-trees had failed to function completely and rain and clouds became a regular feature of the world. It appears that till then the existence of kalpa-trees coupled with some other natural force prevented cloud-formation. Cultivation became a regular feature and fruit trees began to grow in abundance.² There was no need to resort to elaborate measures to check crimes, etc., as the people still continued to be very simple. The first five Manus were able to check a wrong-doer by making the exclamation, "ha"! The next five said "ma" to express their disapproval ("ma" signifies regret), and this was enough to make the culprit straight for the future. The remaining Manus added "dhik" (curse you!) to express their disapproval. But the necessity for the codification of laws, penal and otherwise, arose only in the days of Bharata, the son of Rishabhadeva, the first Tīrthaṅkara.

For 24 parents of Tīrthaṅkaras see above, pp. 192-195.

NINE NĀRADAS.—Their function is tale-bearing and as a result of this self-inflicted office they go after death to hell. Occasionally, however, they have been inclined towards dharma, for which reason they are treated as great souls. They are—

1. Bhīma , contemporaneous with the first	Vāsudeva.
2. Mahābhīma	do. second do.
3. Rudra	do. third do.
4. Mahārudra	do. fourth do.
5. Kāla	do. fifth do.
6. Mahākāla	do. sixth do.
7. Durmukha	do. seventh do.
8. Naraka-mukha	do. eighth do.
9. Adhomukha	do. ninth do.

¹ Wilson, Vishnu Purāṇa, Vol. II, pp. 100-103—Nābhi, his son Rishabhadeva and Bharata, the latter's son, find a place in the Hindu Purāṇic lists, where Nābhi is said to be the son of Agnīdra, King of Jambūdvīpa, son of Priyavrata, King of Antarvāda. Also see Ind. Ant., Vol. II, p. 135, and Ind. Ant., Vol. XXX, p. 248.

² Aṣṭāṅga Rāssarīkṣa, vol. 9, p. 259. Nābhi allotted to men the means of subsistence, viz., ati (sword), maṭi (letters, lit. ink), ṛṣiṣi (agriculture), vāṇijya (commerce), paśupālana (attendance on cattle).

It was Adhomukha-Nārada that informed Kāṁsa of the whereabouts of Kṛishṇa, when the latter was spending his boyhood in Godāvana.

ELEVEN RUDRAS OR EKĀDAŚA-RUDRAS, as they are popularly called, took to the right spiritual path, setting their hearts on the highest goal, vis., to become liberated (siddha), but left off perseverance (in repeated meditation, contemplation, etc.) after some stage. As, however, they had the right faith and had started well, they are destined to become siddhas after a few more births (bhavas). They are—

1. Bhimāvali.—In some texts he is called Bhīma-bali. He lived in the time of Rishabhadeva. His height was 500 bows, his life-period was 83 lakhs of pūrvas, and after death he went to the seventh hell.

2. Jita-śatru.—He was contemporaneous with Ajitanātha. His height was 450 bows, his life-period was 72 lakhs of pūrvas, and after death he went to the seventh hell.

3. Rudra.—He must be distinguished from the third Nārada of the same name. He lived in the time of the ninth Tirthaṅkara, Suvidhinātha; his height was 100 bows, his life-period was 2 lakhs of pūrvas, and after death he went to the sixth hell.

4. Viśālanayana.—In some texts his name is given as Viśvānala. He was contemporaneous with Śitalanātha, the tenth Tirthaṅkara; his height was 90 bows, and after living for a lakh of pūrvas he went to the sixth hell.

5. Supratishṭha.—He was living in the time of the eleventh Tirthaṅkara, Śreyāṁśanātha. His height was 80 bows and after living for 84 lakhs of years he went to the sixth hell.

6. Achala.—He was contemporaneous with the twelfth Tirthaṅkara, Vasupūjya. His height was 70 bows and his life-period was 60 lakhs of years. After death he went to the sixth hell.

7. Punḍarika.—He lived in the time of the thirteenth Tirthaṅkara, Vimalanātha. His height was 60 bows, and after living for 50 lakhs of years he went to the sixth hell.

8. Ajitandhara.—Sometimes spelt as Ajitadhara. He lived in the time of Anantanātha, the fourteenth Tirthaṅkara. His height was 50 bows and after living for 40 lakhs of years he went to the fifth hell.

9. Jitanābhi.—He lived in the time of the fifteenth Tirthaṅkara, Dharmanātha. His height was 28 bows, and his life-period was 20 lakhs of years. After death he went to the fourth hell.

10. Piṭha.—He was contemporaneous with Śāntinātha, the sixteenth Tirthaṅkara. His height was 24 bows, and after living for one lakh of years he went to the fourth hell.

11. Sātyaki.—He lived in the time of Mahāvīra, the last Tirthaṅkara. His height was seven hastas or cubits and after living for 69 years he went to the third hell.

TWENTY-FOUR KĀMA-DEVAS.—There is nothing special to note about the 24 Kāma-devas, except that some of them have to be distinguished from their namesakes occurring in other parts of Jaina mythology and iconography. They are as follows :—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Bāhubali , the brother of Bharata and one of the sons of the first Tirthaṅkara. The colossal figure at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa represents him. There is a bronze image of Bāhubali in the temple at Tiruparuttikunram (pl. xxxvi, fig. 1) which is fashioned like the colossal figure at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa. It stands on a padmāsana in the kāyotsarga pose, with arms hanging down, and answers well the description of Bāhubali given by Hemachandra ¹ . | 10. Kanaka-prabha . |
| 2. Prajāpati . | 11. Megha-prabha . |
| 3. Śrīdhara . | 12. Śāntinātha . |
| 4. Darśanabhadra . | 13. Kunthunātha . |
| 5. Prasenachandra , to be distinguished from the thirteenth Manu of the same name. | 14. Arahanātha . |
| 6. Chandravarṇa . | 15. Vijayarāja . |
| 7. Agnī-yukta . | 16. Śrīchandra . |
| 8. Sanat-kumāra , to be distinguished from the Indra of the kalpa of the same name. | 17. Nalarāja , can be compared with the Naḷa of Hindu mythology, and the hero of the Sanskrit classic Naishadha . |
| 9. Vatsarāja . | 18. Hanumān , can be compared with the monkey-devotee of Rāma of Hindu mythology. |
| | 19. Balirāja . |
| | 20. Vāsudeva , to be distinguished from the nine Vāsudevas . |
| | 21. Pradyumna , can compare with his namesake in Hindu mythology, the son of Kṛishṇa through Rukmiṇī. |
| | 22. Nāga-kumāra , to be distinguished from the Nāgakumāras , one of the ten classes of the Bhavanavāsi-devas . |
| | 23. Jivandhara . |
| | 24. Jambūsvāmī . |

Sub-human² and hellish souls³ also come under the head of mundane souls. As in Hinduism they are classified according to the various sufferings they have to undergo. There are no pre-eminently great souls among them such as are found among the human (mortal) class of the non-ascetic group of mundane souls.

DEVAS.

Among the four kinds of mundane souls, vis., human, sub-human, hellish and celestial mentioned above (p. 187) the last are the devas, so called because they have ¹ "Thinking this, proud, he stood in that very spot in kāyotsarga, his arms hanging down, like a jewelled image . . . Bāhubali, remained there alone, as if sprung up from the earth, as if fallen from the sky. Devoted to meditation, his eyes fixed on the end of his nose, motionless, the muni appeared like a sign-post . . . Both of his feet were covered with moss caused by dripping water, like the steps of a deserted village-tank . . . He was surrounded completely by creepers with a hundred branches shooting up, like a drum by leather thong. Dense clusters of reeds grew up and around him, . . . His feet were surrounded by serpents, like anklets, that had left the ant-hill near his feet. See Trisheshāśālikāpurnashācharitra, pp. 323-5.

² See above, p. 187, under cosmology for details.

³ Ibid.

shining constitutions and the following eight heavenly acquisitions:—(1) power to make their bodies very small (aṇimā), (2) power to assume any immense dimension (mahimā), (3) power to make their bodies light (laghimā), (4) power to make them heavy (garimā), (5) power to assume any kind of forms as well as any number of bodies at one time (sakamā), (6) power to control others (vaśitva), (7) overlordship, i.e., power by which they can show their superiority over others (īśitva), (8) power to act as they chose (prākāmya).

They have fluid or changeable (vaikriyika) bodies¹ which they can change at will. The deva-body has no flesh, blood and bones, and knows neither sweating nor excretions; it is ever bright and glorious like "a cloud shot with the shining glory of a rising or setting sun."

There are four broad orders or groups of devas and they are—

1. Bhavanavāsi or residential devas (see p. 171).
2. Vyantara or peripatetic devas (see p. 171).
3. Jyotishka or stellar devas (see p. 182).
4. Vaimānika or heavenly devas (see pp. 183-184).

Each order or group has generally ten grades and they are—

1. Indra, of supreme authority, like the king of the land. This grade includes a sub-grade, that of the Prati-Indra, whose position will correspond to that of the deputy of Indra.

2. Sāmānika, not so authoritative as Indra but still powerful like teacher or father.

3. Trayastrīṃśa, so called because the devas coming under this grade are 33 in number. Their position will correspond to that of minister, priest or princes of the common land.

4. Pārishad, like courtiers.

5. Ātmarakṣa, like body-guards.

6. Lokapāla, like the police and other protectors of the people.

7. Anika, corresponds to the army.

8. Prakīrṇaka, like the people, i.e., villagers and townsmen.

9. Abhiyogya.—The devas that came under this grade formed themselves into conveyances as horse, lion, bullock, swans, etc., for the other grades of devas.²

10. Kīlbishika, like the servile or lowest castes.

The Vyantaras and Jyotishkas do not have the Trayastrīṃśa and Lokapāla grades.

The Bhavanavāsi, Vyantara, Jyotishka devas and the Vaimānikas of the first two heavens (to be described below) have bodily sexual enjoyment like human beings.

BHAVANAVĀSI-DEVAS.—The Bhavanavāsi—devas are of ten classes, and they are.—

1. Asura-kumāra, with a crest-jewel cognizance (chihna).

2. Nāga-kumāra, with a snake hood cognizance.

3. Suparna-kumāra, with a garuḍa bird cognizance.

¹ In Jainism mundane souls have always at least three bodies:—(1) Kāmaṇa body or the body made up of kārmic matter which changes according to the intensity or mildness of the motives and actions we are doing by means of mind, speech and body, (2) Taṇuja body, luminous or electric body, which is co-extensive with the kārmic body, (3) Andarika body or physical body.

² According to Hemachandra they were like slaves.

4. Dvīpa-kumāra, with an elephant cognizance.
5. Udadhi-kumāra, with a makara cognizance.
6. Vidyut-kumāra, with a powder-flask cognizance.
7. Stanita-kumāra, with a thunderbolt cognizance.
8. Dik-kumāra, with a lion cognizance.
9. Agni-kumāra, with a vessel containing fire as his cognizance.
10. Vāta-kumāra, with a horse cognizance.

They are all called kumāras or youngsters because their lives and actions are like those of playful youths (kumāras). All the Bhavanavāsi-devas live in the first earth, Ratna-prabhā,¹ the Asura-kumāras alone living in the pañka-bhāga and the other classes living in the khara-bhāga. The thought-colours (leśyas) of the Bhavanavāsi-devas are black, indigo, grey and yellow. Their minimum age is 10,000 years while their maximum is as follows:—

One sāgara for Asura-kumāras; 3 palya for Nāga-kumāras; $2\frac{1}{2}$ palya for Suparṇa-kumāras; 3 palya for Dvīpa-kumāras; and $1\frac{1}{2}$ palya for the remaining six classes.

The Asura-kumāras are 25 bows (dhanus) high and the other kumāras are 10 bows high. There are 20 Indras, two for each of the 10 divisions of the Bhavanavāsi-devas. They are arranged as follows:—

Chamara and Vairochana are the two Indras of the Asura-kumāras. Bhūtānanda and Dharaṇānanda are the Indras of the Nāga-kumāras. Veṇu and Veṇudhāt are the Indras of the Suparṇa-kumāras; Pūrṇa and Vaśiṣṭha² of the Dvīpa-kumāras; Jalaprabha and Jalakānta of the Udadhi-kumāras; Ghosha and Mahāghosha of the Vidyut-kumāras; Harisheṇa and Harikānta of the Stanita-kumāras; Amitagati and Amitavāhana of the Dik-kumāras; Agniśikhi and Agnivāhana of the Agni-kumāras; Velamba and Prabhañjana of the Vāta-kumāras.

Chamara often fights with Saudharmendra; Bhūtānanda with Veṇu. From Vairochana onwards the enmity is between the alternating Indras, as for instance between Vairochana and Dharaṇānanda and so on.

VYANTARA-DEVAS.—There are eight classes of these devas:—

1. Kinnara, with the āsoka tree as cognizance.³
2. Kiṃpurusha, with the chāmpaka as cognizance.
3. Mahoraga, with the nāga tree as cognizance.
4. Gandharva, with the tuṃburu tree as cognizance.
5. Yaksha, with the banyan tree as cognizance.
6. Rākshasa, with the kaṇṭa tree⁴ as cognizance.
7. Bhūta, with the tulasī plant as cognizance.⁵
8. Pīśācha, with the kadamba tree as cognizance.

Some of the Vyantara-devas live in the innumerable oceans and continents of the middle world.⁶ The Rākshasas live in the pañka-bhāga of Ratnaprabhā, while the other seven classes live in the khara-bhāga of the same earth.

¹ See above, p. 171 for details.

² Avāśiṣṭha according to Hemachandra.

³ Here the trees, though they are the distinguishing marks, are spoken of as chaitya-taru. See Trilokaśāstra, v. 253.

⁴ Kāṇṭhāśoka tree according to Hemachandra.

⁵ Śulasa tree according to Hemachandra.

⁶ See above, pp. 171, 179 under cosmology for details.

The maximum age of the Vyantara-devas is a little over one palya while the minimum is 10,000 years. Their height is 10 bows (dhanus). There are 16 Indras for the whole order, two for each class, each with his own deputy or Prati-Indra. The Indras are arranged as follows:—

Kinnara and Kimpurusha are the Indras of the Kinnara class, Satpurusha and Mahapurusha of the Kimpurusha class, Mahākāya and Atikāya of the Mahoraga class, Gītārati and Gītayaśas of the Gandharva class, Mañibhadra and Pūrṇabhadra of the Yaksha class, Bhīma and Mahābhīma of the Rākshasas, Surūpa and Prati-rūpa¹ of the Bhūtas, and Kāla and Mahākāla of the Pisāchas. Each Indra has two principal consorts (vallabhikā).

Each class of Vyantara-devas is subdivided as follows:—

Kinnara has 10 subdivisions—1. Kimpurusha, 2. Kinnara, 3. Hṛdayaṅgama, 4. Rūpapālī, 5. Kinnara-kinnara, 6. Anindita, 7. Manorama, 8. Kinnarottama, 9. Ratipriya and 10. Jyeshtha.

Kimpurusha has 10 subdivisions—1. Purusha, 2. Purushottama, 3. Satpurusha, 4. Mahapurusha, 5. Purushaprabha, 6. Atipurusha, 7. Maru, 8. Marudeva, 9. Marutprabha and 10. Yaśasvān.

Mahoraga has 10 subdivisions—1. Bhujaga, 2. Bhujāṅgaśālī, 3. Mahākāya, 4. Atikāya, 5. Skandhaśālī, 6. Manohara, 7. Aśanijaya, 8. Mahāśvarya, 9. Gambhīra and 10. Priyadarśin.

Gandharva has 10 subdivisions—1. Hāha, 2. Hūhū, 3. Nārada, 4. Tumburu, 5. ? 6. Kadamba, 7. Vāsava, 8. Mahāsvara, 9. Gītārati and 10. Gītayaśas.

Yaksha has 12 subdivisions—1. Mañibhadra, 2. Pūrṇabhadra, 3. Śailabhadra, 4. Manobhadra, 5. Bhadraka, 6. Subhadra, 7. Sarvabhadra, 8. Mānusha, 9. Dhanapāla, 10. Surūpa-yaksha, 11. Yakshottama and 12. Manohara.

Rākshasa has seven subdivisions—1. Bhīma, 2. Mahābhīma, 3. Vighnavināyaka², 4. Udaya, 5. Rākshasa, 6. Rākshasārākshasa and 7. Brahmarākshasa.

Bhūta has seven subdivisions—1. Surūpa, 2. Prati-rūpa, 3. Bhūtottama, 4. Prati-bhūta, 5. Mahābhūta, 6. Prati-chchanna and 7. Ākāśabhūta.

Pisācha has 14 subdivisions—1. Kūshmāṇḍa, 2. Rakshas, 3. Yakshas, 4. Sammoha, 5. Tāraka, 6. Aśuchi, 7. Kāla, 8. Mahākāla, 9. Śuchi, 10. Satalaka, 11. Deha, 12. Mahādeha, 13. Tushṇika and 14. Pravachana.³

JYOTISHKA-DEVAS.—There are five classes of them:—1. Suns, 2. Moons, 3. Planets, 4. Constellations and 5. Scattered stars.⁴

¹ Aprati-rūpa according to Hemachandra.

² Corresponds to the Hindu Gaṇeśa.

³ According to Hemachandra the Vyantaras are divided as follows:—In the first 100 yajamas of Ratnaprabha, with the exception of 10 above and 10 below, i.e., in 80 yajamas, there are 8 classes of Vyantaras: Aprajāptikas, Pañchaprajāptis, Rishivādītas, Bhūtavādītas, Krandītas, Mahākrandītas, Kūshmāṇḍas, Pachakas. The two Indras in these classes are respectively, Sannibhita and Samāna; Dhātṛi and Vidhātṛika; Rishi and Rishipāla; Iḍvara and Mahāiḍvara; Suvatsaka and Vidāla; Hāsa and Hāsarati; Śveta and Mahāśveta; Pachaka and Pachakādhipa—Trishashīlālākṣapurāṇa-charitra, p. 383.

Mrs. Stevenson calls the above subdivisions Pānasyantaras and assigns them the lower regions. See Heart of Jainism, p. 270.

⁴ See above, pp. 182-183 under cosmology for details.

Their Indra is the sun and Prati-Indra the moon. Their maximum age is a little over one palya, while their minimum is $\frac{1}{8}$ palya. The suns and moons have each 16,000 Abhiyogika-devas, the planets 8,000, the constellations 4,000 and the scattered stars 2,000.

VAIMĀNIKA-DEVAS.—They are of two classes:—1. Kalpopapannas or Kalpavāsi-devas, born in the kalpas which are 16 in number¹ and 2. Kalpātittas, born beyond the kalpas, i.e., in the nine Graiveyakas, nine Anudīśas and five *Anuttaras*². Those that live in the kalpas are named after the heavens in which they live. There are 12 Indras for these 16 kalpas and they are distributed as follows:—

1. Saudharma-Indra for the first heaven, Saudharma. He corresponds to the Hindu Devendra and his wife is Śachi. He is much the most important, being the only one commonly sculptured; he is frequently figured also with his wife Śachi on ceilings and on the lower jambs of the doorways of temples.

2. Īśāna-Indra in the second kalpa, Aiśāna.

3. Sanatkumāra-Indra in the third, Sanatkumāra.

4. Māhendra in the fourth, Māhendra.

5. Brahmendra in the fifth and sixth kalpas, Brahma and Brahmottara.

6. Lāntava in the seventh and eighth, Lāntava and Kāpishṭa.

7. Śukra in the ninth and tenth, Śukra and Mahāśukra.

8. Śatāra in the eleventh and twelfth, Śatāra and Sahasrāra.

9. Ānata in the thirteenth, Ānata.

10. Prāṇata in the fourteenth, Prāṇata.

11. Āraṇa in the fifteenth, Āraṇa.

12. Achyuta in the sixteenth, Achyuta.

There are no grades nor *Indras*³ in the heavens beyond the kalpas, viz., the Graiveyakas, Anudīśas and Anuttaras,⁴ for the inhabitants of those heavens are called "Ahamindras" (i.e., lit. "I am Indra") and are all alike.

The devas are spontaneously born, without either pregnancy or labour attendant upon their birth. A mundane soul to be born as a deva rises as it were from a couch (śayyā) of "divine space." There is no neuter sex in the upper world. In each heaven

¹ See above p. 183 under cosmology for details.

² See above pp. 183-184 under cosmology.

³ The total number of Indras in the Jaina pantheon is 100 and is arrived at as follows:—

	Indra .	Prati-Indra .
Bhavanavāsi-devas	20	20
Vyantara-devas	16	16
Jyotiṣhka-devas	1	1
Vaimānika-devas	12	12
Human	1	...
Sub-human	1	...
	51	49 = Total 100.

The Indra of human beings is called Chakravartī and the Indra of sub-human beings Siṅgha. Both have no Prati-Indras.

⁴ See above, pp. 183-184 under cosmology.

there are many devīs, each deva having many devīs in his family. No deva has less than 32 devīs. Each deva and devī has a retinue of numerous minor devas and devīs, and also a host of vāhanas, elephants, horses, bulls, etc. It should be noted that every animal is an abhiyogya-deva or menial deva transformed on account of his fluid body.

The devas of the first two kalpas as well as all beings living below them have physical sexual union. The devas in the third and fourth kalpas have sexual gratification by touch only; in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth kalpas by sight only, i.e., by seeing their loved ones; in the ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth kalpas by sound alone, i.e., by songs, etc.; in the thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth kalpas by mind only, i.e., by contemplating the charms of their beloved. The heavenly beings beyond the sixteenth kalpa have no sexual impulse, and there are no devīs, the only sex that is known there being the male sex. Their bliss is infinite, unlike that of the devas who marry.

In the fifth kalpa, Brahma, which is situated in the upper world in the place that corresponds to the elbow of the man representing the universe (pl. xxxvii), live a special kind of devas called Laukāntikas so called because they have reached the end of the universe. They are called deva-rishis because they are all alike, independent and without sexual desire. They are of 24 classes in the following eight groups:—Sārasvata, Āditya, Vahni, Aruṇa, Gardatoya, Tushita, Avyābādha and Arishta. The total number of the Laukāntikas is given as 407,806. They descend and attend to the Tirthaṅkaras when the latter get the spirit of "world-flight" (vairāgya).¹ Their good offices, coupled with the fact that they are in their celestial incarnation, entitles them to be born as human beings in their next birth and to attain liberation then.

In Saudharma there are 32 lakhs of palaces of the devas; in Aisāna, Sanatkumāra, Māhendra, and Brahma there are 28, 12, 8 and 4 lakhs, respectively. There are 50,000 in Lantava, 40,000 in Śukra, 6,000 in Sahasrāra, 400 in Ānata and Prāṇata, and 300 in Āraṇa and Achyuta. In the first three Graīveyakas there are 111, in the middle three 107, and in the last three 100 palaces. There are only five in the five Anuttaras, one for each. Women are born up to Aisāna, ascetics are born up to the Jyotishkas, wandering monks are born up to Brahma-kalpa, five-sensed creatures are born up to Sahasrāra, laymen are born up to Achyuta, and monks having wrong belief but observing the austerities in good faith up to the Graīveyakas. Those who have studied the 14 pūrvas are born from Brahma-kalpa up to the last Anuttara-vimāna. Monks and laymen of good behaviour are born at least in the first kalpa.

The thought-colours (leśyas) of the devas are as follows:—Yellow in the first and second kalpas; yellow-pink in the third and fourth kalpas; pink in fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth kalpas; pink-white in eleventh and twelfth kalpas; white in the remaining four kalpas and the higher regions which are collectively called kalpātītas as opposed to the kalpas.

¹ See above, pp. 94-95.

The maximum and minimum ages of the devas are as follows:—A little over two sāgaras is the maximum age in the first and second kalpas, while the minimum in these two kalpas is a little over one palya; in the third and fourth kalpas the maximum is a little over seven sāgaras. Further on the maximum age of the preceding kalpa becomes the minimum for the next kalpa. The maximum age in the fifth and sixth kalpas is a little over ten sāgaras. The age of the Laukāntikas who live in the fifth kalpa is eight sāgaras which is both the minimum and the maximum for them, while the minimum for the other devas in the same kalpa is seven sāgaras (the maximum of the fourth kalpa) and the maximum ten sāgaras. The maximum age in the seventh and eighth kalpas is a little over fourteen sāgaras; in the ninth and tenth a little over sixteen sāgaras; in the eleventh and twelfth a little over eighteen sāgaras; in the thirteenth and fourteenth twenty sāgaras and in the fifteenth and sixteenth 22 sāgaras. In each of the nine Graiveyakas it increases by one sāgara, i.e., it is 23 to 31 sāgaras, respectively. In the nine Anudīśas it is 32 sāgaras; in the first four Anuttaras it is 33 sāgaras as a rule but in the last Anuttara, Sarvārthasiddhi, it is never less than 33 sāgaras.

The size of the devas goes on decreasing as we go up to the higher heavens. Thus:—

In the first and second kalpas it is about seven hands or cubits (hasta).

In the third and fourth kalpas it is about six hands or cubits (hasta).

In the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth kalpas it is about five hands or cubits (hasta).

In the ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth kalpas it is about four hands or cubits (hasta).

In the thirteenth and fourteenth kalpas it is about three and a half hands or cubits (hasta).

In the fifteenth and sixteenth kalpas it is about three hands or cubits (hasta).

In the first, second and third Graiveyakas it is two and a half hands or cubits (hasta).

In the fourth, fifth and sixth Graiveyakas it is two hands or cubits (hasta).

In the seventh, eighth and ninth Graiveyakas it is one and a half hands or cubits (hasta).

In the Anudīśas it is one hand or cubit (hasta).

In the five Anuttaras also it is one hand or cubit (hasta).

The devas breathe extremely slowly, for their respiration occurs only at fixed interval, which is of a fortnight for each sāgara of their maximum age. Thus, for instance, the devas of the first and second kalpas, whose maximum age is a little over two sāgaras breathe once in two fortnights, i.e., once a month.

The devas have the sensation of hunger, though they do not ordinarily take food. It arises at fixed intervals, the intervals being the number of years which is 1,000 times the number of sāgaras constituting their maximum age. Thus as the maximum age of the devas of the first two kalpas is a little over two sāgaras their hunger interval works to 2,000 years. If we compare the hunger interval with the respiration period we find that a deva has the sensation of hunger in 2,000 years, if one respiration takes a month or two fortnights; in other words one hunger interval covers 24,000 respirations, as 2,000 years have 24,000 months.

From the first kalpa onwards up to Sarvārthasiddhi the devas become stronger in each successive heaven in respect of duration of life, power, enjoyment, brilliance, purity of leśya (thought-colour), sense-faculties, and visual or clairvoyant knowledge; in respect of attachment to worldly objects, pride, height of body and sexual impulses they become weaker and weaker successively. All the devas usually have pleasant feelings, but if they cherish any unpleasant ones these last only for one antarmuhūrta.

The devas of the kalpas attend the ceremonial worship of the Tirthaṅkaras whenever the five kinds of auspicious events (pañcakalyāṇas) associated with every Tirthaṅkara happen; but the Ahamindras do not go out of their heavens, merely worshipping the Tirthaṅkaras on those occasions by placing their hands in añjali over their heads.

OTHER DEVAS AND DEVĪS.

Among other celestial souls that are pre-eminently great, mention may be made of sixteen Vidyā-devīs or devīs of learning common to both the sects, who are included among the Yakṣiṇīs described above (pp. 193, 195). They are as follows:—

1. Rohiṇī, 2. Prajñaptī, 3. Vajrasṛṅkhālā, 4. Kulśāṅkuṣā, 5. Chakreśvarī, 6. Nara-dattā, 7. Kālī, 8. Mahākālī, 9. Gaurī, 10. Gāndhārī, 11. Sarvāstramahājvalā, 12. Mānavī, 13. Vairoṭyā, 14. Achchhuptā, 15. Mānasī, 16. Mahāmānasikā.

Sarasvatī, the Hindu goddess of learning, is regarded as a messenger (śāsanadevī) of all the Tirthaṅkaras and is figured in temples and private houses. She is usually shown with four hands but sometimes with two hands only. In the former case she ordinarily holds a vīṇā in two of her hands, and a lotus or rosary and a book in the other two; in the latter the vīṇā is alone held by both her hands. The swan (hamsa) is her cognizance or vāhana. Sometimes, however, her upper hands hold a goad and noose and her lower hands a rosary and book, and the hair on her head is arranged in the form of a jaṭā-makūṭa. There is a bronze image of Sarasvatī, almost modern looking, used in worship in the Tiruparuttikuṅṅam temple (pl. xxxv, fig. 2) which answers this description pretty strictly.

In some Jaina temples large figures are shown as guards or Dvārapālas at the entrance of shrines as in Hindu temples, who can be treated as devas. The Dikpālas or the guardians of the quarters, the Yoginīs, Jñātidevatās and Hanumān that have representations in the larger Jaina temples can also be classed under devas, though perhaps Hanumān alone, who compares well with the Hindu monkey-devotee of Rāma, can be treated as a pre-eminently great soul among the sub-human class of mundane souls¹.

¹ See above, pp. 187, 227.

Jaina iconography finds a place, as does Hindu iconography, for the Kshetrapālas who have to be classed under devas. Their functions are much the same as those of the Hindu Gaṇeśa and Vishvaksena, being removal of obstacles from the way of their devotees. They are classed by Āśadhara under the Yaksha group of the *Vyantara-devas*¹. They are—

1. Mañibhadra ; 2. Bhairava. There is a stone image of Bhairava in worship in the temple of Tiruparuttikunram which is similar in every respect to the Hindu form of this deity ; 3. Virabhadra² ; 4. Jaya ; and 5. Vijaya³.

¹ See above, pp. 229-230.

² Can be compared with the Hindu Virabhadra.

³ Āśadhara, Pūjapāṭha, p. 78 :—

Prathamō Mañibhadrāścha dvitīyo Bhairavar-tataḥ.

Tṛtīyo Virabhadraścha caturtho Jayasamjñakah.

Pañchamo Vijayāśchaivam Kshetrapālā omī surāḥ.

Yāśhe kule bhavāḥ khyātāḥ vīṣṇaviḥṇuvighñātakah.

INDEX.

A		PAGE			PAGE			PAGE
Abhakula-dhāga	171	Ādipurāṇa	6, 10n, 78, 90, 90n, 105, 105n, 154	Ajita (Vaksha)	193, 201
Abhaya	160, 197, 197n, 198-211	Āditya (of Graiveyakas)	184	Ajita (Ārya)	193
Abhichandra (Manu)	79, 224	Do. (of Jyotishka-Devas)	182	Do. (Vakshipt)	193, 195, 198, 202, 207
Abhidhānachintāmanī	187n, 196, 199n, 213n	Do. (of Laukānṛik-Devas)	94, 94n, 232	Ajītabalā (Vakshipt)	193, 198
Ābhijit	182	Ādityagati	67	Ajitadhara (Rudra) (see Ajitandhara)	226
Abhikahaka (Gaṇadhara)	195	Agni	88, 129	Ajitanātha (Tirihankara)	192, 220, 226
Abhinandana	192	Agnibhūti	215	Ajitandhara (Rudra)	226
Abhinava-chāruktitipañḍi	8	Agnidra	79n, 85n, 225n	Ajitasena-vāddhārāṇka	45n
āchārya	92, 108	Agnivālā	68	Ājya	88
Āchāṭhaka	228, 231, 232	Agnibhūti	178n	Akajāṅka (vaidya- pañchamahala- dharma-pravartaka)	216
Āchāyogika-devas	232, 236	Agnikumāra(s)	109, 128, 128n, 129, 213n, 229	Do. (Sage)	19, 41, 42
Achala	110n, 216, 219n	Agnilā	157, 158, 159, 160	Āchāṭhaka-charura	6
Āchārāṅga-dhara	216	Agnisūkti (Indra)	229	Āchāpāna (warrior)	92
Āchāra	215	Agnisūka	221	Do. (a Gaṇadhara)	215
Āchārya(s)	5, 6, 8, 42, 43, 51, 64n, 186-187, 187n, 188, 214, 215, 218-219	Agnivāhana (Indra)	229	Ākaiabhūta	230
Āchārya, P. K.	106n	Agni-yukta (Kāmadeva)	227	Ākāśa-sphāṭita-sāla	108, 113, 132
Āchārya-prasasti	215	Agrahāra	58	Ākāśana	214
Achchhupta (Vidyādevi)	234	Āgrāyāgīya-pūjya	219n	Ākhaṇḍa-śāhī	189n
Achelaka (Gaṇadhara)	215	Āguralagha	189, 189n	Ākhaṇḍa	176
Achirā	194	Āhamāndra(s)	77, 78, 183, 184, 231, 234	Ājāgiya-Pallava	35, 39-47, 59
Achyuta (Indra)	231	Āhamāndra-deva	65, 74, 77	Ājāgiya Śojan	47
Do. (Kālpa)	73, 74, 120n, 121n, 183, 193, 231, 232	Āhavamalla (Somesvara)	7	Ājaka	134
Achyutā (Vaksh)	193, 200	Āhimsā	219	Ālakāpura	68
Achyutendra	65, 73, 74, 117, 119	Āhīndravara-dvīpa	174	Ālakāpuri	67
Ādāna-nikṣhepaṇa	219	Āhīndravara-samudra	174	Ālakta-nagara	5
Ādāna-mukha	177	Āhorātra	165	Ālayāṅga	107
Ādāna-pāya	165-166	Āihole	5	Āyār(s)	2, 9, 49
Ādāyī-dvīpa	176, 180	Āitavata (elephant of Saudharmesdra)	65, 83-85, 119, 120, 122, 126, 150, 163, 164	Amalaprabha	190
Ādhirāja	93	Āirivata (zone)	180	Amama	9, 213n, 222
Ādhishtānam (base)	23	Āirivata-Kāhetra	175, 176, 178	Amara	213n
Ādhishta	170, 174	Āisāna (heaven)	183, 231, 232	Amarakirti-āchārya	43
Adhomukha-Nārada	151, 225, 226	Ājānā	33, 202, 203	Āmba	172
Ālinātha	65n, 192, 201n	Ājantā	62n	Āmbaḍa	213n
						Āmbārata	172
						Āmbārāṇa (vākana)	207
						Āmbī (village)	43, 51

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Adhikā (Pārvati) ...	203	Anandita (of Kinnaras) ...	230	Aprajñaptikas ...	230n
Do. (Yakshiṇi) ...	19, 157, 159, 160, 195, 209	Anivartaka (future Tirthankara) ...	213	Apratichakrā (Yakshiṇi) ...	193, 198
Adhvāta ...	170	Āṇjali ...	30, 67, 77, 91, 93, 103, 113-115, 122-124, 127, 129, 136, 146, 151, 155, 159, 163-164, 187, 200, 234	Apratirūpa ...	230n
Amitagatī (Indra) ...	229	Āñjana (mountain) ...	181	Ārāya ...	95, 121
Amitavāhana (Indra) ...	229	Āñjamā (naraka) ...	171	Āra Tirthankara) ...	213
Amoghavarsha ...	105n	Āñjanakavara-dvīpa ...	174	Ārahanātha (a Kāmadeva) ...	227
Amoghavarsha I ...	6	Āñjanakavara-samudra ...	174	Ārajā (city) ...	178
Amyitachandra Sūri ...	187n	Āśoka ...	174, 174n	Āraṁbha-randi ...	57, 181
Amṛtadāśadūgama ...	106n	Do. (of Anudāsas) ...	184	Āraṇa (Indra) ...	120n, 231
Anādara ...	179	Āśoka (city) ...	178	Do. (dvīpa) ...	183, 231, 232
Anaksharī ...	110	Āśukā (Yakshiṇi) ...	195, 205	Do. (Kalpadeva) ...	121, 121n
Ānanda (a Baladeva) ...	223	Āśuddhikṛpā (Ārya) ...	176	Āraṇātha (Tirthankara) ...	194, 220, 221
Ānandaśrāvaka ...	213n	Āśvīd-dāśa-anga ...	110n, 219n	Ārapāka ...	177
Anantachārītra ...	189n	Āntarāla ...	12, 13	Āśchālar ...	43
Anantacharushṭaya ...	189	Āntarvīpa(s) ...	177n	Āśchānā ...	110n
Ananta-darśana ...	189, 189n	Āntarvīpaja-malacāśhas ...	176	Ārchā (of Anudāsas) ...	184
Ananta-jñāna ...	189, 189n	Āntarmukhā ...	165, 178, 178n, 234	Ārchimālini (of Anudāsas) ...	184
Anantamati (Āryadevī) ...	218	Āntarveda ...	79n, 85n, 225n	Ārdha-chakrīva ...	221
Do. (Yakshiṇi) ...	195, 205	Anudāsas ...	183, 184, 231, 233	Ārdha-māgadhi ...	190, 190n
Anantanātha (Tirthankara) ...	194, 221, 226	Anujā ...	117	Ārdhamanḍapa ...	12-13, 18-21, 23, 25, 26, 60, 61
Ananta-vīrya (quality) ...	189, 189n	Anurādha ...	182, 192	Ārdra ...	182
Anantavīrya (future Tirthankara) ...	213, 213n	Anuttara(s) ...	110n, 183, 184, 231-233	Ārhadbali ...	216-218
Anantavīrya (Mukhya-Pañchamakuladharmaprativartaka) ...	216	Anuttara-vimāna ...	232	Ārhatt ...	5n, 64n, 174, 181, 187, 188, 213
Anantavīrya-deva ...	43	Anuttarapapādaka dāśa-anga ...	110n, 219n	Ārham Rāja (see Hari-hara) ...	30, 58
Anantavīrya Vāmana ...	26, 38, 40, 42-46, 60, 61	Anuvādhā ...	179n	Ārkiṛti ...	6
Anat'ana ...	214	Aparāṇṭha (Anuttara heaven) ...	184, 194	Ārkiṛti ...	67
Ānata (Indra) ...	120n, 231	Do. (gate) ...	179	Ārshya (Laukika-deva) ...	94, 94n, 141, 142, 232
Do. (dvīpa) ...	183, 192, 231, 232	Do. (son of Jarā-sandha) ...	147, 148	Do. (Gaṇadhara) ...	195
Do. (Kalpadeva) ...	121n, 125	Do. (Pañcha-sor-vāṇgadharā) ...	215	Ārshya (one of the earths) ...	171
Anavāpta ...	214	Do. (Śrūta-devatā) ...	216	Do. (city) ...	178
Āndhra (King) ...	4	Do. (brother of Vajranābhi) ...	74, 75	Ārshya-purī ...	178
Āndhra-Karṇāṭa ...	43	Aparāṇṭhā (city) ...	178	Ārshyanemi ...	194
Āndhra-Karṇāṭa-dēśa ...	43, 43	Do. (Yakshi) ...	195, 207	Ārjuna ...	214
Āṇḍa (deśa) ...	178	Do. (mother of Rāma Baladeva) ...	223, 223n	Ārkakīrti ...	93
Āṇḍa(s) (literature) ...	110, 110n, 111n, 113, 188n, 215, 216, 218, 219, 219n	Āpāyāgamātīya ...	213	Ārpākāma ...	1
Āṇḍakharat ...	215	Āpāyika ...	178n	Ārrah ...	111n, 112, 113n
Āṇḍaraka ...	182	Āppar ...	2, 5n, 9	Ārsha ...	190n
Āṇḍavāstra ...	91			Ārthasivā (Āryā) ...	195
Āṇḍra ...	177			Āruṇa ...	94, 94n, 181, 232
Āṇḍim ...	217			Āruṇābhāsa-dvīpa ...	181
Āṇḍira ...	190			Āruṇābhāsa-samudra ...	181
Āṇḍi ...	106n, 166			Āruṇābhāsavara-dvīpa ...	173
Ānida ...	228			Āruṇābhāsavara-samudra ...	173
Anilā (Āryā) ...	195			Āruṇa-dvīpa ...	181
Ānimā ...	228			Ārupagiri ...	2

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Arupagiri-mēḍu ...	2, 39, 42-44, 61	Aśvasena (father of Pāriva-nātha) ...	194	Balabhadra ...	222
Arūnaprabha ...	181	Aśvasena (father of Sanat-kumāra Chakravartin) ...	220	Balachandra ...	216
Do. (island moun-tain) ...	179	Āśvini ...	182, 194	Baladeva ...	9, 134, 134n, 135, 137-139, 141, 142, 145-153, 168, 187, 213, 213n, 222, 222n
Arūpa-samudra ...	181	Atibala ...	67	Balāka-piñchabha ...	41
Arūpavata-dvīpa ...	173	Atikāya (of Mahoraga) ...	230	Balarāma ...	9
Arūpavara-samudra ...	173	Do. (Indra) ...	230	Bala-sūrya ...	81
Ārūpavā ...	189n	Atikrānta ...	190	Balāthēvara ...	41n
Ārya(s) ...	72, 74, 176, 177	Atiperuṣa ...	230	Bali ...	43
Āryā ...	103, 195	Atitāla Tarkakṣaras ...	190	Bali ...	222
Āryadevī ...	187n, 218	Ātmapravāda-pūra ...	219n	Bali ...	23, 24, 38, 39, 42-46, 60-62, 161
Āryadīna ...	195	Āmarakṣa ...	228	Bali ...	227
Āryakṣa ...	132	Āpāhāra (weapon) ...	203	Bali ...	8
Āryakṣa-iravāḥ ...	113	Āndarika ...	228n	Bali ...	5
Āryakṣa-iravāḥ-tamūha ...	109	Ām (om) ...	188	Bali ...	195
Āryakṣaṇḍa ...	80, 176-178	Āushadha ...	176	Barbara ...	177
Āryaperumbakkam ...	1	Āushadhī ...	178	Basava ...	7
Āśādihara ...	235, 235n	Āvadhī ...	103n, 151	Basava-Purāṇa ...	7
Āsana ...	106n, 190, 191, 193, 196, 197	Āvalī ...	165	Basti ...	8, 25
Āśanijava ...	230	Avani-āpāpimādan ...	47	Beal, S. ...	2n
Āśarīra ...	188	Avanyavānābhava ...	47	Bhadra ...	192
Āśadala-pādma ...	188	Āvara ...	90	Bhadra ...	181
Āśa-mahāgalat ...	127, 130, 190, 190n	Āvata ...	178	Do. (Baladeva) ...	223
Āśhānātha-vrata ...	69	Āvata ...	105	Bhadra ...	220, 222
Āśhāpāda ...	105	Āvatarā ...	104	Bhadra ...	4, 4n, 215, 216
Do. (mountain) ...	193	Āvatarī ...	166, 167, 169, 173, 176, 185, 186, 189	Bhadra ...	216, 217
Do. (spider) ...	207	Āvāśikṣa ...	220n	Bhadra ...	117n
Āśi ...	79n, 225n	Āvāśikṣa ...	214, 219	Bhadra ...	213n
Āśita (colour) ...	200	Āvāśikṣa ...	9	Bhadra ...	230
Āśipata ...	172	Āvāśikṣa ...	94, 94n, 232	Bhadra ...	192
Āśikṣa ...	182	Āvāśikṣa ...	189n	Bhadra ...	221
Āśika (tree) ...	107, 112, 114, 115, 131, 132, 156, 190, 195, 229	Āyana ...	165	Bhadra ...	83, 174, 180
Āśoka (king) ...	3	Āyolhyā ...	65, 80, 82-85, 87, 90-92, 117, 178, 192, 194, 220	Bhadra ...	40, 156, 188, 210
Āśokā (Vakṣiṇī) ...	193, 203, 178			Bhadra ...	151
Do. (city) ...	178			Bhadra ...	92
Āśeya (quality) ...	219			Bhadra ...	133
Āśikṣya ...	185			Bhadra ...	110n, 219n
Āśi-nāstī-pravāda-pūra ...	219n			Bhadra ...	8
Āśuchi (of Piśāchas) ...	230			Bhadra ...	235
Āsurakumāra(s) ...	109, 128n, 129, 171, 172, 228, 229			Bhadra ...	78, 107
Āśvagrīva ...	222			Bhadra ...	13, 111, 115, 190, 191
Āśvapara ...	221			Bhadra ...	105
Āśvapari ...	178			Bhadra ...	143, 194
				Bhadra ...	182, 194

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Bharata	106, 65,	Bhūtananda (Indra) ...	229	Bukka II	8, 8a,
79n, 85, 85n, 90, 93, 94,		Bhūtasvādītar (class) ...	230n	30, 44
96, 98, 110, 111, 115,		Bhūtavara-dvīpa	174	Bukkarāja	30, 38
116, 186, 191, 220, 225,		Bhūtavara-samudra	174	Bukkarāja II	29, 30
225n, 227		Bhūtottama (of Bhūta		Bukkasa	177
Bharata (zone)	180	class)	230	Burgess, J.	1, 22n,
Bharata-līketra	80, 175,	Bijāpura	197, 198	196
178, 222		Bijjala, Tribhuvanamalla ...	7	Burnell	39
Bhāṣā	219	Bilva	200
Bhava	65n, 67,	Bīma devī	8
68, 85n, 117, 226		Biṭṭi alias Viṣṇuvar-
Bhavana	113n	dhana	7
Bhavana-bhūmi	108, 113,	Bodhi-Gaya	108n
132		Bodhi	108, 108n
Bhavanandi	43	Brahman	90, 188
Bhavanavāsi	109, 114,	Brahma	221
120n, 132, 171		Do (Indra)	120n
Bhavanavāsi-devas ...	98, 114,	Do. (Kalpavāsi deva) ...	121n
128, 128n, 129, 132, 163,		Do. (heaven). See under
179, 187, 227, 228, 229,		Brahma-kalpa
231n		Brahmā (Yaksha)	193, 202
Bhavaśī	218	Brahma-kalpa	183, 222,
Bhāvi-kūla-Tirthakāvat.	212	231, 232
Bhavya	108, 111,	Brahma-charyā	214, 219,
112, 116		Brahmadatta	221
Bhilaka (tree)	195	Brahmadeva (Yaksha) ...	33, 202
Bhilla (Bhil)	177	Brahma-loka	94n
Bhīma	50	Brahmana (caste)	90
Do. (Indra)	230	Brahmanandana	221
Do. (of Rākshasa class).	230	Brahma-rākshasa (of Rāk-
Do. (a Nārada)	225	shasa class)	230
Bhīmabali (a Rudra) ...	226	Brahma-yaksha	160
Bhīmavālī (also Bhīmabali)	226	Brahmendra	231
Bhagabhūmi	72, 165,	Brahmeśvara (Yaksha) ...	193, 202
169, 169n, 177, 178, 224		Brāhmi (Āryā)	193, 218
Bhagabhūmijū	73	Do. (daughter of
Bhajanānga	78, 107	Bharata)	65, 85,
Bhramararūtas	177	167
Bhṛikuṭī (Yaksha)	195, 208	Brahmottara (kalpa) ...	120n, 183,
Bhṛikuṭī (Yakshinī) ...	193, 201	231
Bhṛiṅgāra	130	Do. (Kalpavāsi-deva).	121n
Bhujaga (of Mahoraga		Brīhaspati	182
class)	230	Brown, W. N.	161
Bhujagavara-dvīpa ...	173	Budha	182
Bhujagavara-samudra ...	173	Buddha	3, 96,
Bhujānga Rao, Mr. ...	13	154n
Bhujānga śālī (of Mahoraga		Buddhi	175, 176
class)	230	Buddhila	215, 218
Bhūpāla	157	Buddhilingāchārya ...	217
Bhūṣaṅgāṅga	78, 107	Buddhishenā (Āryā) ...	218
Bhūta	141	Buhler, G.	41n
Bhūta (class)	109, 229, 230	Bukka I	8, 8n
Bhūtabali	217, 218

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Chandanā (Āryadevī) ...	218	Chitrā ...	82, 182, 192, 194	Devachīrya ...	217
Chandira ...	182	Chitrāgupta (future Tū- thānaka) ...	9, 213, 213n	Devagana ...	5
Chandī (Vakshī) ...	193, 204	Chitrakūṭa ...	177	Devagandha (deva) ...	181
Chandrabālā (Āryā) ...	195	Chittānūr ...	1	Devaguru ...	154
Chandrabhā (Mānā) ...	79, 224	Chola, the ...	18, 2-4, 7, 15, 18n, 20-23, 25, 27, 28, 31-34, 36-39, 44	Devajina ...	213n
Chandragiri (hill) ...	4n	Chōja-vamśacharitra ...	21n	Devaki ...	9, 134, 135, 137, 141, 142, 146, 147, 149, 212, 222
Chandragupta Maurya ...	4, 44, 41	Chūḍāmaṇi ...	128n, 129	Devakur ...	177, 178, 180
Chandrakīrti ...	26, 40, 42-46, 51, 61	Chulani ...	221	Devaleka ...	167, 168, 213n
Chandraprabha (Tirtha- kara) ...	2, 11, 13, 192, 201, 201n	Chulikas ...	110n	Devapāla ...	213
Chandraprabha temple ...	10, 12, 16, 16n, 17, 18, 20, 36, 39	Chūṭa ...	107, 112, 131	Devaputta ...	212
Do. description ...	11	Collapur ...	1n	Devāram ...	130n
Do. of ...	11	Coomaraswamy, Dr. A. K. ...	62n, 98	Devarāja I ...	8
Do. Inscriptions ...	49	Crois ...	18, 52, 53	Devā-śikṣa ...	94n, 232
Chandraprabha (palanquin) ...	118, 123			Devatena ...	134
Chandrapuri ...	192			Devāśrūta ...	212n
Chandralekha ...	209			Deva temples ...	4
Chandra-nāśa ...	92			Devāvara-śrīpa ...	174
Chandrarāja (Kāmadeva) ...	227			Devāvara-tanudra ...	174
Chāṇūra ...	145			Devendra ...	9, 83, 84, 85, 91, 126, 231
Chāṇūra ...	106n			Dayi (Pārvatī) ...	203
Charana (Gaṇadhara) ...	193			Devī ...	13, 109, 114, 127, 162, 175, 187, 191, 197, 232, 234
Chāraṇa ...	70-73, 133			Dhanā (Vakshī) ...	195, 207
Chāraṇa-parava-śikṣa ...	67, 68			Dhanadeva ...	74, 76
Chārdra-Ārya ...	176			Dhanadeva-śrēṣṭhi ...	75
Chārdra-śikṣa ...	215			Dhanapāla ...	230
Chāru (Gaṇadhara) ...	193			Dhanasri ...	70
Chārya ...	100-103, 111, 118, 123, 124, 134, 136, 155			Dharmīkṣa ...	182
Chaturvīdyā ...	178n			Dharm ...	106n, 111, 166, 172, 192n, 229, 230
Chaturvīdi-Maṅgala-Mahā- śāhā ...	52, 57			Dharmika ...	166, 192, 193n, 194, 212
Chatur-simhātana ...	1			Dharmika ...	166, 220
Chāumukha ...	105			Dharm ...	184
Chauti. (See also under Chāumara) ...	114, 122			Do. (Ārya) ...	195
Chedi ...	178			Dharapa ...	192
Chāma-Bārava Purāṇa ...	7			Dhārāpā (Ārya) ...	218
Chera, the ...	3			Dhārāpānanda ...	229
Choppit ...	68, 91			Dhārāpāpriyā ...	195, 207
Chātra ...	119, 120, 122, 126, 151, 156n			Dhārāpāni ...	218
Chātrā (tree) ...	193			Dhārāpānendra ...	98-100
Chhatakīranagara ...	117			Do. (Vaksha) ...	195, 210
Chāṇa ...	191, 228			Dhārasena ...	216, 217
China (Chinese) ...	177			Dhārāpā (Ārya) ...	193
Chitrādā ...	71			Dhārāpā ...	193
				Dhārāpā ...	195, 207

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Dharma	65, 72, 73, 76, 77, 81, 94, 103, 110, 110n, 118, 177, 214, 216, 225	Dīvyā-dhāni	190	Gambhīra (of Mahotngas) ...	230
Dharma-chakra	109, 188, 188n, 190, 197, 209, 211	Dombillika	177	Gaya	40, 41, 41n
Dharmadevi	13-21, 157, 160, 195, 209	Draṇiḥa Saṅgha	41	Gaṇadāta	108-111, 111n, 113, 132, 193, 195, 215
Dharmaghosha-Sūri	105	Drāvida	2, 177	Gandhā	178
Dharma-Kathā-aṅga	110n, 219n	Dravya	65n, 110n	Gandhakuṭi	109, 124, 130-132, 156, 163, 164
Dharmasātha	194, 230, 221, 226	Driḍhaketu	212	Gandhamādana	177
Dharmapāla Bodhisattva ...	3	Driḍhasātha	192	Gandhamālini	178
Dharmaprabha	223	Dyūṣṭipravāda-aṅga	110n, 219n	Gandhārī (Vidyādevi)	234
Dharmasena	5n, 215	Dubrenil, Jouveau	14, 14n, 15, 16, 16n, 111n, 162n	Gandhārī (Yakshini)	193, 195, 204, 208
Dharmasenāchārya	217	Duppasahasāri	168n	Gandharva (Vyantara class) ...	109, 112, 124, 132, 164, 229, 230
Dharmasena-purāṇa	5n	Duritiāh	193, 199	Gandharva (Yaksha)	195, 206
Dharmasīrt	218	Durmukha	225	Gandhārī	66, 68, 178
Dhātaki	195	Durvinṭa	6	Gaṇeśa	230n, 235
Dhātaki-dvīpa	176, 180	Duṣkama	168, 169, 216	Gāṅgas, the	5, 6
Dhātaki-Khaṇḍa	179, 180, 180n	Duṣkama Duṣkama	168, 169	Gāṅgā	175-177
Dhātaki-Khaṇḍa-dvīpa	173, 179, 182	Duṣkama Suṣkama	168, 169, 212	Gāṅgadeva	215, 218
Dhātāḥ	230n	Dvāpāyana	9, 213n	Gāṅgarāja	7
Dhātā	175	Dvārakā	9, 136n, 194, 213n	Gāṅgavāḥ	6n, 41
Dhātāśeṇāchārya	217	Dvārakāpālas	27, 161, 234	Gāṅgā-sāra-saṅgraha	6
Dhruvasena	215	Dvārāvati	135, 148- 151, 155, 221, 222	Gāṇḍhādāna	10n
Dhruvasenāchārya	217	Dvī-indriya	178n	Gāṇḍhagṛīha	12, 13
Dhūmaprabhā	171, 221	Dvīpas	173, 174, 182, 182n	Gardatoya	94, 94n, 233
Dhūlīśāla	106-108, 112, 131	Dvīpa-kumāras	109, 128n, 229	Gariṇā	228
Dhūva	130	Dviprīṣṭha	221, 222	Garuḍa (bird)	107, 109, 120n, 121n, 125, 228
Dhūva-dhūmī	107, 112, 131	Dvītiya-phā	109	Garuḍa (cognizance)	128n, 212
Dhūva-stambha	39			Garuḍa (vāhana)	12, 197- 199, 206, 211
Dhūva	214	E		Garuḍa (Yaksha)	195, 206
Dhūva-tleḥa	196	Ekādāśa-Rudrat	226	Gāthā	120n
Digaṇbāra	1, 4, 4n, 5, 5n, 6, 40, 41, 117, 118, 190n, 191, 196-211	Ekādra	177	Gālī	168
Dik-kumāras	109, 128n, 229	Elliot, Sir Walter	2	Gaura	199, 202, 203, 205, 206, 208
Dikpāl	234	Ervāna-tihalam	12, 16n	Gauri (Vidyādevi)	234
Dikṣā	45, 73, 74, 76, 77, 94-97, 118, 123, 136, 154, 157, 158	Etahāḍ	219	Gauri (Yakshini)	193, 203
Dikṣā-epikṣā	39, 193, 195	Eyir-īḍṭam	51	Gautama (gotra)	221
Dinna	193			Do, (a leva)	148, 149
Dipāṇḍa	78, 107	F		Gautama Śrī	215
		Fleet, J. F.	105n	Gautama Svāmī	216
				Gautama-dvīpa	179
		G		Gauvadhana	216
		Gacchaka	40, 41n	Gavyūta	179
		Gadā	161, 201n	Gemsoppa, rulers of	8
		Gajakarṇa	177	Ghanavāḍa	170
				Ghanavāḍa-vālaya	170

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Indrabas	172	Jambū	195	Jina-ālaya	177, 188
Indraka-vimāna	183	Jambū-dvīpa	66, 68, 70, 73, 74, 79n, 80, 85n, 173-177, 179, 180, 182, 225n	Jina-bhavana	83, 106, 112, 131, 181
Indranandi	64n, 187n			Jinachandra	216, 218
Indrakpi	65	Jambū-Svāmi (a Kāmadeva).	227	Jinachandra Bhattāraka	42
Indrapuri	66	Do. (a Kevāli)... ..	216	Jina-janmābhishēka-pīṭha	83
Iruga	29	Jāgola	178	Jina-kalpa	103, 104
Irugappa	8, 29-33, 44, 47, 57, 58	Janmā bhishēka	65, 81, 83-85, 90, 117, 119, 121, 135, 150, 162, 163, 175	Jina-Kāñchi	1
Irya	219	Janmābhishēka-mandapa	34	Jina-Kāñchīpura	1, 2
Jāna-kalpa	69	Jarisaṇḍha	133-136, 147, 148, 151, 152, 222	Jina-pūjā	68
Jānendra	83-85, 95, 119, 120, 120n, 121n, 125, 126, 150, 151, 231	Jasā	96-98, 208	Jinasena	6, 90, 90n
Jākat-pragbhāra	184	Jasā-māhūja	202, 209, 234	Do. (Mukhya-pañchama-kāla-dharmapra-vartakas)	216
Jāhaka	70	Jāti-ārya	176	Jinasena-āchārya	105n
Jāhāhāra	179	Jaṭila	96	Jinendra	5, 5n
Jāitva	228	Javakumāra	9, 213n	Jinendra-vyākharana	41
Jāvara (Yaksha)	193, 203, 204	Jaya (a Yaksha)	207	Jitambhi	226
Do. (Indra)	230n	Do. (of Vanaras)	235	Jitāsi	192
Do. (Pātala vessel)	179	Do. (Chakravartin)	220	Jitāstṛa	226
		Do. (future Tīrthānkara).	213	Do. (a Rudra)	226
		Do. (a Pūrva-dhara)	215	Do. (father of Tīrthānkara).	192
		Jayā (Yakshini)	195, 206	Jiva	110n, 172, 173
		Do. (mother of Tīrthānkara).	192	Jivadyasā	134-136, 147
		Jayādharaja-tiṭṭi	6	Jivandara	227
		Jayakṛti	212	Jivamukta	64n
		Jayamūlā	190n, 212n	Jīva	38, 65n, 155n
		Jayamūḍa-chola-maṇḍa-lam	3	Do. (avasthi)	65n
		Jayanta	74, 75	Do. (kevala)	65n
		Do. (gate)	179	Do. (mati)	65n
		Do. (Anuttara heaven).	184, 192, 194	Do. (manaj-paryaya).	65n
		Jayantā	178	Do. (Sruta)	65n
		Jayanti	223	Jñānāchāra	215
		Jayapāla	215	Jñānamati	190
		Jayapālākāchārya	217	Jñāna-mudrā	95, 202, 204
		Jayasena	220	Jñāna-pravāda-pūro	219n
		Jayasenāchārya	217	Jñānātīnaya	213
		Jayasiṃha I	5	Jñāneivara	190
		Do. II	5, 7	Jñātidēvatās	234
		Jayavarman	64, 66-68, 67n, 70	Jñātri-dharma-kathā-śloka	110n, 219n
		Jayavati	153	Johnson, Helen M.	168n, 191n
		Jhallari	170	Jrībhbakagrāma	118n
		Jhaja	201, 203	Jrībhbilā	118n
				Jupiter	182
				Jvalā	220
				Jvalāmālīnī	193, 201, 201n

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Jyeshtha	230	Kalāñju	52, 57	Kalpavāsi-Indras	128
Jyeshthā	182	Kalāpa-kottuḍi	36	Kalpapaṇnas (=Kalpa-
Jyotiranga	78, 107	Kalāia	81, 127,	vāsi-deva)	231
Jyotiskāra	182n	128n, 129, 130, 137, 190,		Kalyāṇa	66
Jyotiskā	109, 114,	203, 210		Kalyāṇa-maṇḍapa	18, 27, 87
120n, 132, 164, 182, 232		Kalāra-archanā	26	Kalyāṇa-vāda-pūro	219n
Jyotiskā-devas	114, 132,	Kālavaṅga	5n	Kāmadevat	187, 223,
182, 187, 228, 230, 231n		Kālayava	135, 141,		227
			148	Kāmākṣī-ammān temple
		Kālī (Hindu goddess)	201	(= Kāmākṣī temple)	13, 19, 20
		Do. (Yakṣinī)	191, 200	Kāmakṣī-piṭha	19
		Do. (Vidyādevī)	234	Kamala	58
		Kālīkā (Yakṣinī)	193, 199	Kamaṇḍala	159, 199,
		Kālindīsenā	134		219
		Kālīlōga	178	Kāmpīya	194, 220,
		Kālīya	117, 143n		221
		Kālīya-Kṛishṇa	143n	Kaṁṣa (uncle of Kṛishṇa). 133-147,
		Kālīyūr-Kōttam	50, 53		226
		Kāloda	179, 180	Do. (Aṅgadharā)	215
		Kālodadhi	180, 182	Kaṁsāchārya	217
		Kālodadhi-Samudra	173, 180,	Kaṁsa-maṇḍūbhā	233
			182	Kanaka	180
		Kālodaka-jaladhi	173	Kanakakṛti-deva	42
		Kālodaka-Samudra	179	Kanakaprabha (a deva)	180
		Kalpa (heaven)	69, 90,	Do. (a Kāma-
		91, 109, 120n, 126, 181,		deva)	227
		184, 212, 212n, 213, 213n,		Kanaka-jala	117
		220, 227, 231-234		Kānāṣṭhānagarī	192
		Kalpa (time)	166	Kāṣṭhī (also Cāchi,
		Do. (tree)	89, 91, 92,	Kāchī, Kāchī-pēḍa,
		107, 121n, 126, 167, 169,		Kāṣṭhīpura)	2, 3, 4, 5,
		223-225			10
		Kalpa-devas	121n	Kāṣṭhīpura	2
		Kalpa-Indras	120n	Kāṇḍa	201
		Kalpaka (tree). See also		Kāṇḍapā (Yakṣī)	195, 205
		under Kalpaka-vṛkṣa	72	Kāṇḍapātra	199
		Kalpaka-vṛkṣa	39, 78, 79,	Kāṇḍipāṭṭam	50
		98, 101, 107, 112, 158,		Kāṇḍa (tree)	229
		167		Kāṇḍa	201n
		Kalpaka-vṛkṣa-bhūmi	131	Kāṇḍīyas	96-98
		Kalpa-sūtra	117n,	Kāṇḍīya (Kalpa)	183, 231
			118n	Kāṇḍīya (Kalpavāsi-deva). 120n,
		Kalpa-taru	121n		121n
		Kalpātita (heaven)	184, 232	Kāṇḍa	172
		Kalpātītas (devas)	231	Kāṇḍavara	201
		Kalpavāsi-devas	108, 109,	Kāṇḍa-makṣa	196, 202,
		114, 120n, 130, 132, 183,			212
		231		Kāṇḍai	19
		Kalpavāsi-devas-vehicles		Kāṇḍamaka (island-moun-
		and rest-devices of the	121n	tain)	179
		Kalpavāsi-devas	108, 113,	Kāṇḍāṭṭa (Kolhāṭṭa)	41n
			114, 132	Kāṇḍal	8, 48, 191

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Kārkoṭaka (island-moun- tain)	179	Khasa	177	Kushās	15, 108, 113, 163
Karma-āryas	176	Khāsika	177	Kōśi	212
Karma-bhūmī(s)	72, 166, 169, 169n, 178, 180	Khātīśā-bhūmī	62n, 107, 112, 131	Kotīya (gāṇa)	41n
Karma-bhūmīja-nalāch- chhas	176, 177	Khaṭvāḥga (tree)	229n	Koṭṭaiyūr	42, 51
Kārmāṇa	228n	Kheṭa	201n	Kranditas	230n
Karma-prapāda-pūrva	219n	Kūṭm	166	Krauñcha	193
Karṇāṭa	18n	Kūṭśikā	228	Krauñchaka	177
Karṇāṭaka	5, 6	Kiṃpurusha (Indra of Kinnara class)	230	Krauñchavara-dvīpa	173
Kārtīkeya (Yaksha)	195, 204	Kiṃpurusha (class of Vyantara devas)	109, 229, 230	Krauñchavara-Samudra	173
Kārttika śreshṭha	212	Kiṃpurusha (of Kinnara class)	230	Kṛish	79n, 225n
Karuvūr	24	Kiṃpurusha (Yaksha)	195, 205	Krishṇa (son of Vasu- deva)	9, 63, 64, 87, 117, 133-136, 136n, 137-143, 143n, 144-153, 159, 212, 213, 213n, 226, 227
Kaśā	201, 203, 205, 209, 211	Kin-chi-pulo (= Kāñchī), Kinnara (Indra of Kinnara class)	230	Krishṇa II	6
Kāśhā	165	Kinnara (division of Kinnaras)	230	Krishṇa (Tirthankara of the past age)	190
Kāśyapa (a Gaṇadhara)	193	Kinnara (of Vyantara devas)	109, 229, 230	Krishṇa (a Nārāyaṇa)	222-223
Kāśyapa (Gotra)	220, 221	Kinnara (Yaksha)	195, 205	Krishṇadevarāya (= Kṛishṇarāya)	8, 23, 48, 58, 59
Do. (a warrior)	92	Kinnara-Kinnara	230	Krishṇasāra	200, 204, 205
Kāśyapī (Āryā)	193	Kinnarottama (of Kinnara class)	230	Kṛishavarman	194
Kaṭaka	197-208, 210	Kirāta	177	Kṛishavīrya	220
Katti	198	Kirīṭa	13, 66, 91, 93, 114, 115, 127, 129, 146, 163, 164	Kṛittikā	182, 194
Kaṭyavalambita	29	Kirīṭa-wakṣa	201, 209- 211	Kṛiyānīlā-pūrva	219n
Kauravas	151	Kṛīṭi	175	Kṛiśa	106, 106n, 165
Kauśāmbī	133, 192	Kṛivarmaṇ I	5	Kṛhāṇa	184
Kavi-parameshṭi	216	Kodugai (also Kodakai)	58	Kṛhatriya	85, 90, 92, 93, 146
Kāya[a]	177	Kodukai	48	Kṛhatriya (Pūrvadhara)	215
Kāya-guṇṭi	215	Koḍuṅgai	20, 31, 33, 34, 37	Kṛhatriyachārya	217
Kāya-kleśa	214	Kōka	121n	Kṛhāndravara-dvīpa	173
Kāyotsarga	97, 99, 101, 124, 156, 191, 191n, 215, 227, 227n	Kōlāttam	129	Kṛhāndravara-Samudra	173
Kendra (Yaksha)	195, 206	Kollāpura	1	Kṛhemā	178
Kesari	175	Kōṇ	47	Kṛhemādhara (a Manu)	224
Kesava	74n	Kōṇḍai	28, 29, 87, 146-149	Kṛhemādhara (a Manu)	224
Ketaka	178	Koṅgaṇivarman I	6	Kṛhemapurī	178
Kevāla-jñāna	64n, 65n, 81, 96, 103, 103n, 104, 108n, 111n, 118, 124, 156, 156n, 189	Kopperuḍḍiṅga	39, 47, 48	Kṛhētra	65n, 95, 175, 176, 178, 179, 180, 184
Kevālī	39, 65, 81, 103-105, 108, 118, 124, 136, 156, 216	Kōra (tree)	38, 42, 44, 45, 46n, 59, 60	Kṛhētra-ārya	176
Keyūpa	179	Kōśa	166	Kṛhētra-pāla	10, 235
Khaḍgā	178	Kosala	178	Kṛhīrādhī	121
Khaḍgapurī	178			Kṛhīrasāgara	96
Khaḍgi	125			Kṛhīravara-dvīpa	173, 180
Kṛharadhāga	171, 229			Kṛhīravara-Samudra	173, 179, 180
Kṛharavara	172

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Kubera (Hindu God) ...	67, 130n	Kupika ...	9, 212, 213n	Lāṅgalivartā ...	178
Do. (Yaksha) ...	195, 207	Kuṅkumā ...	198, 200, 205, 207, 208	Langhoik ...	145
Kuṇḍa-vijakku ...	129	Kūn Pāṇḍya or Neṇḍu-mājan ...	5	Lāntava (Deva) ...	120, 125
Kūḍu ...	28, 32	Kūnta ...	200	Do. (Kalpa) ...	183, 231, 232
Kuḍumiyāmalai ...	22	Kunthunātha (Tirthaṅkara) ...	13, 29, 194, 220	Do. (Kalpa-deva) ...	121n, 126
Kuḍuṇḍa ...	204	Kunthunātha (Kāmadeva) ...	227	Do. (Kalpa-ludra) ...	120n, 231
Kuḍuṇḍāḍā ...	210	Kuṇḍa ...	4	Lāṭa ...	178
Kuḍuṇḍāḍi ...	210	Kūrma ...	201	Laukāntika. (Also see Laukāntika-devas) ...	94, 94n, 123, 136, 154, 232, 233
Kuḍuṇḍa-tarpa ...	210, 211	Kūrma Śrī (Āryadevī) ...	218	Laukāntika-devas ...	65, 94, 95, 118, 123, 154
Kūla ...	118, 124	Kuru (dynasty) ...	101	Lavaṇa ...	179
Kūlāgrāma ...	118, 124	Do. (King) ...	92, 93	Lavanodadhi ...	176
Kulakara ...	79, 223	Do. (deity) ...	178	Lavaṇa-Samudra ...	173, 175, 179, 180, 182
Kulaksha ...	177	Kurukshetra ...	135, 151	Leiden Grant ...	22n
Kulaputra (future Tirthaṅkara) ...	212	Kuruvāṇa ...	92, 93	Leśya ...	172, 172n, 229, 232, 234
Kuṇḍa ...	51, 60, 62	Kuṇḍavara-dvīpa ...	173	Leumann ...	4n
Kuṇḍāṅkuṣi (Vidyādevī) ...	234	Kuṇḍavara-Samudra ...	173	Li ...	2
Kulottuṅga I ...	15, 17, 21, 22, 25, 53, 54	Kuṇḍagrāgata ...	194	Lingiyat ...	7, 9
Do. III ...	21, 23, 24, 26, 27, 42, 43, 46, 47, 51, 52, 54, 57	Kuṇḍāṅka ...	178	Līka-nit ...	166
Kulottuṅga-choja-kāḍu-veṭṭiga ...	51	Kūṣmāṇḍa (of Vyantaras) ...	230n	Loch ...	97, 155, 219
Kumām (Hindu God) ...	204	Do. (of Piśāchas) ...	230	Lohacharya ...	216, 217
Kumāra (Yaksha) ...	193, 204	Kūṣmāṇḍini (Yakshini) ...	160, 195, 209	Loka ...	94n, 108, 170
Kumār ...	129, 229	Kusuma (Yaksha) ...	193, 200	Lokāntika devas. (See also under Laukāntika-devas) ...	65
Kumārpaḍa ...	105n	Kusumāṅjali (Aṣṭa-kālā Tirthaṅkara) ...	190	Lokāntika ...	94
Kumbha (Gaṇadhara) ...	195	Kuṇḍi-Sāttā ...	125	Lokapāla ...	228
Do. (father of Tirthaṅkara) ...	194			Lokasena ...	6
Do. (class of Devas in Naraka) ...	172			Lolupa ...	70, 71
Kuṇḍha (vessel) ...	84			Longhurst, A. H. ...	15n, 16, 16n
Kuṇḍāḍāḍhika ...	35
Kuṇḍha-āṇḍi ...	160
Kumudā ...	178
Kuṇḍāka ...	178
Kuṇḍha ...	177
Kuṇḍa ...	200
Kuṇḍagrāma ...	117, 194
Kundakunda (Mukhya Pañcakamakāla-dharma-pravartaka) ...	216, 218
Kundakundācharya ...	4, 41, 41n
Kuṇḍala ...	28, 163
Kuṇḍala (town) ...	178
Kuṇḍapura ...	117-119, 122, 194
Kuṇḍalavara-dvīpa ...	173
Kuṇḍalavara-Samudra ...	173

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Madhyāṅga	78	Mahāpādma (chakravartin).	220	Mahāvīra (Indra)	230n
Madī	35, 36, 39	Do. (deva) ...	178	Mahidhara	66, 67n
Māgarā	1	Do. (lake) ...	175	Mahimā	228
Magavati	213n	Do. (future Tīr- thāṅkara)	212	Mahishāsura-mardini ...	201n
Maghā	182, 192	Mahāpīṭha[n]	74, 76	Mahoraga	109, 229, 230
Magadha	147, 151, 169, 178	Mahāprabha	180	Maitreya	215
Māghanandi	216, 217, 218	Mahāpūṇḍarika	175	Makara	120, 121n, 125, 128n, 193, 198, 201, 203, 204, 205, 208, 229
Maghuvā	92, 220	Mahāpurāṇa	6, 90n	Makara-kūṇḍalā	202, 209, 210, 211
Maghavi	171	Mahāpurī	178	Makara-terāṇa	108, 113
Māghavī	171	Mahāpuruṣa (of Kīśor- śhas)	230	Makuta	159, 160, 201, 203, 210, 211
Mahābāhu	74, 75	Do. (Indra) ...	230	Makuta-chikna	128n
Mahābala	64, 67-70, 93, 147	Mahārāja	93	Māḍā	205
Mahābalipuram	15	Mahārāṣṭra (an Asura- kumāra) ...	172	Māḍāśārin	45n
Mahābhārata	133	Do. (a Nārada) ...	225	Mālava	41n, 177
Mahābhīma (Indra) ...	230	Mahāśākhā	52, 54, 57	Malaya	178
Do. (of Rākṣasa class)	230	Mahāśādhū	190	Malayanār-koyl	12, 16n
Do. (a Nārada) ...	225	Mahāsena	192	Malik-Kufur	3
Mahābhīṣaka	34	Mahāsīras	221	Maili	195
Mahābhūta	230	Mahāśūtra (kalpa) ...	183, 194, 231	Mallinath, C. S.	64, 120n, 127n, 188
Mahādeha	230	Mahāśūtra (kalpa-dai-deva) ...	120n, 121, 121n, 125	Mallinatha (Tīrthāṅkara) ...	190, 194, 220, 221
Mahāgandha	181	Mahāvara	230	Do. (future Tīr- thāṅkara)	213n
Mahāghoṣa (an Asura- kumāra)	172	Mahāveta	230n	Mallishēṇa	24, 26, 35, 43, 44, 45, 45n, 46, 46n, 47, 48, 58, 59, 62, 105n
Do. (Indra)	229	Mahātamaś-prabhā ...	171, 220, 221	Mallishēṇa Vāmana	24, 43
Mahāhari	220	Mahāvapri	178	Mallishēṇa Vāmana Sūri ...	43
Mahāhimavān	175	Mahāvatsā	178	Malyadeva	213n
Mahāśivāya	230	Mahā-videha	180	Malyāṅga	78, 107
Mahākāśchha	87, 88, 93, 96, 97, 98, 178	Mahāvīra (alias Vardha- māna)	10, 64, 116, 117, 118, 118n, 186, 191, 194, 201n, 216, 217, 226	Malyavat	177
Mahākālā (a deva) ...	179, 180	Mahāvratas	219	Māmāla	15
Do. (an Asura- kumāra)	172	Mahāvāksha	193, 198	Māmaṇḍār	57
Do. (a Nārada) ...	225	Mahendra (deva)	83, 95, 121, 121n, 125	Manah-paryaya-jñāna ...	65n, 103n
Do. (an Indra)	230	Do. (kalpa)	183, 231, 232	Manah-paryaya-jñānin ...	108
Do. (of Piśāchas) ...	230	Mahendra (Indra) ...	120n, 231	Mānasāra	106n
Do. (nidhi)	130n	Mahendra-Māmāla (epoch)	15	Manah-jñā-dvīpa	174
Mahākālī (Vakṣiṇī) ...	193, 200, 202	Mahendramāṅgalam ...	29, 57	Manah-jñā-tanūdra	174
Do. (Vidyādevī)	234	Mahendravarman I	5, 15, 62n, 63	Mānasī (Vakṣiṇī)	195, 205
Mahākīya (Indra)	230	Mahendravarman III ...	17	Do. (Vidyādevī)	234
Do. (of Mahomgas) ...	230	Mahendravarma-vara- grīva [w]	12, 17	Mānastambha	106, 111, 131
Mahākrandita	230n			Māgavaka	130n
Mahāmānsa (Vakṣiṇī) ...	195, 206			Mānavī (Vakṣiṇī)	193, 203
Mahāmānsikā (Vidyādevī) ...	234			Do. (Vidyādevī)	234
Mahāmānājāpa	57
Mahāmāti	67
Mahā-Meru	65, 83, 84, 101, 119, 121, 122, 135, 150

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Maṇḍapa	90, 12,	Māsa	165	Mudga-varya	211
25, 27-32, 34, 35, 37, 50,		Māsapativarta	178	Mudrā	197n
52, 54, 84, 87, 108, 156		Māsī	79n, 225n	Mukhūrta	165
Mandara (Mountain)	81	Mātanga	193, 195,	Mukhamandapa (of Var-
Do. (Siṃha)	108	200, 211		dharmāna temple)	18, 22,
Do. (Gaṇadhara)	195, 215	Matangēśvara temple	11, 15,	23, 24, 50, 51, 63, 124, 160, 161
Maṇḍīyam	51	16, 17		Mukhya-Pañchamakāla-
Maṇḍodari	133, 134	Maṭka	9	Dharmaprawartakas	216
Maṇḍalā	130	Maṭhādāpā	10	Mukhōḍai	62, 115,
Maṇḍalavati	178	Mathurā	142, 194,	132, 156, 191
Maṇḍini (Aryadevī)	218	222		Muktesvara (temple)	11, 16
Maṇi	175	Maṭhaurātaka-māḍai	52, 54	Mūla	182, 192
Maṇibhadra (of Yakshas). 230, 235		Mathurāpura	133-136,	Mūla-saṅgha	5
Do. (Indra of the		143, 146, 147, 148		Muni	40n, 42,
Yakshas). 230		Maṭi-jūṇa	65n, 103n	43, 64, 186, 188, 227n
Mānikyāna-viṭam	53	Mātrībhuṭeśvara (temple). 63		Munisuvrata (Tirthankra). 190, 194,
Mānikyānanda	216	Matsya	178	220-221
Mānikyavūchaka	9	Mātulūga	197	Do. (future Tir-
Maṇḍukalā	4, 40n	Maurya	215	thānkra)	9, 212
Maṇḍūshā	178	Māvandūr	29, 57	Muni-vara-varāḍya	218
Manobhadra	230	Mayūrpūṭchaka	216	Muniśa	21, 32,
Manogupī	215	Mayūrpūṭchaka	38, 46	34-38, 40, 43, 44, 45, 46
Manogupī (Yakshinī)	193, 200	Megha	171	Muniśa-Maṇḍapa	37
Manohara (a garden)	118, 124	Meghachandra	216	Muraja	121, 170
Do. (of Maṇḍagat). 230		Meghakumāra	128, 128n	Murundā	177
Do. (of Yakshas)	230	Meghaprabha	192	Musala	204
Manoharā (wife of Atibala). 67		Do. (a Kāma-		Murandhi	206
Manorama (Graivya row)	184	deva)	227	Mushkara	6
Do. (of Kinnara	230	Merā	220	Musirupākka	58
Manotamā (Savidhi's wife). 71		Meraka	222	Mūvendavēḷāṇ	38, 48, 59
Manovagi	193, 200	Mercury	182
Mantra	26, 48,	Meru	34, 117,
69, 88, 148, 149, 187		173, 174, 177, 179, 180,
Manu	65, 78,	182, 182n, 183
79, 85n, 187, 224, 225,		Merumandara Purāṇam 43, 43n,
227		44, 44n, 46n, 105, 113n
Mānusha	230	Meru-mukha	177
Mānushottara (mountain). 180-182		Minākehi (temple)	9n
Mārā	201	Mināri	218
Mārāsīmha III	6	Mithilāpurī	194
Mārdava	214	Mitrādevī	194
Marichi	117n	Mitachhā	176, 177
Mars	182	Moha	108
Maru	230	Moksha	30, 32,
Marudeva (of Kimpuru-		168, 220, 222
shas)	230	Mridaṅga	121, 128,
Marudera (Mann)	79, 225	152
Marudevī	65, 80,	Mrigaśikhā	182
82, 83, 85, 117, 119, 192		Mrigavati	221
Marutprabha	230	Mrigesavarman	5, 5n
Mārvarī	190n	Mudga	205
		Mudgara	202, 203,
		205, 205n, 207, 209

N

Nābhī	65, 78,
79, 79n, 80, 85, 85n, 86-89,
92, 92n, 192, 225, 225n
Nābhī (navel chord)	225
Nāga	38, 82
Do. (design)	28
Do. (serpent)	142
Do. (tree)	193, 229
Nāga(s)	81, 99
Nāgalandha	20, 28,
33, 37
Nāgabavana	81
Nāgadatta	71
Nāgakumāra (a Kāmadeva). 227
Nāga-Kumāra (Bhavana-
vāsi-deva)	98, 108,
109, 128n, 129, 179, 227, 228, 229
Nāgaśatikṣhā	38
Nāgari	168

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Nāgālayana	136, 142, 143, 153, 153n	Nandyavarta	195	Nigoda	173
Nāgasena	215	Nārada (class)	187, 223, 225, 226	Nikashaya	213n
Nāgasenāchārya	217	Nārada (of Gandhāra)	230	Nila	172, 175, 177
Nāgavara-dvīpa	174	Do. (a layman)	213n	Nīlakkūṭirāṣṭra	34
Nāgavara-Samudra	174	Naradattī (Yakshini)	195, 208	Nīlāmaṣṭi	106
Nāgila	168n	Do. (Vidyādevī)	234	Nīlānjana	64, 86, 93
Naigamarshaṇa	154	Naraka	222	Nīlotpala	20, 205, 206, 207, 211
Naisarpa	130n	Nāraka	171, 172	Nimeśvara	194
Nairādhā	227	Narakaṇṭhā	175, 176	Nini	194
Nakshatra	182, 192, 193	Narakamukha	225	Nirvāṇa	165
Nakshatra (Aṅgadhara)	215	Narasimha (Arāṇachakra)	221	Nirvāṇa-Paṇḍita	5
Nakshatrachārya	217	Narasimha I (Hoysala)	7, 8	Nirgrantha (Digam- baras)	5n
Nala	227	Do. II (Hoysala) Vira	47	Nirjarā	215n
Nalarāja	227	Do. III (Hoysala)	8	Nirmala	213
Nāli	165	Do. Vira (of Vijaya- nagara)	59	Nirmama	213n
Nalini	178	Narasimhachār, R.	62n	Nirgamika	70
Nāmakaṇṭha	85	Narasimhavarman I	15	Nirvāṇa	65, 66, 116, 118n, 188-191, 193, 195, 213, 215-217
Nāman	139	Do. II	14	Nirvāṇi (Yakshini)	195, 206
Nami	98, 99, 100	Nārāyaṇa	187, 223, 223n	Nirhadha	175, 177, 179
Naminātha	194, 220, 221	Do. (Arāṇachakra)	221	Nishkalanka	216
Namajvār	9	Nārāyaṇa (a Vāsudeva)	223	Nishkashaya	213
Nānārta	130n	Nārī	175, 176	Nishpāpa	213
Nānārtharatnamālā	30n	Nārīnā Śāstrī	22n	Nishpāka	9, 213n
Nanda (father of Bala- deva)	134, 137- 139, 141-144, 145	Nārīnā	91, 117	Nishpāka	42
Nanda (a king)	117	Nārīnā	123	Nishpāka	222
Do. (a Gaṇadhara)	193	Nārīnā	128, 152	Nishpāka	6
Nandana (a Baladeva)	223	Nārīnā	188	Nishpāka	166
Do. (a garden)	83, 174, 180	Nārīnā	191	Nishpāka	85
Nandi (śaṅkha)	41	Nārīnā	49, 50, 57	Nishpāka	59
Nandi (tree)	195	Nārīnā	2
Do. (vāhana)	12, 203, 208	Nārīnā	117n
Do. (a Baladeva)	223	Nārīnā	5
Nandigapa	41	Nārīnā	153, 154, 155, 156
Nandimitra (a Baladeva)	223	Nārīnā	93n, 120n, 219
Do. (a Pañchasa- r-vāṇadhara)	215	Nārīnā	216
Do. (Śrīnā-Kapali)	216	Nārīnā	19, 20, 63, 63n, 64, 133, 135, 136, 136n, 147, 150-153, 154n, 157-161, 190, 191, 194, 209, 220-222
Nandiprabha	181	Nārīnā	152
Nandivara-dvīpa	173, 174, 174n, 181	Nārīnā	81, 109, 130, 130n
Nandivara-dvīpa-Samudra	173, 181
Nandivarman Pallavamalla	16
Nandivarman (dynasty)	16

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Padmā (an Āryā) ...	195	Pañchaprothikāsmādhī-		Pātala (tree) ...	193
Do. (mother of Dvi- prishṭha-Nārā- yaṇa) ...	221	Sūtra ...	189n	Pātaliputra ...	41n
Do. (a province) ...	178	Pañchasarvāṅgadhāras ...	215	Pathayaka ...	177
Padmakāvatī ...	178	Pañchastikāya ...	45	Patra-kudala ...	29, 115, 163, 195, 202, 209, 211, 212
Padmanābha (future Tīr- thaṅkara) ...	169, 212	Pañchenāriya ...	178n	Paṭṭawaṭi ...	41n, 216, 218
Do. (a chakravartin) ...	220	Pāṇḍava ...	175	Paudanapura ...	134
Padmanābha-Vādikolā- kaṭa ...	45n	Pāṇḍavāchārya ...	217	Pauruṣeṇā (Āryadevī) ...	218
Padmaprabha ...	18, 25, 192	Pāṇḍu (śiḍhā) ...	130n	Pāvāpurī ...	118, 195
Padmāsana ...	20, 115, 124, 132, 156, 185, 190, 191, 201, 202, 209-212, 227	Do. (an Aṅgadhara) ...	215	Pedhāla ...	212n
Padma Śrī ...	218	Pāṇḍula (vana) ...	83, 84, 121, 175, 180	Pennacōnda (=Penagōn- da) ...	1n
Padmāvatī (Yakṣiṇī) ...	195, 210, 211	Pāṇḍura ...	180	Penthi ...	4
Do. (mother of Tīr- thaṅkara) ...	194	Pāṇḍya, the ...	1n, 2-5	Penugōnda ...	1n
Do. (wife of Ugra- sena) ...	133, 134, 146	Pañcha-khāya ...	171, 172, 229	Penugōnda (=Penugōnda),	1
Padmāvatī (city) ...	178	Pañchaprabhā ...	171, 221	Pāṭala ...	80
Padmottara ...	220	Pāpā ...	118	Phalgu ...	193
Paduma (Padma) ...	130n	Parameśvara (Śiva) ...	17	Phalgu Śrī ...	168n
Paḍa ...	156n	Do. (Attakala Tīr- thaṅkara) ...	190	Piṇḍa-praśāna ...	157
Palthan ...	4	Parameśvaravarman II ...	16, 17	Pingala ...	130n
Paḍhi-yāna ...	206	Pāraṇā ...	167	Piṇḍar ...	109, 229, 230
Pālāsika (Halsi) ...	5n	Pārasi ...	177	Phho[n] ...	74-76
Pālāsika ...	63n	Paravāṭimalla ...	45, 43n, 58	Phha (a Rudra) ...	226
Paḷḷa-paḷḷai ...	62	Parigrakṣyāga ...	219	Puṇḍr ...	201n
Pallava, the ...	2, 3, 5, 11, 14-17, 22-36, 38, 39n, 47, 48, 59, 60	Parikṛmas ...	110n	Potana ...	221
Pallava, Tamil ...	39	Pāriḥāṭas ...	175, 228	Potila ...	212n
Pallavar-iḍṇ ...	47	Pāriḥāṭapāṇḍi ...	219	Prabhāchandra ...	7
Pallavan Mūvendarai ...	48	Pāriḥāṭas (Tīrthaṅkara) ...	18, 25, 35, 36, 38, 39, 63n, 118n, 136n, 190, 191, 194, 201n, 221	Prabhāṅjana (a deva) ...	179
Palya ...	165-167, 175, 177, 178, 178n, 195, 229, 230, 231, 233	Pāriḥāṭas, Mount ...	193, 195	Prabhāṅjana (an Indra) ...	229
Paḷyopama ...	165	Pāriḥāṭas, Mr. ...	13n	Prabhāṅkara ...	157, 158
Pāṇḍaga ...	107	Pāriḥāṭas, Mr. ...	13n	Prabhāṅkara (town) ...	178
Pañchāgni ...	133	Pāriḥāṭas, Mr. ...	195, 210	Prabhāṅkara (a Gaṇadhara) ...	215
Pañchakalyāṇas ...	234	Parutti ...	2	Do. (a deva) ...	179
Pañchāla ...	178	Pārvatī ...	203	Prabhāvacandra ...	216
Pañchamukhi ...	97, 115, 155	Paryāḍa ...	13, 20	Prabhāvatī (mother of Tīr- thaṅkara) ...	194
Pañchaparamēśthīn ...	64n, 69, 187, 187n, 188	Paryāḍa-āsana ...	13, 32, 38, 105, 104	Pradyotana ...	193
Pañchaparamēśthīn-pāḍā ...	64n, 187n	Pāḍa ...	197, 198, 211	Pradyumna ...	227
Pañchapraṇāṭhika ...	210n	Pāḍā ...	96-98, 116	Prāgabhi ...	218
		Pāḍāpāṇa ...	79n, 225n	Prāhara ...	222
		Pāḍapāṇa ...	96, 97	Prāhara ...	223
		Pāḍā (a Yakṣa) ...	195, 205	Prajāpati ...	221
		Pāḍā ...	179	Do. (a Kāmadeva) ...	227
		Pāḍā ...	171, 185, 182	Prajāpati (a Yakṣiṇī) ...	193, 199
				Do. (a Vidyadevī) ...	234
				Prāhara ...	228
				Prāhara ...	12, 39, 39n
				Prāhara ...	172, 228
				Prāhara-tārā ...	182
				Prāhara ...	190n

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Prāmāṇa-aṅgula ...	166	Priyāṅga ...	191	Pūrva (time) ...	165, 166, 168, 168n, 178, 178n, 192, 212, 220, 226
Prāmāṇa-yajaka ...	166	Priyavata ...	79n, 85n, 225n	Pūrvā (literature) ...	111n, 215, 219, 219n, 232
Prāṇata (deva) ...	120, 121n, 125	Prosthila (future Tirthan-kara) ...	212	Pūrvāṅ ...	182
Do. (Indra) ...	120n, 231	Prosthila (Pūrvadhara) ...	215	Pūrvābhāṣāpadā ...	182
Do. (heaven) ...	183, 192, 194, 231, 232	Prushhila ...	217	Pūrvadhara ...	108, 113, 215
Prāṇavāda-pūva ...	219n	Puṣṭala ...	110n	Pūrvagata ...	110n, 219n
Prasāda ...	32	Pūjā ...	109	Pūrvāṅga ...	178n
Prāsāda ...	106	Pūjāpāṭha ...	235n	Pūrvāśāṣṭaka ...	182, 192
Prasasti ...	14, 15, 24, 49, 51, 54	Pūjāśāstra ...	213	Pūrvī ...	217
Prasanna ...	225	Do. (Mukhya Pañchamaṣṭaka Dharma-pravartaka) ...	216	Pūrvottarābhāṣāpadā ...	182
Prasenachandra (a Kāma-deva) ...	227	Pulakaśā I ...	5	Pushkalā (goddess) ...	202, 203
Do. (a Manu) ...	225	Do. II ...	5	Do. (province) ...	178
Prasenajit ...	79, 225	Palinda ...	177	Pushkalāvati ...	70, 74, 178
Prasāna-Vyākaraṇa-aṅga ...	110n, 219n	Panarvata ...	182, 192	Pushkaravara-dvīpa ...	173, 176, 180, 182
Prasāntara-vaṣṭa-mālikā ...	6	Pancharika (brother-in-law of Vajrajāṅgha) ...	70, 71	Pushkaravara-Saṁdara ...	173, 179, 180, 182
Prathamānuṣṭaya ...	110n	Pancharika (Gopadhara) ...	193	Pushpachūḍā ...	195
Prathamā-pāṭha ...	109	Do. (a Rudra) ...	206	Pushpadanta (Tirthadhara) ...	18-21, 25, 38, 59, 192
Pratibhūti ...	230	Do. (Ardhachakra) ...	224	Pushpadanta (Deva) ...	180
Pratichhanna ...	270	Do. (Deva) ...	180	Do. (Mukhya pañchamaṣṭaka Dharma-pravartaka) ...	216
Pratichhārya ...	114, 132, 156, 190, 213	Do. (lake) ...	175	Pushpadanta (aṅga) ...	217
Prati-Indra ...	228, 230, 231, 231n	Panchariki ...	74, 178	Pushpadanta (Ārya) ...	218
Pratindra ...	74n	Pannata (ganga) ...	41n	Pushpaka-vimāna ...	130n, 131n
Pratibramana ...	214, 215n	Punya (a deva) ...	131	Pushpasena ...	24, 26, 29, 30-32, 35, 40, 43-46, 46n, 47, 57, 58, 62
Pratimā ...	191n	Punya ...	30	Pushpasena-munipungava-Vāmana ...	43
Prati-Nārāyaṇa ...	187, 222, 222n	Punyaśāstrakāṇa ...	218	Pushpasena Vāmana ...	40, 58
Pratiripa (of Bhūtās) ...	230	Punyaprabha ...	181	Pushpavati ...	195
Do. (Indra) ...	230	Punyaśāstra-kāṭhā ...	157	Pushpaka-gacchāṇa ...	41n
Pratishāṭhāpana ...	219	Purāṇa ...	5n, 6	Pushya ...	182, 194
Pratiruti ...	223	Purimatalapera ...	103	Pushpa ...	201n
Pratirvāti ...	223	Pūṇa (Indra) ...	229	Putra ...	215
Prati-Vāṇasena ...	168, 222	Pūṇa (Goddess) ...	202, 203
Pratyākhyāna ...	215, 215n	Pūṇabhadrā (of Yakshas) ...	230
Pratyākhyāna-pūva ...	219n	Do. (Indra) ...	230
Pravachana ...	230	Purādā ...	88
Pravachana-Sāra ...	43	Purabita ...	70, 101, 102, 119, 137
Prayāṇa ...	193	Purusha ...	230
Prāyāchitta ...	214	Purushadatta ...	221, 222, 223
Prithvi ...	192	Purushadattā ...	193, 200
Prithvilevi ...	221	Purushaprabha ...	230
Prithvībhūṣiṇī ...	178n	Purushapūjārīka ...	221-222
Prīṭikā ...	184	Purushārtha-tidhikya-pāya ...	187n
Priyadarśana (deva) ...	179	Purushasūta ...	221-223
Priyadarśanā ...	117	Purushottama of Kimpuru-shas ...	230
Priyadarśin ...	230	Purushottama (Ardha-chakravartin) ...	221, 222
Priyākāṇṭhi ...	117, 119, 135, 162, 194
Priyamitra ...	117

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Rāja-Rāja I ...	3, 15, 17	Ravivarmān ...	5, 5n.	Rūpyavara-dīpa ...	174
Do. III ...	1, 21, 24,	Rea, A. ...	15n, 16,	Rūpyavara-Samudra ...	174
27, 33, 35, 39, 47, 50, 61			16n
Rājasintha ...	14, 16	Revati ...	213n	S
Do. (period) ...	17	Do. (nakshatra) ...	182, 194	Śabala ...	172
Do. (style of Architecture) ...	16, 16n	Riddhi ...	176	Śabara ...	172
Rājendra-Chola I ...	14, 15,	Riddhi-prāpta-Ārya ...	176	Śabdachaturmukha ...	7
	17, 22, 49	Rijugati ...	118, 124	Śākhā-viniyoga ...	57
Rājmati ...	153, 154n	Rijukulā ...	118n	Śākhā ...	65, 82-85,
Rājya ...	166, 170,	Rijupālaka ...	118n	90, 92, 119, 126, 150,
	183, 184	Rijuvālaka ...	118n	162-164, 231
Rakshas (of Pisāchas) ...	230	Rishabhā ...	82	Sādān ...	64n, 187
Rākshasa (class) ...	109, 171,	Rishabhadeva (Tirtha- kara) ...	5n, 34, 35, 63, 63n, 64-67,		188, 219
	229, 230		78, 79, 79n, 82, 84, 85,	Sadyajāta ...	82
Rākshasa-Rākshasa ...	230		85n, 86, 87, 89-96, 98, 99,	Sāgara ...	78, 166-
Rakshita (mother of Tīr- thanikara) ...	194		101-103, 111, 113, 116,		169, 193, 229, 233
Rakshita (Ārya) ...	195		117, 117n, 130, 155, 161,	Sāgaropama ...	166, 167,
Rakta (colour) ...	192		167, 191, 192, 220, 225,		168, 169, 172
Raktā (river) ...	175, 176		225n, 226	Sagara ...	220
Raktodā ...	175, 176	Rishabhādeva (work) ...	101, 69n,	Sāgara ...	190
Rāma ...	9, 221,		76n, 81, 85n, 93n, 95n,	Sāgarasena ...	70, 71
	227, 234		96n, 100n, 101n, 103n,	Sahadevi ...	220
Rāma (a Baladeva) ...	223, 223n		105n, 107n, 108n, 110n,	Sakāśrapurusha ...	208
Rāmā ...	192		111n, 115n, 155n, 186n,	Sahasamāga Himāśtata ...	41
Rāmachandra (Baladeva) ...	223		191n	Salusārā (heaven) ...	183, 231,
Rāmānāja ...	4, 7, 9	Rishabhāsena ...	110, 113		232
Ramanāya ...	178	Rishi ...	230n	Do. (Kālpavāsi-deva),	100n,
Rāma Rāya ...	8	Rishipāla ...	230n		121n
Rāmasena ...	216	Rishi-samudāya ...	54, 61	Sahasamravana ...	154
Ramya ...	178	Rishivādita ...	230n	Śallabhadra ...	230
Ramya ...	175, 177,	Rita ...	165	Śakas ...	177
	178	Rohini (nakshatra) ...	182, 192,	Sākhā ...	228
Rasa ...	176		194	Śakata-mukhya ...	103
Rasaparityāga ...	214	Do. (mother of Bala- deva) ...	9, 213, 223	Śakra ...	90
Rash(nakṣas, the) ...	3, 5, 6	Do. (mother of Rāma) ...	223n	Śakti ...	198, 205-
Rathanandana ...	206	Do. (Pitṛādēvā) ...	234		208
Ratharāga ...	166	Do. (Yakṣinī) ...	193, 198	Śākyamuni ...	108n
Ratna ...	71, 137,	Ratā ...	175, 176	Śāla (tree) ...	118, 124,
	171	Ratāśyā ...	175, 176		193, 195
Ratna-karaṇḍaka ...	77n	Romaka ...	177	Sala ...	106, 106n,
Ratnapradā (earth) ...	171, 172,	Roy Chowdhury, D. P. ...	162n		107-109, 112, 113
	229, 230n	Ruchakavara-dīpa ...	173	Sala ...	106n
Ratnapuri ...	194	Ruchakavara-Samudra ...	173	Sālā ...	193
Ratna-rūpā ...	82	Rudra (an Amarakumāra) ...	172	Śālāpurusha ...	64, 187n
Ratnasāuchayā ...	178	Do. (a Nārada) ...	225	Sallakṣana ...	6, 68, 77,
Rati ...	193	Do. (of Rudra) ...	226		77n
Ratikara ...	181	Rudra ...	187, 223,	Sama ...	104, 105
Ratimukta ...	134		226	Sama ...	172
Ratipriya ...	230	Rukmin ...	175	Sama ...	202, 209-212
Rātrimati ...	136, 153	Rukmiṇī ...	227	Samādhī ...	2, 39, 40,
Rātrishenā ...	218	Rūpa ...	167n		42-45, 61, 62
Rāvaṇa ...	213n, 222	Rūpāpālī ...	230	Samādhi-gupta ...	213
Ravikṛti ...	5	Rūpyakūlā ...	175, 176

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Samādhi-gupti Bhaṭṭāraka ...	216	Saṅgama ...	117, 122, 123, 163, 164	Sarvaśānya ...	60, 62
Samāna ...	230N	Saṅgha ...	40, 41, 41N, 64, 116	Sarvāmbhūti ...	212N
Sāmānika ...	175, 228	Saṅgita-maṇḍapa ...	18, 23, 24, 27, 29, 31-34, 39, 57, 59, 60, 63, 64, 124, 125, 131, 157, 160, 161	Sarvārtha-māgadhi ...	110
Samantabhadra ...	41, 41N, 216	Saṅjñā-Saṅjñā ...	166	Sarvārtha-siddhi ...	69, 77, 78, 108, 184, 192, 194, 213N, 233, 234
Sāmānya-Siddha ...	64N, 187, 189	Śaṅkha-śākhā ...	9, 19	Sarvātmabhūta ...	212
Samavāsaṇa ...	27, 62N, 65, 103-105, 108N, 110, 111, 111N, 112, 115, 116, 118, 124-128, 130-132, 136, 136, 158, 161, 163, 164	Śaṅkha (conch) ...	153, 201N	Sarva Śrī ...	218
Samavāsaṇa-Stavana ...	105	Do. (midst) ...	130, 130N	Sarvāstramahājvalā ...	234
Samavāya-dāga ...	110N, 219N	Do. (island mountain) ...	179	Sarvasā ...	194
Samaya ...	165	Śaṅkhaśrīvaka ...	212N	Śāśvadvatās ...	196, 197
Samayadvāṅkara ...	44	Śaṅkhaśrīvaka ...	173	Śāśvaddevi ...	234
Samayaśāra ...	43	Śaṅkhaśrīvaka-Samudra ...	173	Śaṅkhaśrīvaka ...	177
Sāmāyika ...	214	Saṁmati (Manu) ...	224	Śāstā ...	33, 202
Sāmha ...	195	Do. (Atitakāla-Tīrthāṅkara) ...	190	Sasugandha ...	181
Sāmbhāṅkha ...	88	Saṁhita ...	230N	Śārabhishak ...	182, 192
Sāmbhavanātha ...	192	Śānta ...	190	Śātakṣīrvaṅka ...	212N
Sāmbhinnamati ...	67	Śāntā (Vakhaṅgi) ...	193, 200	Śātakṣīrvaṅka ...	212N
Sāmitis ...	219	Śāntaladevi ...	7	Satākalaka ...	230
Śāṅkha ...	178	Śānti ...	110	Satamati ...	67
Sāṅkha ...	198	Śāntidevi ...	7	Sātira (deva) ...	121N, 125
Sāṁmetā ...	105	Śānti-maṇḍapa ...	34-37, 49, 50	Do. (Indra) ...	120N, 231
Sāṁmetā-Sikhara ...	193, 195	Śāntinātha (Tīrthāṅkara) ...	8, 63N, 194, 220, 226	Do. (kalpa) ...	183, 231
Sāṁmoha ...	230	Do. (Chakravartin) ...	220	Sātara ...	207
Sāṁparyakā ...	118, 132, 156	Do. (Kāmadēva) ...	227	Sāttikīka ...	198
Sāṁdṛa ...	174, 179, 180	Sānu ...	174N	Satpurusha (Indra) ...	230
Sāṁdravijaya ...	135, 147, 150, 194, 220	Sāptachakṣāda ...	107, 112, 131	Do. (Kimpurusha class) ...	230
Sāṁvara ...	193	Śārabha ...	207	Sātrāṅjaya (mount) ...	105, 105N, 193N
Sāṁvara (tatto) ...	215N	Śāraṇa ...	120N, 121N	Sātrāṅjaya-saṁhātmya ...	133, 154, 154N
Sāṁvaranātha ...	213N	Sāra-Saṅgraha ...	6	Sātara ...	182
Sāṁvātrara ...	105	Sārasvata ...	94, 94N, 232	Sāya ...	214, 219
Sāṁyak-darīana ...	72	Sarasvatī (devi) ...	234	Satyabhāmā ...	136, 153
Sāṁyama ...	214	Do. (Gachchha) ...	41N	Sāyaki ...	226
Śāṁśchāra ...	182	Sarī ...	178	Satyaprasāda-pūrva ...	219N
Sāṁtukumāra (deva) ...	83, 95, 120	Śāśvāpṛabhā ...	171	Satyāmaya, Palakosi ...	5
Do. (kalpa) ...	183, 220, 231, 232	Sarvabhadrā (of Yakshas) ...	230	Satya Śrī ...	168N
Do. (Indra) ...	120N, 121N, 126, 220, 231	Do. (Grāhavya heaven) ...	184	Saucha ...	214
Do. (Chakravartin) ...	220	Sarvabhūtahita Bhaṭṭāraka ...	216	Sandharma ...	90, 91, 185, 231, 232
Do. (Kāmadēva) ...	227	Sarvagundha ...	181	Sandharmendra ...	9, 65, 66, 82-84, 87, 89, 90-93, 95, 96, 111, 115-117, 119, 120, 120N, 121N, 122, 126, 127, 135, 150, 151, 163, 164, 229, 231
Sāṁdarbha ...	178	Sarvāṅga ...	159, 160, 195, 208	Saṁmanasa (garden) ...	83, 175, 180
Śāṅgam (age) ...	40N	Sarvaśā ...	202	Saṁmanasa (mountain) ...	177

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Saunagasa (Graiveyaka heaven) ...	184	Silpa-śāstra ...	106n	Sphatika (amudāśa) ...	184
Śauripura ...	194	Simandhara ...	224	Śraddha ...	157
Śauripura ...	134, 135, 146-148	Śimāṅkara ...	224	Śrāvaka ...	40n, 110n
Sauvīm ...	175	Śimha ...	41	Śrāvaka ...	132
Savili-maḍu ...	53	Sidhanandi ...	6, 41	Śrāvaka ...	182, 192, 194
Śayya ...	231	Sidhapura ...	66	Śrāvaka Beṅga ...	4n, 6-8, 41, 41n, 42, 48, 62n, 85n, 186, 191, 227
Sēmpor-Kunṭu ...	2, 49	Sidhapuri ...	178, 192	Śrāvasti ...	192, 220
Sēmpor-Kunṭam ...	2	Sidharatha ...	134	Śrāvastī ...	171, 172
Sena ...	41	Siddhānta ...	81, 109, 115, 121, 122, 132, 156, 190	Śrāvastī ...	70
Sena ...	192	Simhasena (father of Tirthankara) ...	194	Śrāvastī ...	101-104, 111, 119
Śendamaṅgalam ...	39, 47	Do. (Gaṇadhara) ...	193	Śrāvastī ...	103n, 111, 113
Senā ...	202	Sindhu (past Tirthankara) ...	190	Śrāvastī ...	192, 221, 226
Śengadichelvan ...	38, 48, 59	Do. (country) ...	41n, 178	Śrāvastī ...	175
Śeṅgeṇi ...	47	Sindhu (river) ...	175-177	Śrāvastī ...	190
Śeṣa-pāṇḍi ...	210	Sindhuvāra-doṇḍa ...	174	Śrāvastī ...	227
Śeshavati ...	221	Sindhuvāra-Samudra ...	174	Śrāvastī ...	194
Śhaṅḍa-mudrā ...	207	Singamōḍu ...	53	Śrāvastī ...	65, 73
Sharmukha (Hindu God) ...	204	Singha ...	231n	Do. (father of Tirthankara) ...	192
Do. (Yaksha) ...	195, 204, 205	Sirisha ...	193	Do. (a Kāmadeva) ...	227
Sharma, S. K. ...	4	Śiśya ...	40, 41	Do. (Atalabala-Tirthankara) ...	190
Skandhaśālī ...	230	Śitā (river) ...	175-177, 221	Do. (Akampana) ...	92
Siddha ...	64n, 96, 108, 108n, 168, 181, 183-185, 187-189, 189n, 226	Śitalanātha ...	33, 160, 192, 202, 226	Do. (Lord of Pushkara-vata-Samudra) ...	180
Siddha-śāstra ...	108n, 183, 184	Sītodā ...	175, 176, 177	Śhanti ...	70, 72, 74n, 103n
Siddha-kūṭa ...	69	Śittannavāṣal ...	62n, 111n, 162	Śrīnivāsa ...	197n
Siddha-kūṭa-chaityālaya ...	68	Śiva (Hindu God) ...	12, 17, 97, 203	Śrīpālaleva-Traividya ...	45n
Siddhārtha ...	117, 119, 119n	Śiva (father of a Vāsudeva) ...	221	Śrīprabha ...	180
Do. (father of Tirthankara) ...	123, 194	Śivadevi ...	135, 147, 150, 194	Śrīpālala ...	200
Do. (forest) ...	95	Śivagaṇa ...	190	Śrī Purāṇa ...	64, 72, 73, 74n, 76, 78, 80, 81, 82, 89, 91, 96, 104, 105, 117, 119, 122, 133, 139, 141, 146, 152, 154, 154n, 157, 225
Do. (a Pūrvaśāra) ...	215	Śiva Guṇṭi Bhattacharya ...	216	Śrīśāstra ...	116
Siddhārthā ...	192	Śi-yu-ti ...	20	Śrīvarman ...	66, 67
Siddhārthacharya ...	217	Śivakoṭi ...	216	Śrīvata ...	193
Siddhārthavana (also Sid-dhārtha forest) ...	94-98	Smish, V. A. ...	62n	Śrī-viksha ...	193
Siddha-śikha ...	116	Somā (Ārya) ...	193
Siddha-śikha ...	184	Soma (Amudāśa) ...	184
Siddhāyika ...	195, 211	Do. (father of a Vāsu-deva) ...	221
Siddhāyika ...	195, 197, 211	Somakirti ...	93
Siddhi ...	108	Somaprabha ...	92, 101-104, 111, 113
Śikharin ...	175	Somaripa ...	184
Śikharaka ...	108	Somasarman ...	157-159
Śilappadikānam ...	4, 40n	Someivara I, Abavamalla ...	7
Śevā ...	224	Sphatika (crystal) ...	114

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Srut	207	Suddhamati	190	Supratishtha (father of
Sruta	188	Sudharma (a Baladeva) ...	223	Tirthankara) ...	192
Sruta-jñāna	65n, 103n, 110, 188	Do. (a Gaṇadhara) ...	215	Do. (a Rādra) ...	226
Sruta-kavali	4n, 216	Sudharmacharya	216	Sūra	194
Śrutasāgara Bhaṭṭāraka ...	216	Sūtra	90	Sunadeva	212
Śruti	110	Sugandhi	179	Suranya	194
Śtanita-kumāra	109, 128, 128n, 229	Suggaladevi	7	Suranyaka	178
Stevenson, Mrs.	9, 9n, 10, 10n, 63, 63n, 64n, 80n, 94n, 117n, 118n, 119n, 230n	Sugriva	192	Surasati	95
Sthānat	110n	Sukachchā	178	Sutāshtaka	178
Sthāna-śāga	110n, 219n	Sūkara	203	Sūrasena	178
Sthalagurūṣa	4	Sūla-lāṭhāna	65, 116	Sūrya-jāli	23
Siṃhāvira-kalpa	103, 104	Sūtra (deva)	120n, 121, 121n, 125	Sarūpa (of Bhūtas) ...	230
Śūpas	3, 108, 113, 181	Do. (Indra)	120n, 231	Do. (Indra)	230
Śruti	116, 214	Do. (Kālpa)	183, 231, 232	Sarūpa Vaksha	230
Subāhu	74, 75, 77	Do. (planet)	182	Sārya	194
Subālā	213n	Sūkshma-kriyā-pratipatti ...	116	Sārya-prabha	117
Subha (a Gaṇadhara)	195	Sūla	201n	Sārya-vanī	92, 176
Subhā (city)	178	Sulasa (tree)	229n	Sukama	167, 169, 212
Subhadrā (a deva)	181	Sulasa (future Tirthankara according to Svet.) ...	213n	Sukama Dushama	167
Do. (Yaksha)	230	Sulochana	218	Sukama Sukama	167
Do. (an Āchārāṅga-dhara)	216	Sumadhi	213n	Sutma (city)	73, 178
Subhadrā (mother of Vijaya Balabhadra) ...	222	Sumana (Ārya)	193	Do. (mother of Tirthankara) ...	192
Subhadracharya	217	Sumanasa (Graiveyaka rove)	184	Sutāra	179
Subhāṅkara	157, 158	Sumāngalā	192	Sutāra	193, 202
Subhānu	143	Sumatinātha	192	Sutāraka	202
Subhauma	220	Semitra (father of Tirthankara) ...	194	Sūtra	110n
Subhūma	193	Do. (father of Sagara Chakrin) ...	220	Sūtra-lāṭhāna-śāga ...	110n, 219n
Subrahmanya (Hindu God) ...	204	Sunandā	65, 85, 87, 192	Suvapri	178
Subrahmanya Ayyar, K. V.	1n, 3, 3n, 47n	Sunandāśrīvika	212n	Suvapri	175, 176
Sochakshushman	180	Sundaramūrti	9	Suvapri	174
Sochl	230	Sundari	66, 85	Suvapri	174
Sochl (Ārya)	195	Supadmā	178	Suvapri	178
Sudarśana (father of Tirthankara) ...	194	Suparna-kumara	109, 128n, 228, 229	Suvapri	230n
Do. (a Baladeva)	223	Suparivanātha	191, 192	Suvapri (mother of Tirthankara) ...	194
Do. (Graiveyaka rove)	184	Supariva (future Tirthankara)	212	Suvapri (Āryadevi) ...	218
Do. (a vimala)	95	Do. (uncle of Vardhamāna)	212	Suyāna (Ārya)	193, 194
Sudarśana (mother of Suprabha-Baladeva) ...	223	Suprabha (a Baladeva) ...	223	Svādhyāya	214, 215
Sudatta	190	Do. (a deva)	180	Svāmi (Rishabhadeva) ...	82, 85, 86, 94-104, 111, 156
		Suprabhā	223	Svara	88
		Suprabuddha (Graiveyaka rove)	184	Svara	83
		Supratishtha (a banner) ...	130	Svasti	168, 190, 191, 193
				Svasti	182

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Svayambhūṭ (Ardhachakrin) ...	221-223	Tamaṣ-prabhā ...	171, 221	Tirumalai-devi-pura ...	58
Do. (future Tirthankara) ...	213	Tāndālam ...	13	Tirumalapādi ...	22
Svayambhūṭamāna-dvīpa. ...	174, 181, 182	Taṇḍuka (tree) ...	193	Tirumanḡal-Ājvār ...	2, 9
Svayambhūṭamāna-Samudra ...	174, 179, 182	Tanuvāta ...	170	Tirupati ...	22
Svayambuddha ...	67-69, 213	Tanuvāta-valaya ...	170	Tirupokkumam ...	2
Svayāṁprabha (future Tirthankara) ...	212	Tapāchāra ...	215	Tiruppanamūr ...	42
Do. (mint) ...	66, 67,	Tapas ...	176, 214	Tiruvallam ..	22
Do. (mount) ...	181	Tapāchāranya ...	65, 118	Tiruvalluvar ...	4
Svayāṁprabhā (name of Śreyāmā in previous birth) ...	103	Tāra ...	220	Tiruveppainallūr ...	47
Svayāṁprabhā (wife of Lalitāṅga) ...	69, 70	Tāraka (a Prati-Vāsudeva). ...	222	Tiryaṅchāṣ ...	178
Svayāṁprabha ...	67	Do. (of Pīśāchas) ...	230	Tōṇḍa (Tōṇḍal) ...	3
Svayāṁprabha (future Tirthankara) ...	212	Tarjini ...	99, 161	Tōṇḍaimaṇḍalam ...	3
Śveta ...	230	Tattvārthādhigama-Sūtra ...	94, 103, 110, 111, 178, 215, 218, 219	Tōṇḍra ...	3
Śvetāmbara ...	4, 4, 5, 41, 117, 118, 190, 190, 191, 193, 194, 196, 197, 197, 198-211, 212, 213	Tattvārthā-Sūtra ...	41	Tōraṅga ...	15, 121, 122
Śvetāpatha ...	5	Tattvas ...	215	Trailokyānātha ...	10, 18, 50, 52, 60, 63-65, 82, 86
Swāmī ...	7	Telingana ...	18	Trailokyavallabha ...	58
Swaminātha Paṇḍita ...	130	Telugu Chola, the ...	3	Trata ...	170
Śyāmbhūṭamānāri ...	43	Tenparinikkunru ...	59	Trata-nāḍi ...	170, 171, 183,
Śyāmī (Āryā) ...	193	Thaka ...	41	Trata-reṇu ...	166
Do. (Vakshī) ...	193, 200	Thomas, F. W. ...	186, 190	Trayastrikā ...	228
Do. (mother of Tirthankara) ...	194	Tigichchha ...	175	Triśāṅga ...	20, 28, 202
Śyāma (Vaksha) ...	193, 201-203	Tirtha ...	64, 118	Tribhuvana-svayambhū- Bhātāraka ...	216
Śyāma (colour) ...	194, 198-201, 203, 204, 206, 207, 210	Tirthankara ...	1, 5, 7, 9, 10, 10, 12, 13, 18, 19, 24, 27-29, 32, 34, 38, 39, 41, 62, 63, 64, 64, 65, 66, 67, 69, 76, 77, 79, 81, 82-84, 86, 90, 94, 96, 101, 103-105, 108, 110, 110, 111, 115-119, 124, 128-133, 135, 136, 136, 147, 150, 155, 155, 156-161, 163, 164, 168, 169, 175, 181, 185, 186, 187, 187, 188, 190-212, 212, 213, 213, 218, 220-222, 222, 223, 225-227, 232, 234	Do. description of ...	25
Śyāmala (colour) ...	198	Tirthankara of the future age (Bhāvi- bhā) ...	212	Triśūpa-Basti-Ardha- maṇḍapa ...	18, 21, 23-27, 36, 37, 54, 160
Śyāmanara-dvīpa ...	174	Do. of the past age (Atitābhā). ...	190	Do. description of ...	26
Śyāmanara-Samudra ...	174	Do. of the present age (Vartamānakāla). ...	190	Triśūpa-Basti-maṇḍapa ...	24
				Triśūpa-Basti-mukhaman- ḍapa ...	18, 26, 27
				Do. description of ...	26
				Triloka-hindu-sāra-pūrva. ...	219
				Trilokasāra ...	83, 93, 120, 125-129, 130, 157, 170, 171, 173, 178, 179, 181, 190, 212, 220, 221, 229
				Trimukha ...	193, 198
				Trimūrti ...	9
				Trisālā ...	117, 119, 194
				Trishashṭisālākāpurusha ...	64, 222
Tajjara ...	228	Tirukōṭṭalam ...	22
Talla II ...	6, 7	Tirumalai ...	62, 111
Tāla ...	128
Tālī ...	203, 210
Tala-pi-cha ...	2

	PAGE
Trishashṭilalākōpuruṣa- charitra 105, 168n, 171n, 191n, 196, 220, 221, 222n, 223n, 227n, 230n
Trisūla (trident) 200, 203
Trisūlam 21n
Trīṣṭya-piṣṭha 109
Trivāṭkā 194
Trivikram 136, 142, 143, 152, 153
Trutirṇu 166
Tulasī (plant) 229
Tuluva 8
Tudhuru (Gandharva) 230
Do. (Yaksha) 193, 199
Tudhuru (vṛkṣa) 229
Tuṇḍaka-vishaya 3
Tuṇḍita 3
Turyāṅgam 78, 107
Tushita [n.] 94, 94n, 232
Tūshṭika 230
Tyāga 214
U
Ubhayaśāśhālāvicakra- varṇin 43
Uchchārapāchārya 218
Udāhī-kumāras 109, 128n, 229
Udaka 230
Udāhāsa 179
Udāstamaka 179
Udāika 212
Udayadeva-paṇḍita 5
Udayaprabhu 212n
Udāyī 212
Uddhāra-pāya 165
Uḍa 177
Uḍupati 131
Ugm 93
Ugrasena 71, 133- 136, 138, 146, 153, 153n
Ugra-vākya 92, 153n
Ujjinta 156n
Umā 203
Umāchārya 216
Umāsvāmī 41, 103n, 175n, 216n, 218, 218n, 219n
Umāsvāmī-āchārya 94
Upadeśa 38, 46, 67, 77, 113

	PAGE
Upadeśa-mudrā 113
Upādhyāya 64n, 187, 188, 219
Upaṛima-Graivēyaka 192
Upaṛima-tanvātā-valaya 184
Upāsaka-dāśā-āṅga 110n
Upāsahādhyāyana-āṅga 110n, 219n
Upasarga 189
Upavāna-āhūmi 107, 112, 131
Urdhva-loka (upper world) 183
Urjayanta 156-158
Uthiṣṭha-āṅga-āhūmi 165, 166
Uthiṣṭha 162
Utpāda-pūva 219n
Utpala 205, 211
Utpala-Khetapura 70
Utpalla-dhara 210
Utsāha 190
Utsaṁjñāṁjñā 166
Utsarpiṇi 166, 168, 169, 176, 185, 222
Uttara 34
Uttara-vigraha 26, 197, 201, 201n, 209
Uttēka-āṅgula 166
Uttama-āṅga-āhūmi 72
Uttama-kṣamā 214
Uttama 190
Uttarabhādrapada 182
Uttarāṣṭ 182
Uttarakuru 72, 177, 178, 180
Uttara Puruṣa 6
Uttarāṣṭhāṣṭhā 182, 192, 194
Uvachchēri 48, 58
V
Vachanagupti 215
Vachanātīya 213
Vaḍavāmukha 179
Vādīśā-āṅgāṣṭra 45n
Vādirāja 5
Vādā 108
Vāhana 12, 33-35, 120n, 125, 126, 158, 160, 190-209, 209n, 210, 211, 211n, 232, 234

	PAGE
Vahni 94, 94n, 232
Vaicha 30
Vaichaya 29, 57, 58
Vaidūrya 174
Vaidūryavara-āṅga 174
Vaidūryavara-Samudra 174
Vaijānta (heaven) 184, 192
Do. (gate) 179
Vaijāntan (brother of Vajranābhi) 74, 75
Vaijānti (Banavāsi) 5n
Do. (a city) 178
Do. (mother of Bala- deva Nandi) 223
Vaidūryika 228
Vaikunṭhanātha (temple) 11, 14-17
Vaikunṭha Perumāl (tem- ple) 11, 15
Vaimānika devas 183, 187, 228, 231, 231n
Vairā 184
Vairāgya 66, 93, 118, 154, 184, 232
Vaimāyā 195, 204
Vaiśrochana (Indra) 229
Vaiśrochana (Anandī) 184
Vaiśroṇi 195, 204
Vaiśroṇī (Yakṣiṇī) 195, 207
Do. (Vidyādevī) 234
Vaiśya 90, 134
Vaiśyopriya 214
Vajra 128, 128n, 198, 200-202, 204, 211
Vajra-danda 195
Vajrasāgha 64, 69, 70, 72, 74, 110
Vajrasābha 193
Vajrasābhā 65, 73-78
Vajrasena 76, 77
Vajrasena Tirthāṅkara 76, 77
Vajrasrīnkhalā (Vidyādevī) 234
Do. (Yakṣiṇī) 193, 199
Vajravara-dvīpa 174
Vajravara-Samudra 174
Vallabhikā 230
Vallī-āhūmi 107, 112, 131
Vaḥṇimalā 6
Valm 172
Vālukā-prabhā 171, 221, 222

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Vāmā	194	Vardhamāna Temple (Inscriptions).	49	Vāta-valaya	170
Vāmana	43, 45, 58, 59, 62, 105n	Do. (paintings) ...	62	Vatsā (province in E. Vileha)	73, 178
Vamā	92, 93, 117	Do. (Prāṇa) ...	39	Vatsa (deity in Ārya-khanda)	178
Vamā (beli)	171	Do. (processional path) ...	38	Vatākavall	178
Vana	83, 175	Do. (Sānti-mayāpā) ...	34	Vatsarāja	227
Vanasputikāyika	178n	Do. (Munivāsa) ...	35	Vayubhūti	215
Vānasyantaras	109, 190, 230n	Do. (the Well) ...	38	Vāyukāyika	178n
Vāñchuka	177	Do. (mūḍha-mayāpā) ...	23	Vedās	10
Vandana	214	Vardhamāna Tirthaṅkara (scenes from the life of) ...	116	Vedā	106n
Vaṅga	178	Vardhamāna-arāhamanāpā. 18-27, 33, 37, 51n, 52n, 54, 161		Vedikā	106, 106n, 107-109, 112, 113, 114, 131, 132
Vāṇijya	79n, 225n	Vardhamāna	128n, 190	Vegavati (R.)	1
Vaprā (mother of Tirthaṅkara)	194	Vardhamāna-mūḍhamanāpā	18, 23, 26, 27, 51n, 52n, 57, 58, 59	Velādhārī	179n
Do. (mother of Jaya Chakrin)	220	Vardhamāna Purāṇa	64, 117	Velamba	179, 229
Do. (a province)	178	Vardhamāna-nyavasthā	90	Vēli	42, 51
Vaprakāvati	178	Vardhamāna-nāḥila Tirthaṅkara	190	Vepa	229
Varada	160, 197, 197n, 198-212	Vardhamāna Temple	16	Venus	182
Varada-kāṣṭha	197	Vardhamāna Svāmī	16	Vepulhārī	229
Varaṣarāja (temple)	27	Varuṇa (soothsayer)	135, 142	Vetaraṇi	172
Do. (God)	197n	Do. (deity)	178	Vetasa	195
Varadatta (king)	155, 156	Do. (dīva)	180	Vibhūti	97, 98
Do. (an ascetic)	157, 159	Do. (Yaksha)	195, 207	Vibhūti	177
Do. (a Gaṇadhara)	195	Varuṇaprabhā	180	Vidarbha (Gaṇadhara)	193
Varāhaka	193	Varuṇa Śai	218	Vikāṣa	66, 68, 70, 73, 74, 83, 95, 176, 178
Varanandi	193, 200, 201	Vārūṇi	193	Vikāṣa-kāṣṭha	95, 175, 176, 178
Vārāṇast	193, 220, 221	Vārūṇavara-dīpa	173, 180	Vidhātṛika	230n
Varasena	218	Vārūṇavara-Samudra	173, 179, 180	Vidūta	195, 204
Vardhamāna (temple)	1, 8, 10, 15, 16n, 18-20, 22, 24, 25, 27, 28, 31, 33, 35-39, 51, 57-63, 124, 125, 160, 161, 181, 215	Vasatī	23	Vidūmāprabhā	205
Do. (Tirthaṅkara)	13, 17-20, 27, 35, 52, 57, 63n, 64, 116, 117, 117n, 118, 119, 121-124, 130, 135, 161, 162, 163, 168, 169, 194, 211, 212, 215	Vasava	230	Vidyādevī	234
Do. (Mukhya-Paṇḍita Kāla-Dharma pravartakā)	216	Vasavachandra	216	Vidyādhara	66, 67, 67n, 68, 87-89, 95, 99, 100, 117, 152, 178
Vardhamāna Temple (the cloister)	32	Vasishṭha (ascetic)	133	Vidyānanda	216
Do. (Description)	28	Vasishṭha (Indra)	229	Vidyānanda-pūrṇa	219n
		Vasīṣṭha	228	Vidyārthana	1, 40
		Vastrāṅga[m]	78, 107	Vidyāyakti	208
		Vasuchandra	5	Vidyut-kumāra (also Vidyut-kumāra)	109, 128n, 229
		Vasudeva	134-135, 137-139, 141, 142, 145, 146, 147, 149, 150, 151, 222	Vidyutprabhā	208
		Vasudeva (Kāmadeva)	227	Vidyutprabhā	177
		Do. (a king)	117n	Vighna-viniyaka	230
		Vāṇdevas	168, 221-223, 225, 227	Vijaya	130
		Vāsupājya	18, 21, 25, 39, 54, 192, 221, 226	Vijaya (future Tirthaṅkara). 10, 213n
		Vāta-kumāra	109, 128n, 229	Do. (father of Tirthaṅkara)	194
				Do. (father of Jaya-Chakrin)	220
				Do. (father of Sudarṣana Baladeva)	223

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Vijaya (a Baladeva) ...	223	Vimaraiśer (Vima) ...	50	Vyākhyā-prajñapti ...	110n, 219n
Do. (a Pūrvaḥkara) ...	215	Vinā ...	214	Vyantara ...	105, 109, 120n, 132, 153, 164, 171, 230n
Do. (a Yaksha) ...	193, 201	Vinami ...	98-100	Vyantara-devas ...	114, 132, 179, 187, 228-230, 231n,
Do. (brother of Vajra-nābhi) ...	74, 76	Vīranya ...	214		235
Do. (of group of Vyantaras) ...	235	Vinayāditya (of Western Chālukya) ...	5	Vyantara-devās ...	114
Do. (heaven) ...	184, 192,	Vicayāditya II (Hoysala). ...	7	Vyakārā-pūya ...	165
	194	Vindhyagiri ...	85n	Vyaprata-kriyā-nirpiti ...	65, 116
Do. (gate) ...	179	Vipākaiśūra-aṅga ...	110n, 219n	Vyutarga ...	214
Vijayā (Vakshini) ...	195, 206,	Vippēdu-nāda (Virpēdu-nāda) ...	53
	207	Viprā ...	194
Do. (mother of Tirthan-kara) ...	192	Vipula ...	213
Do. (city) ...	178	Vira ...	117
Vijaya-Devī ...	192	Vitrabhadra ...	235, 235n
Vijayāditya ...	5	Virāchārya ...	6
Vijayanagara, the ...	27, 28, 31, 44, 114n	Virajā ...	178
Do. (king) ...	3, 8, 23, 30, 57-59	Vīra-mukha ...	168
Do. (city) ...	29, 44	Vīrasana ...	26, 38, 46
Vijaya-pañjita ...	5	Vīraseca ...	216
Vijayapurī ...	178	Vīrasenacharya ...	6
Vijayarāja ...	227	Vīrpēdu-nāda ...	50, 53
Vijayārtha ...	68, 99, 100, 176-178	Vīryādhara ...	215
Vijayasenacharya ...	217	Vīryanuvāda-pūva ...	219n
Vijimbhika ...	118, 124	Viśākha ...	215
Vikrama Chola ...	21, 22, 24, 52, 54, 57	Viśakhā ...	182, 192
Vikramāditya ...	105n	Viśakhacharya ...	4, 217
Vikramāditya II (Western Chālukya) ...	3, 5	Viśāla ...	230n
Vikramāditya V (Chālukya of Kalyāṇi) ...	7	Viśalanayana ...	226
Vikriyā ...	176	Viśvā ...	192
Vikriyā-piddhi-prāptas ...	108	Vishni ...	192
Vima ...	50	Vishnu (Hindu God) ...	12, 17, 188, 197n
Vimala (deva) ...	180	Do. (Pañcha Sarvānga-dhara) ...	215
Do. (future Tirthan-kara) ...	213	Do. (parent of Tirthan-kara) ...	192
Vimalāditya ...	6	Vishvudhara ...	216
Vimalanātha ...	194, 221, 226	Vishgulī ...	192
Vimalaprabha (past Tirthan-kara) ...	190	Vishṇu Purāṇa ...	79n, 85n, 225n
Do. (a deva) ...	180	Vishṇuvaradhana (alias Ritti) ...	4, 7
Vimalavahana ...	224	Do. (Vira Narasimha II). ...	47
Vimalaśvara ...	190	Vishvakṣena ...	235
Vīmāna ...	12, 18, 25, 84, 94-96, 99, 104, 110n, 124, 132, 181, 182, 184, 192, 194	Vismaya ...	91, 163
		Viśvānala ...	226
		Viśvasenā ...	194
		Vitāsoka ...	178
		Vīratī ...	166
		Vivāha-prajñapti ...	110n, 219n
		Vivāha-lasyātana ...	214
		Vrata-parisamādhyan ...	214
		Vīśabhacharya ...	218
		Vrishabhasena ...	193

	PAGE		PAGE		PAGE
Yāji	102, 121, 126, 127, 132, 188	Yasodā	117	Yajñāt	234
Yamaka	177	Yasodhara	10, 190, 213n	Yajana	83, 84, 106, 106n, 108, 132, 148, 165, 166, 170, 171, 171n, 173, 173n, 174-177, 179, 180, 181, 182, 182n, 183, 184, 190, 230n
Yamunā R.	137, 138	Yasodharā	154n	Yuan Chwang	4n
Yāsas (Gagadhara) ...	195	Yasomatī	230	Yūka	166
Yāsasvān (a Manu) ...	224	Yatir	40	Yūpaka	179
Do, (of Kimpurusha class)	230	Yatindra	41	Yuvārāja	8n
Yāsasvati	65, 85, 87	Yava-madhyā	166
Yāsasvin	224	Yavanas	177
Yasobhadra	216	Yenūr	48, 191
Yasobhadra-chārya ...	217	Yoga	103, 104, 113
		Yoga-śāstra	191n

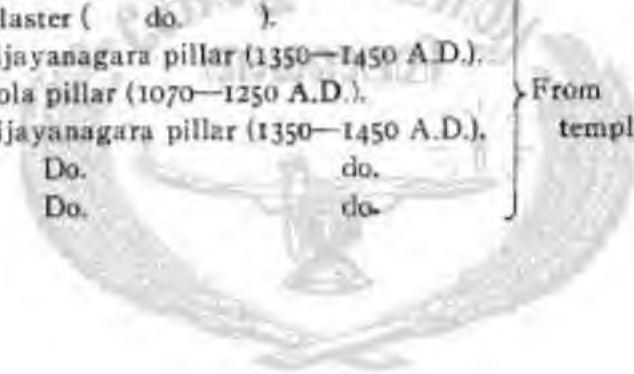

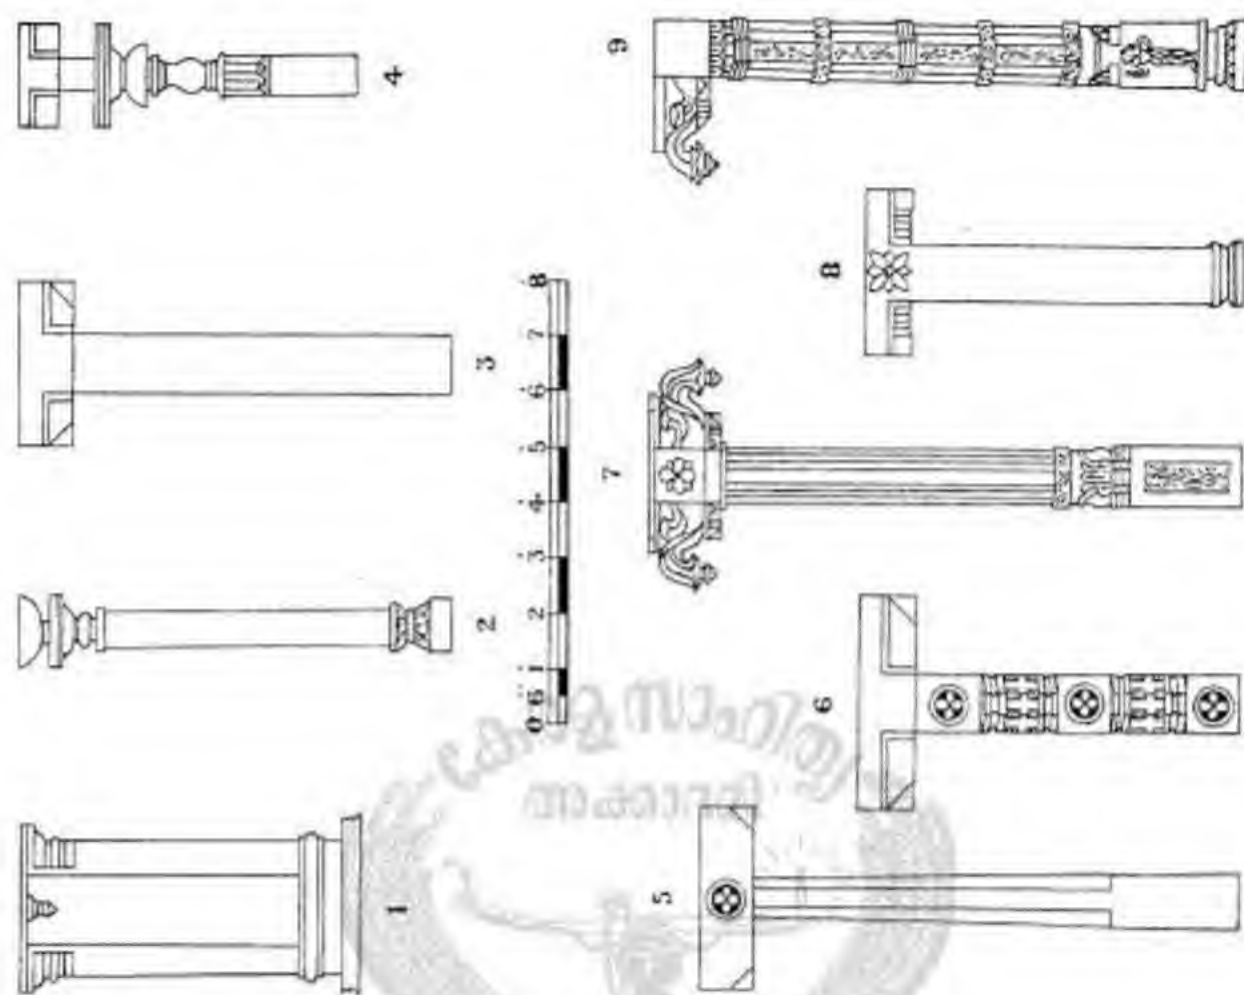

PLATE I.

A. Ground plan of Chandraprabha temple.

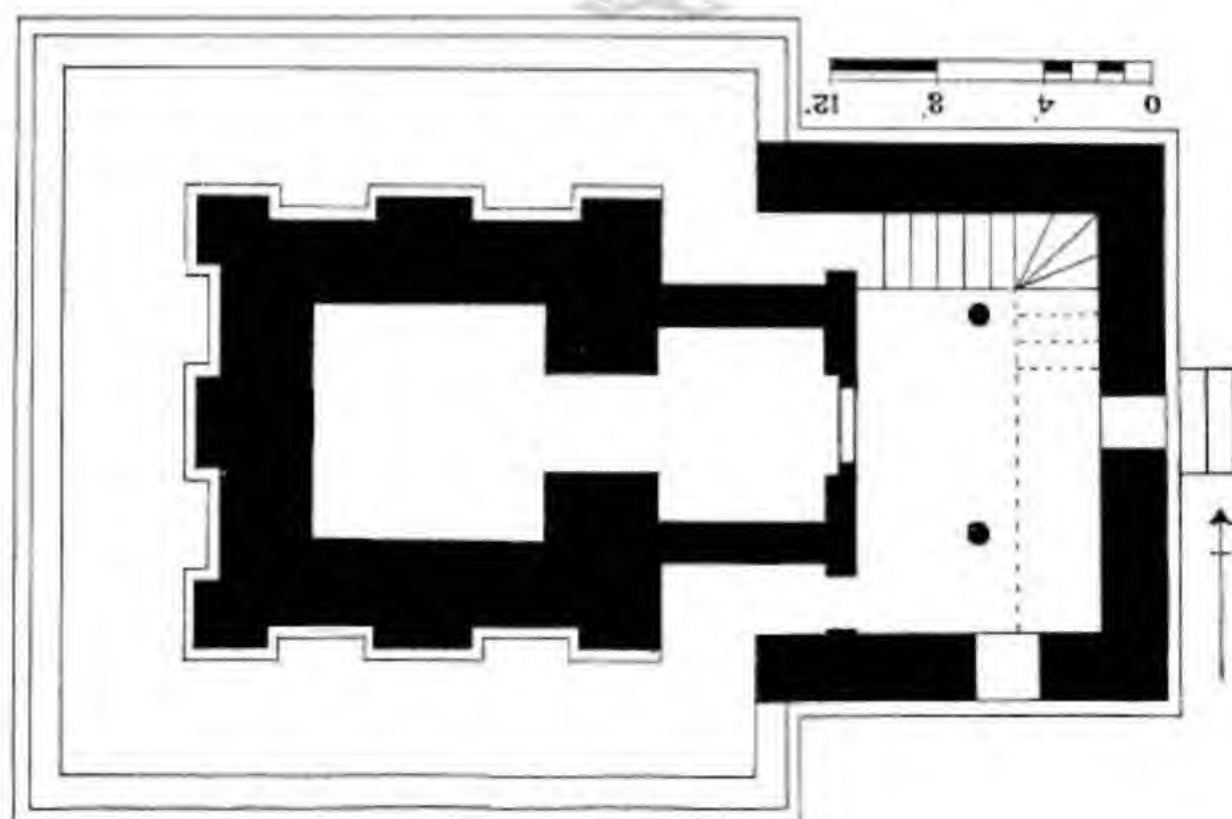

B. Details of architecture—

- | | |
|--|------------------------------|
| 1. Pallava niche (Rajasimha style). | } From Chandraprabha temple. |
| 2. Pallava pilaster (do.) | |
| 3. Chola pillar (870—1250 A.D.). | } From Vardhamāna temple. |
| 4. Chola pilaster (do.) | |
| 5. Early Vijayanagara pillar (1350—1450 A.D.). | |
| 6. Late Chola pillar (1070—1250 A.D.). | |
| 7. Early Vijayanagara pillar (1350—1450 A.D.). | |
| 8. Do. do. | |
| 9. Do. do. | |

B
DETAILS OF ARCHITECTURE.

A PLAN OF CHANDRAPRABHA TEMPLE.

PLATE II.

Ground plan of Vardhamāna temple—

1. Vardhamāna shrine.
2. Pushpadanta do.
3. Dharmadevī do.
4. Vardhamāna-Ardhamandapa.
5. Elevations.
6. Vardhamāna-Mukhamandapa.
7. Padmaprabha shrine
8. Vāsupūjya shrine
9. Pārśvanātha shrine
10. Trikūṭa-Basti-Ardhamandapa.
11. Trikūṭa-Basti-Mukhamandapa.
12. Saṅgīta-Mandapa.
13. Cloister.
14. Verandas.
15. Store-rooms.
16. Brahmadeva shrine.
17. Balipīṭhas, one with the "Kōra" tree on it.
18. Ṛishabhadeva shrine.
19. Śānti-Mandapa.
20. Processional path.
21. Munivāsa.
22. Munivāsa-Mandapa.
23. Dhvaja-Stambha or flag-staff.
24. Temple well.
25. A small garden.
26. Kitchen (maḍapaḷḷi).
27. Gopura.

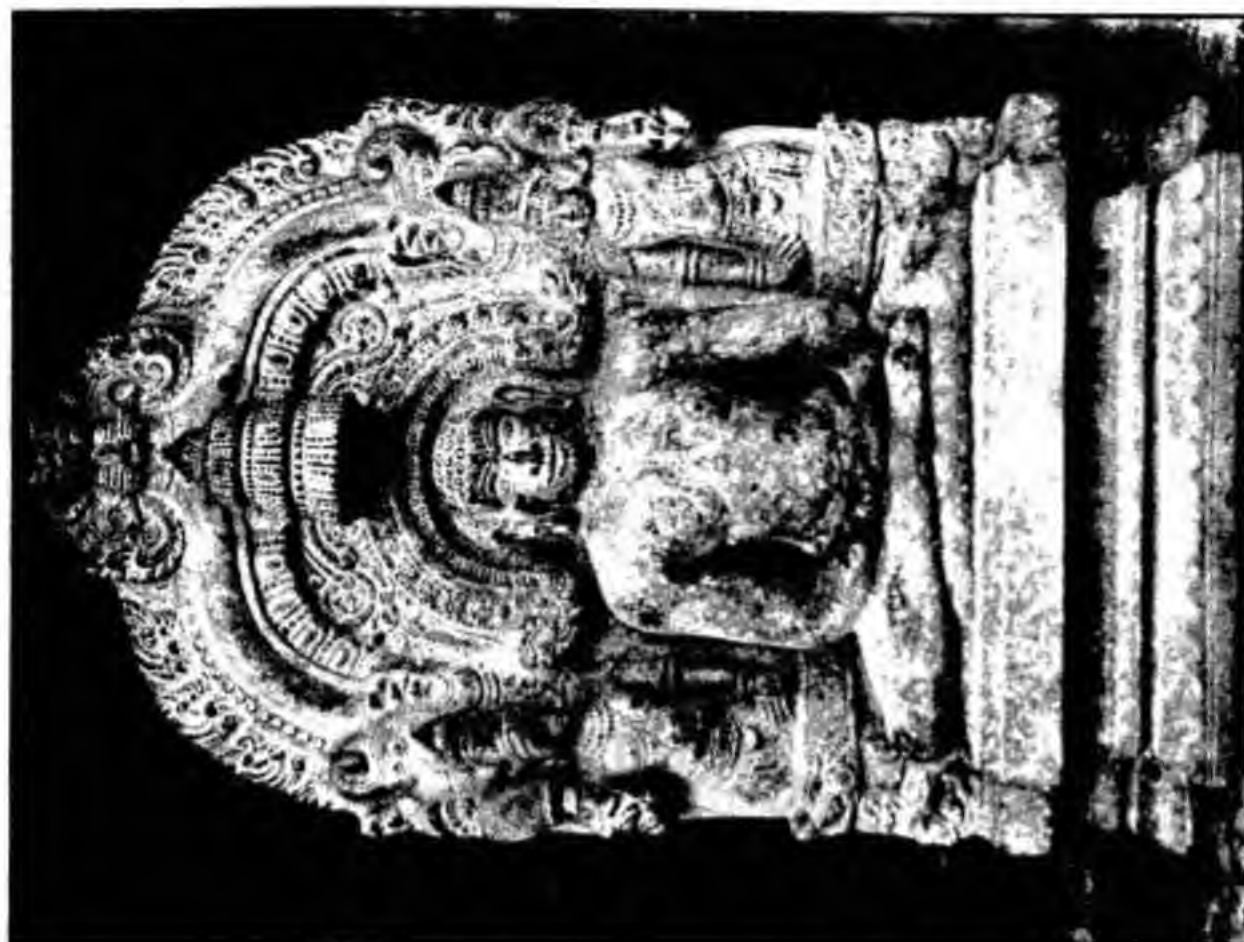

PLAN OF VARDHAMĀNA TEMPLE.

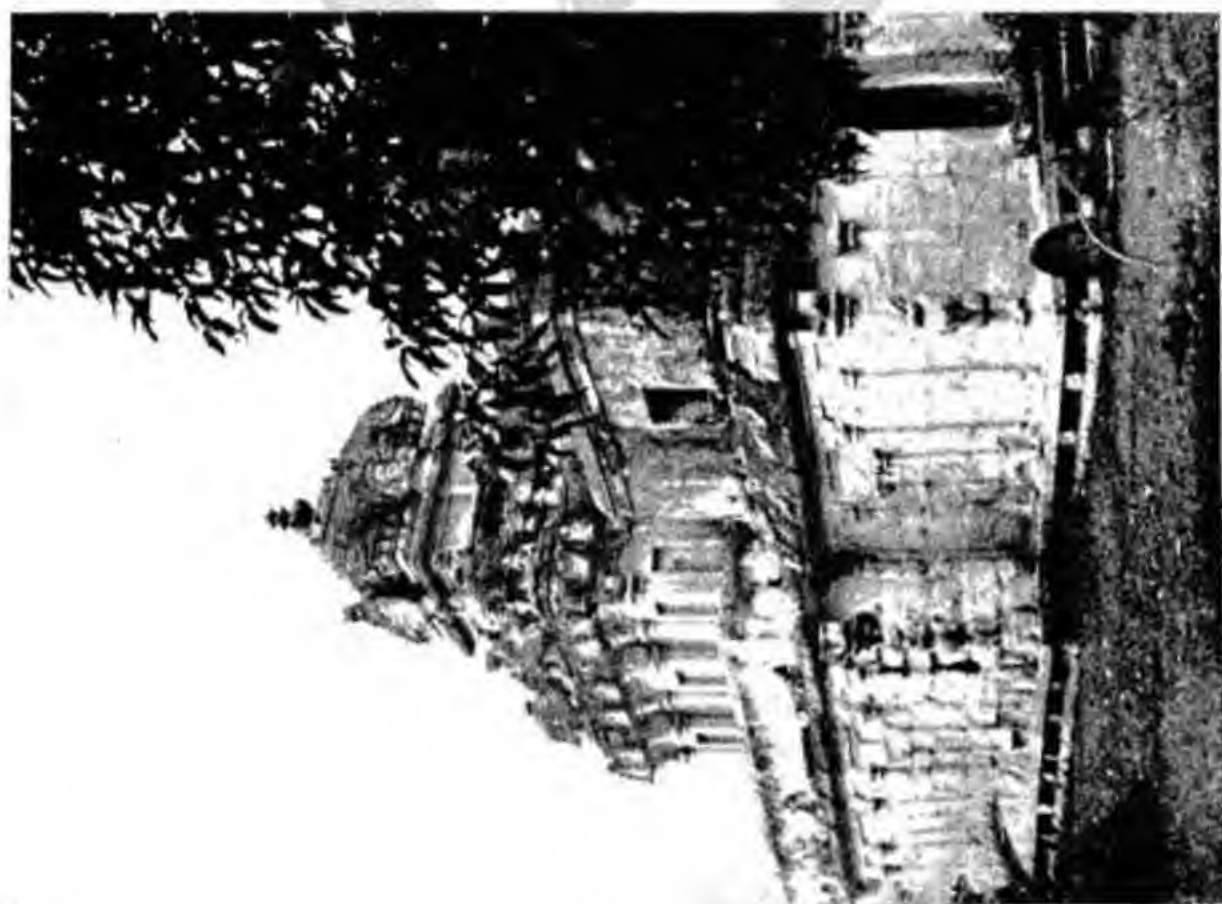

PLATE III.

1. Chandraprabha temple.
2. Image of Vardhamāna from the Vardhamāna shrine, Vardhamāna temple.

2
IMAGE OF VARDHAMANA.

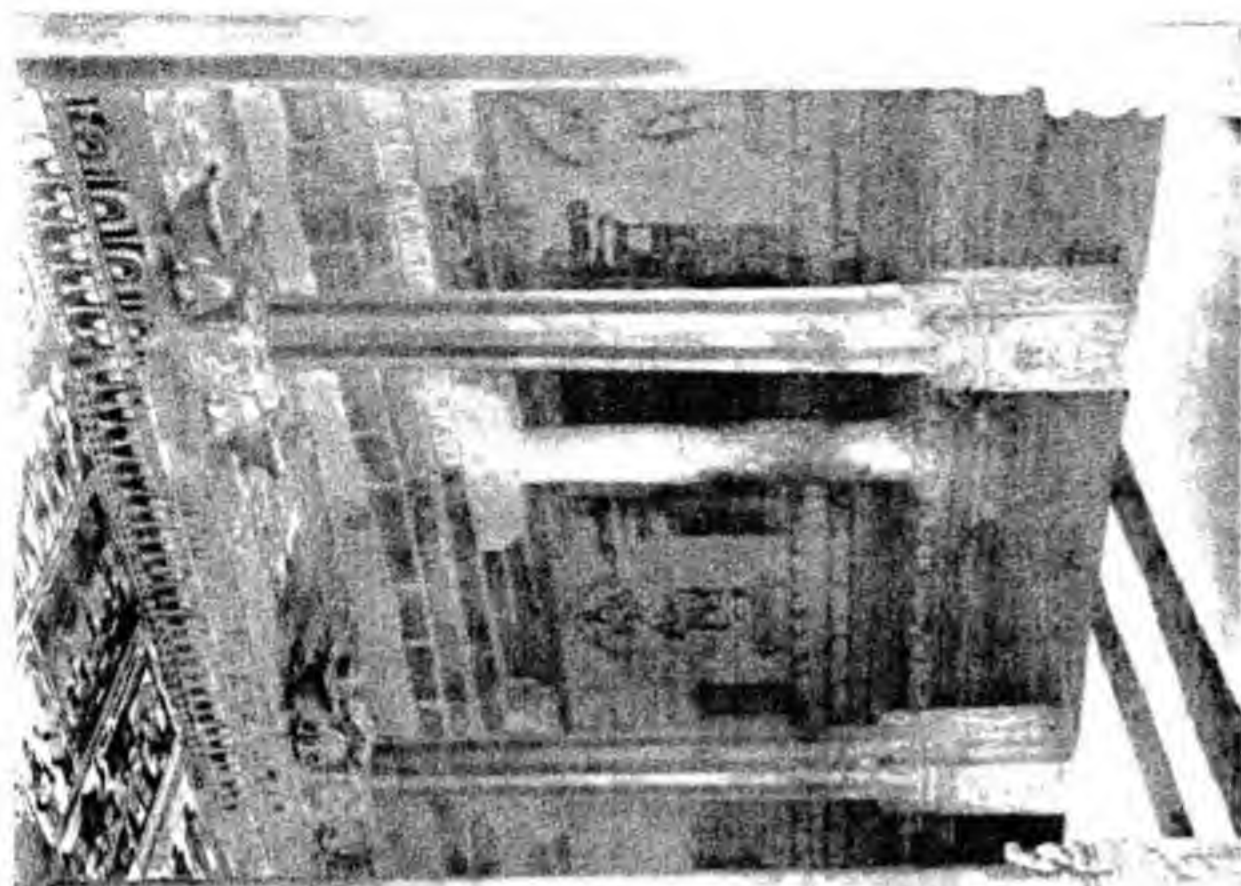

1
CHANDRAPRABHA TEMPLE.

PLATE IV.

1. Left wing of Saṅgita-Maṇḍapa, Vardhamāna temple.
2. Right wing of do. do.

2

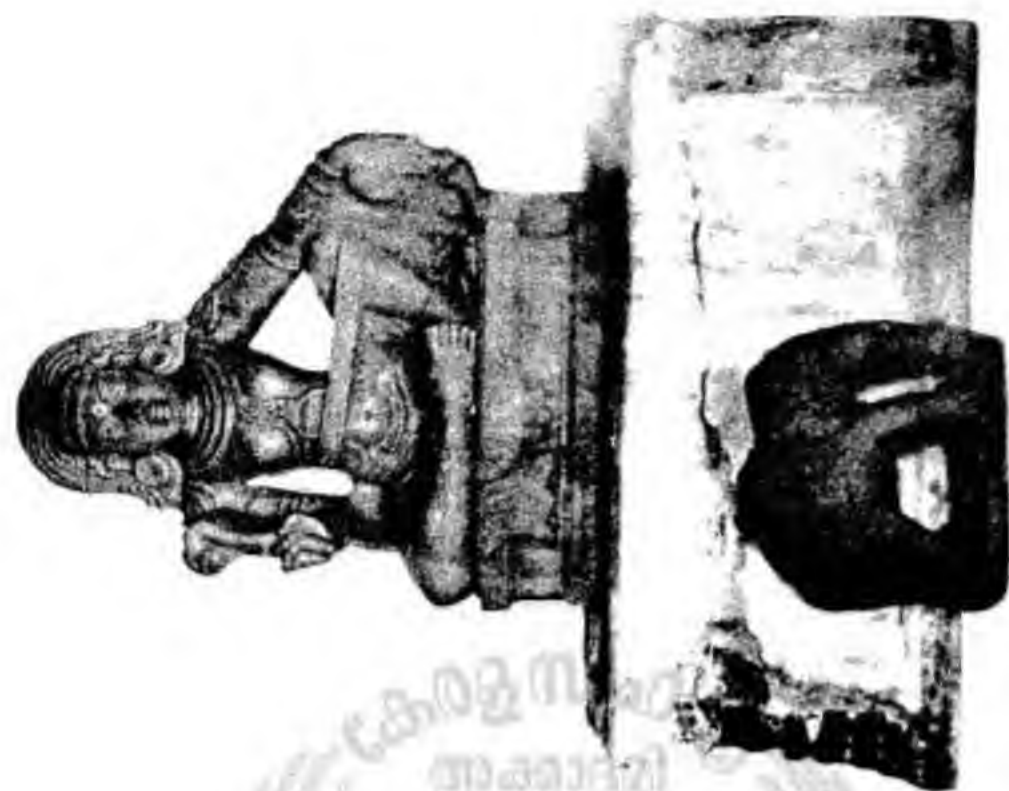

1

SAṄGITA-MANDAPA, VAROHAMĀNA TEMPLE.

PLATE V.

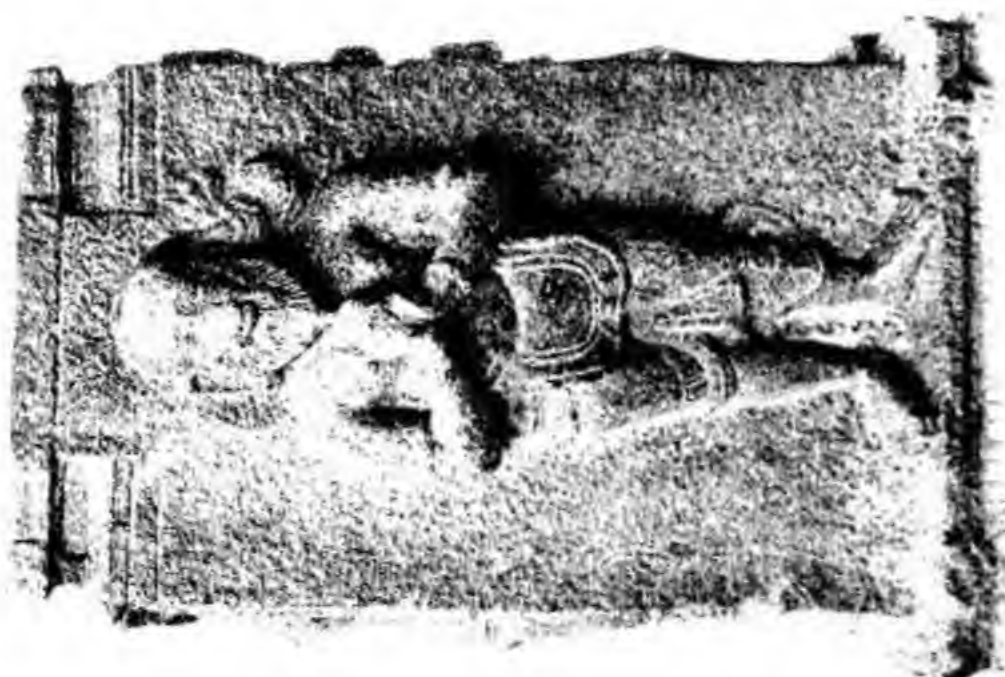

1. Portrait of Irugappa from Saṅgita-Maṇḍapa, Vardhamāna temple.
2. Brahmadeva Yaksha, Vardhamāna temple.

2

BRAHMADIYA VARSHA.

1

IRUGAPTA.

PLATE VI.

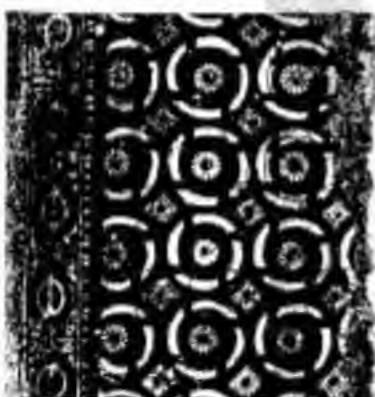

1. Fragment of early painting showing floral design, Saṅgita-Maṇḍapa.
2. Do. women on horseback, Saṅgita-Maṇḍapa.
3. Do. floral design, Saṅgita-Maṇḍapa.
4. Samādhi of five sages from Aruṇagiri-mēḍu, Tiruparuttikuṇḁam.

1

2

3

4

EARLY PAINTINGS | SAMĀDIH.

PLATE VII.

Fragments of early painting representing scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

1. Subduing Saṅgama.
2. Saudharmendra's dance before Vardhamāna after returning from janmābhisheka.
3. Samavasaraṇa of Vardhamāna.
4. Janmābhisheka of Vardhamāna.
5. Nativity of Vardhamāna.

1

2

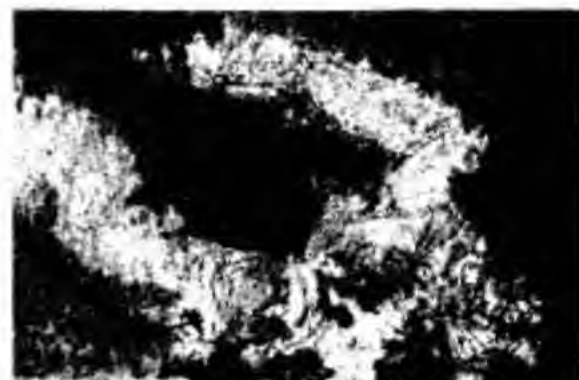

3

4

5

EARLY PAINTING; SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMANA.

PLATE VIII

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva, the first Tirthaṅkara—

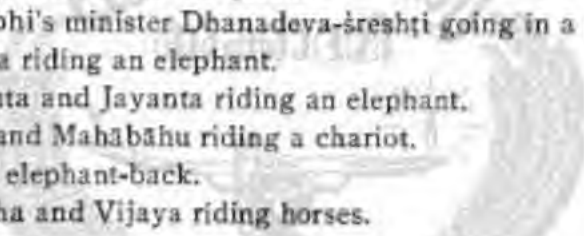

1. (a) Śrīśheṇa Mahārāja and his queen Sundarī.
(b) Śrīvarman.
(c) Jayavarman receiving dīkṣā at the hands of Svayaṃprabha.
(d) Death of Jayavarman by snake-bite.
2. (a) The Vidyadhara king Mahābala and his wife listening to their minister Svayaṃbuddha.
(b) Mahābala performing with his minister āṣṭāṅhika-vrata in Siddhakūṭa-chaityālaya.
3. (a) The deva Lalitāṅga and his wife Svayaṃprabha.
(b) King Vajrajaṅgha and his wife Śrīmātī.
(c) King Vajrajaṅgha and Śrīmātī hearing from chārāṇa sages their previous births, along with their minister, priest, general and treasurer. Four animals, a tiger, monkey, boar and mongoose also listen.
4. The king and queen who were born as a couple in Uttamabhogabhūmi listening to dharma from chārāṇa sages. The four animals, tiger, monkey, boar and mongoose of the previous birth are now born as Āryas and are also listening to dharma from the same sages.

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHADEVA.

PLATE IX.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

5. (a) The deva Śṛṭdhara and his wife.
(b) King Suvidhī and his wife Manoramā.
(c) Disgusted with worldly life Suvidhī received dīkṣhā from a sage.
 6. (a) Achyutendra and his wife.
(b) King Vajranābhi and his queens.
 7. (a) Vajranābhi's minister Dhanadeva-śreṣṭhi going in a palanquin.
(b) Aparājita riding an elephant.
(c) Vaijayanta and Jayanta riding an elephant.
 8. (a) Subāhu and Mahābāhu riding a chariot.
(b) Pīṭha on elephant-back.
(c) Mahāpīṭha and Vijaya riding horses.
-

5

6

7

8

a b c
SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHADEVA.

PLATE X.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

9. Vajranābhi going with his brothers and merchant-friend to Vajrasena Tīrthāṅkara to hear from the latter an exposition of dharma.
10. Do. do. do.
11. (a) Vajranābhi receiving dīkṣā at the hands of Vajrasena Tīrthāṅkara.
(b) Vajranābhi born as an Ahamindra-deva, in the heaven Sarvārthasiddhi.
12. The king's brothers and merchant-friend also born as Ahamindra-devas.
13. The ten kalpa-vṛkṣas or "wish-trees."

9

10

11

12

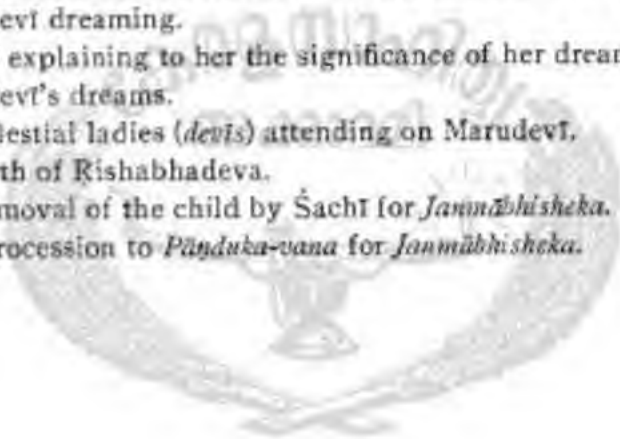

13

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHARJUNA.

PLATE XL

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

14. The Manus.
15. The fourteenth Manu Nabhi Mahārāja and his wife Marudevi.
Marudevi dreaming.
Nabhi explaining to her the significance of her dreams.
16. Marudevi's dreams.
17. (a) Celestial ladies (devīs) attending on Marudevi.
(b) Birth of Rishabhadeva.
(c) Removal of the child by Śachi for Janmābhishheka.
18. The procession to Pānduka-vana for Janmābhishheka.

14

15

16

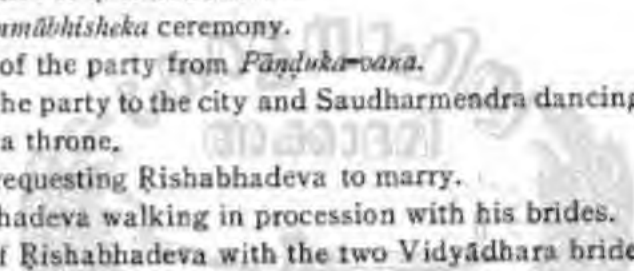

17

18

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHADEVA.

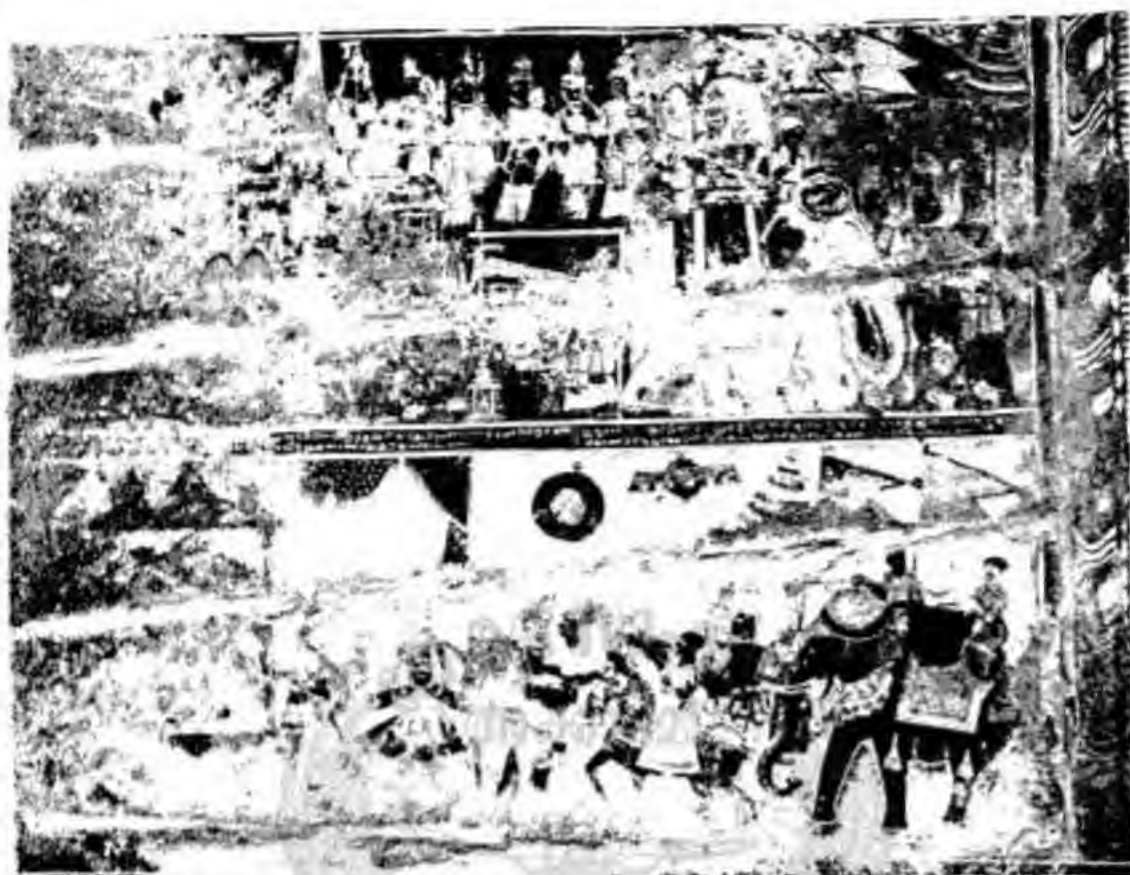

PLATE XII.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

19. (a) The Janmābhīṣeka ceremony.
(b) Return of the party from Pāṇḍuka-vana.
 20. Return of the party to the city and Saudharmendra dancing, after placing Rishabhadeva on a throne.
 21. (a) Nābhi requesting Rishabhadeva to marry.
(b) Rishabhadeva walking in procession with his brides.
 22. Marriage of Rishabhadeva with the two Vidyādhara brides.
-

a

b

19

20

a

b

21

22

PLATE XIII.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

23. Marriage-festivities and entertainments.
24. Rishabhadeva teaching the world professions, trade, agriculture and the like and classifying people into castes after their respective professions.
25. (a) Coronation of Rishabhadeva as king.
(b) Classification of dynasties or families (vansas).
26. The dance of the celestial nymph Nilāñjana.

23

24

25

26

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABHADEVA.

PLATE XIV.

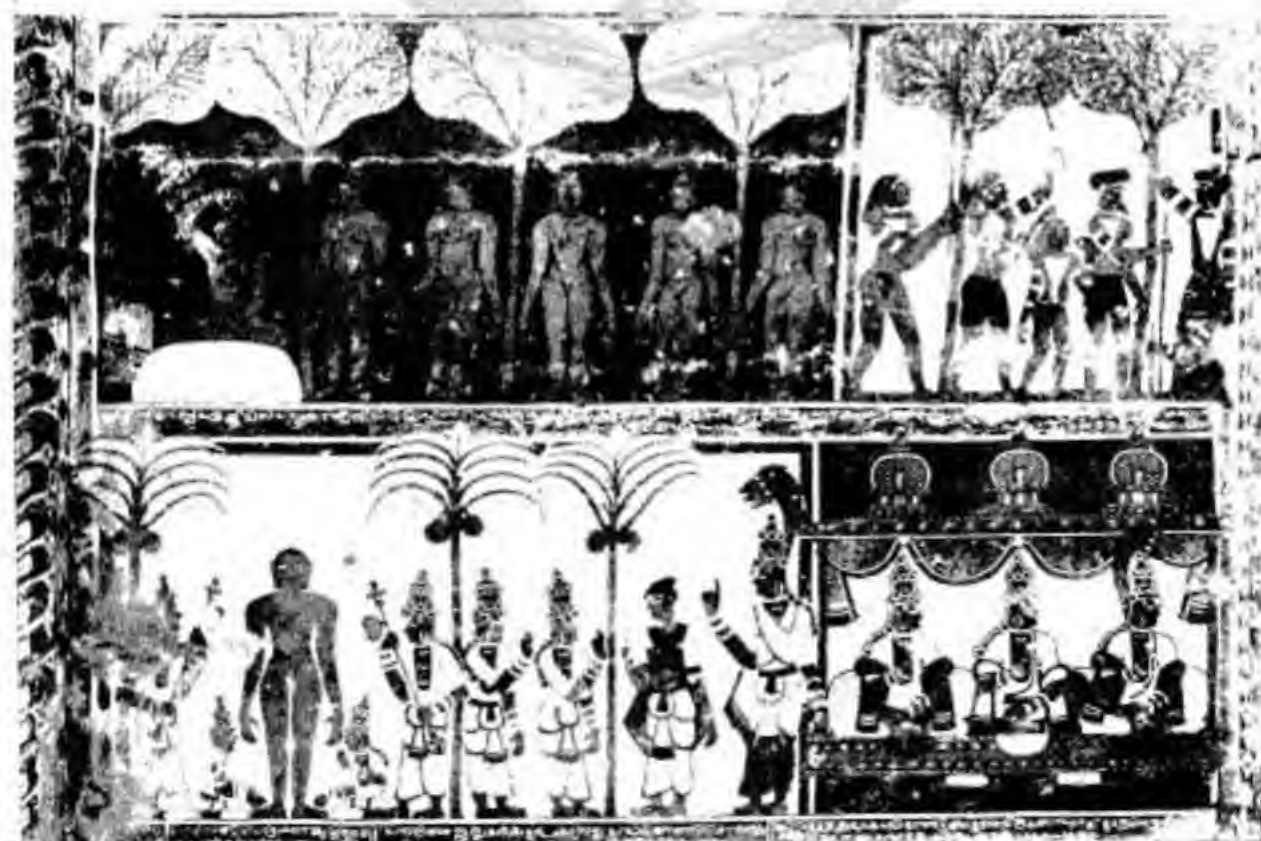

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

27. (a) The Laṅkāntika-devas reminding Rishabhadeva that it was time for dikshā and his renunciation.
(b) Rishabhadeva disgusted with worldly life.
28. Rishabhadeva proceeding for dikshā in a palanquin called Sudarśana.
29. (a) The dikshā ceremony.
(b) Kachchha, Mahākachchha and others trying to imitate Rishabhadeva in his dikshā.
(c) Unable to bear cold they clothed themselves; and unable to bear hunger they fed themselves with forest-products such as fruits and roots.
30. (a) Nami and Vinami approaching Rishabhadeva, who was then in meditation, for their share in the distribution of his kingdom.
(b) Dharanendra in human form advising them.
(c) Then assuming his nāga-form Dharanendra takes them in his ṛmāṇa and starts for Mount Vijayārdha.

27

28

29

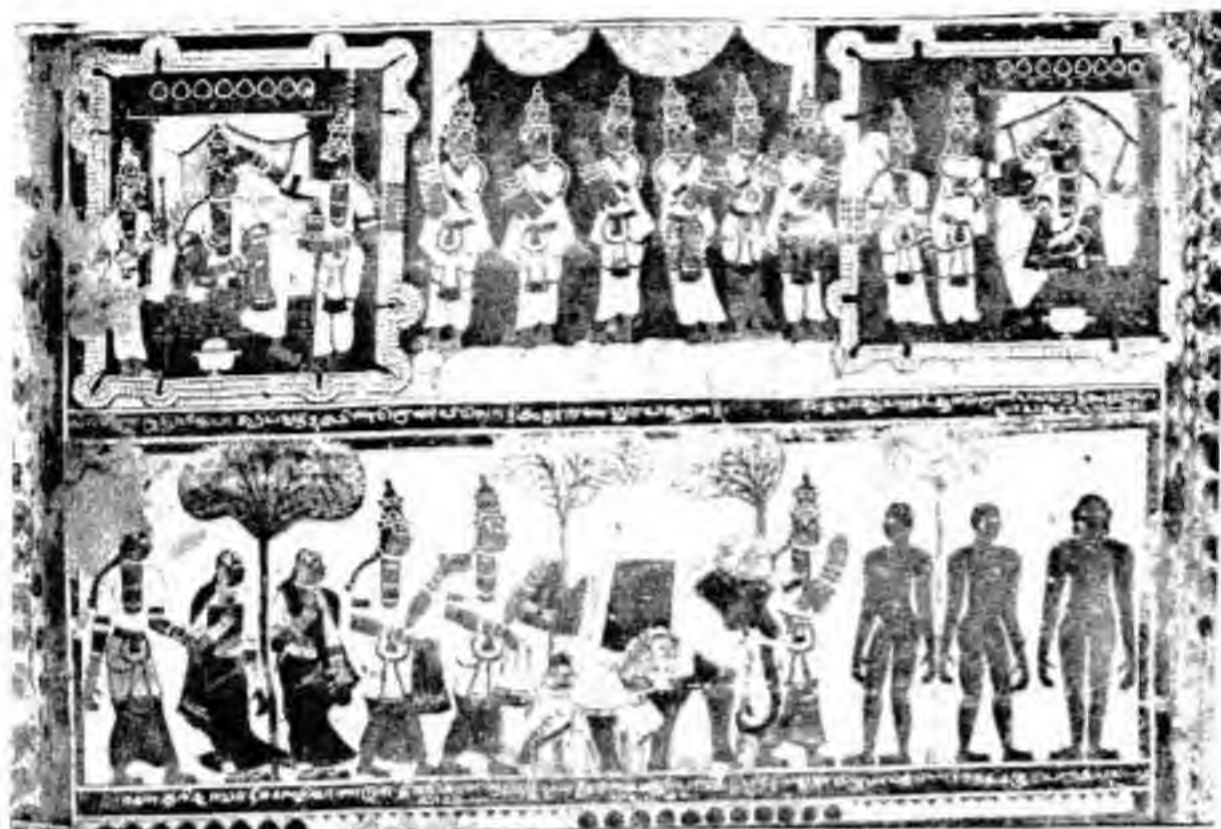

30

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF RISHABADEVA.

PLATE XV.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

31. Dharanendra performing the coronation ceremonies of the brothers, of Nami on the left and of Vinami on the right.
32. (a) When Rishabhadeva went to the city for his first charyā, the kings of the land presenting him with elephants, horses, etc., in fact with everything else than what he actually required.
(b) His return to the forest without doing his charyā.
33. (a) Somaprabha.
(b) Śreyānkumāra dreaming.
(c) Do. narrating his dreams to his brother Somaprabha.
(d) The family priest explaining to them the significance of the dreams.
34. (a) A messenger informing Śreyānkumāra that Rishabhadeva was coming to their city for charyā.
(b) Śreyānkumāra receiving Rishabhadeva.

31

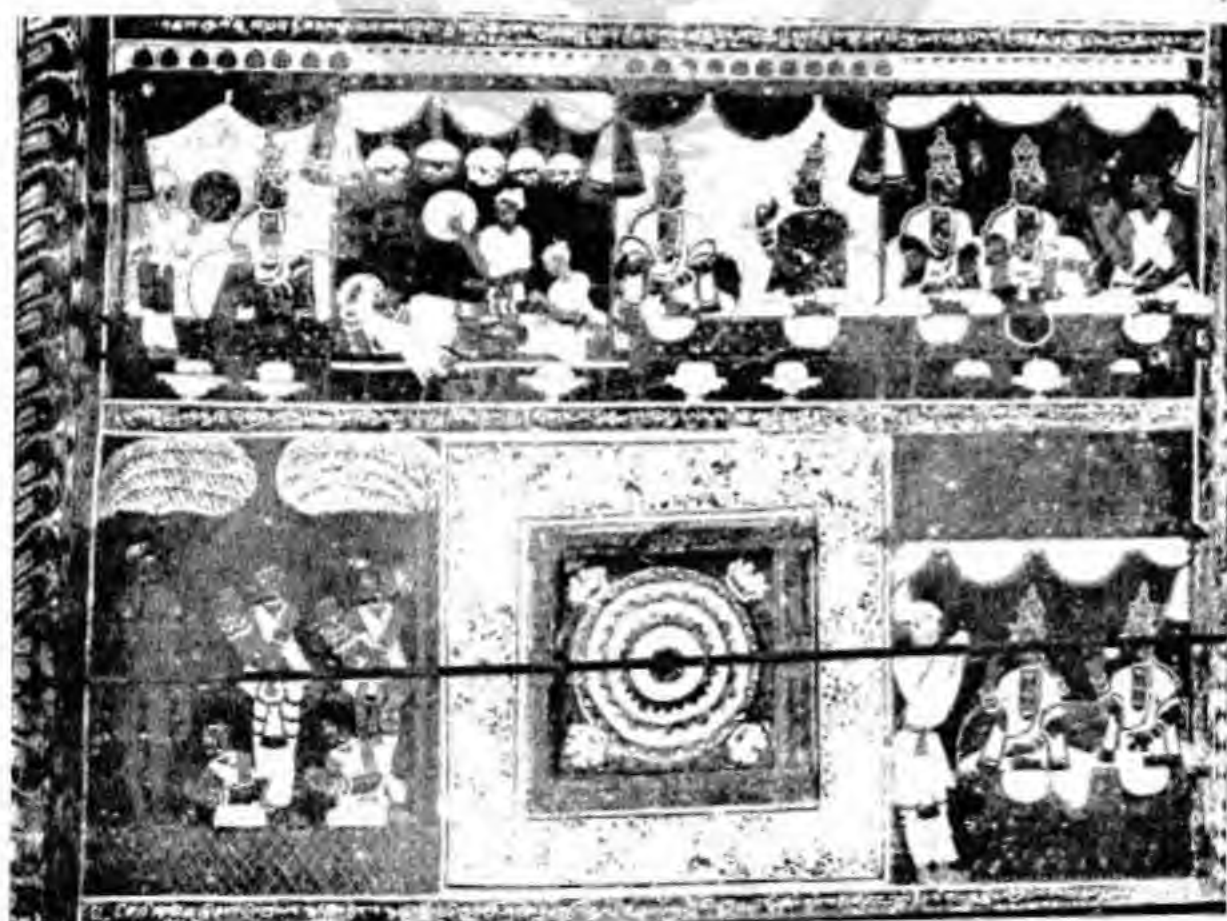

32

a

b

c

d

33

34

b

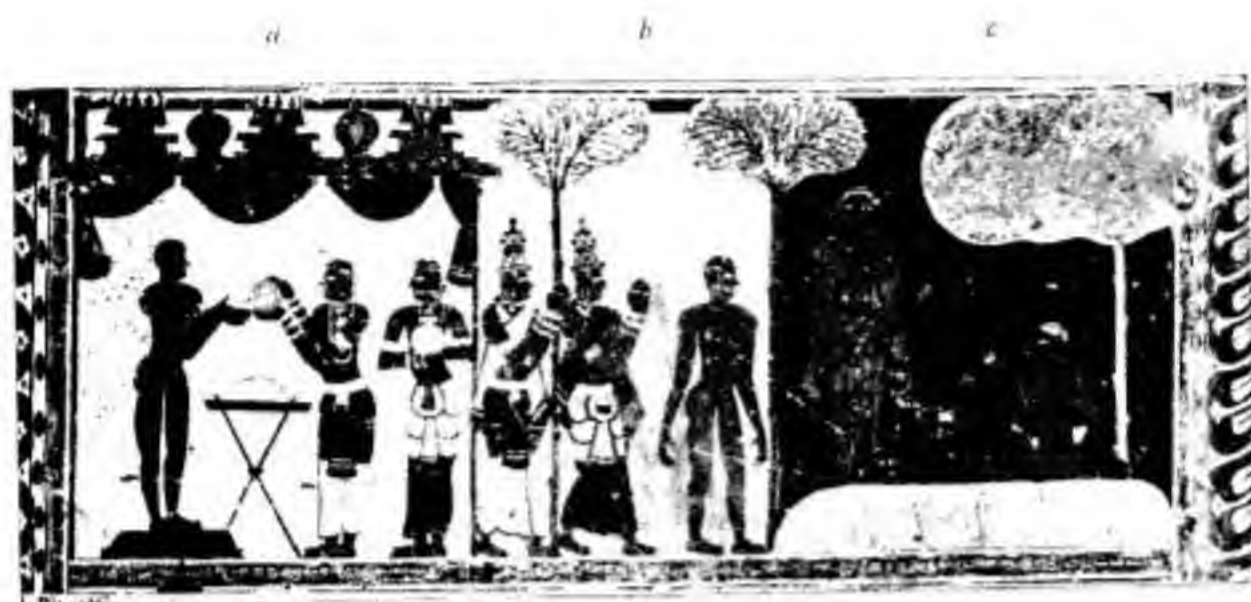

d

PLATE XVI.

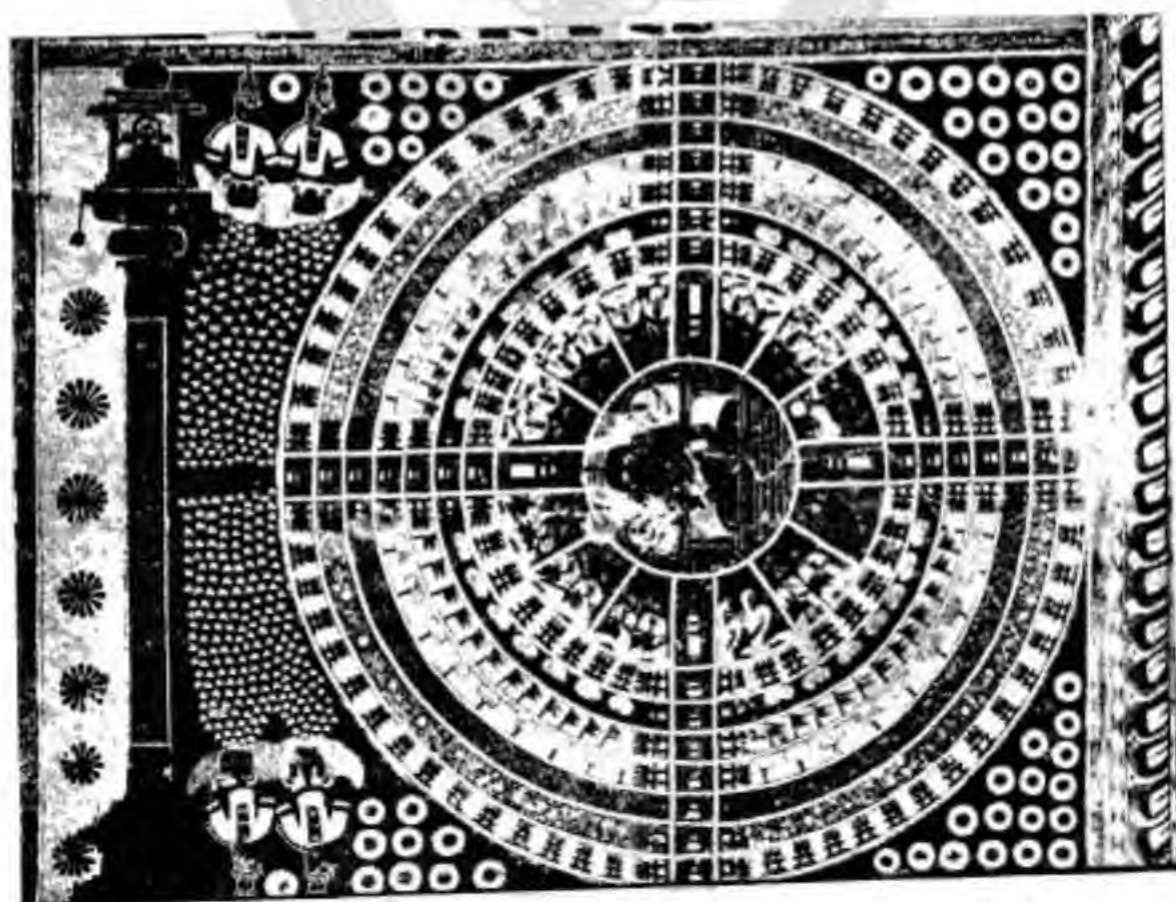

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

- 35. (a) Śreyānkumāra offering food to Rishabhadeva.
(b) The departure of Rishabhadeva after his charyā.
(c) Rishabhadeva spending all his karma.
- 36. The Samavasarana.

35

36

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF KISHABHARADA.

PLATE XVII.

Scenes from the life of Rishabhadeva—

37. Saudharmendra's dance at sight of the samavasaraṇa.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna, the 24th Tirthaṅkara—

38. (a) King Siddhārtha and his wife Priyakāraṇī.

(b) Priyakāraṇī dreaming.

(c) do. narrating her dreams to her husband.

(d) The family priest explaining their significance.

39. (a) Śacī, the wife of Saudharmendra removing the child (Vardhamāna) for janmābhisheka.

(b) The devas placing the child on the back of Airāvata and proceeding to Mount Mahā-Meru in a procession.

40. The procession.

37

38

a

b

c

d

e

f

39

40

SCENES FROM THE LIVES OF ŚISHABHĀDEVA AND VARDHAMĀNA.

PLATE XVIII.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

41. The procession (cont.).
42. Do. do.
43. The anointment or the janmābhisheka ceremony. The fall of the doubting devas.
44. Return of the party to the city after janmābhisheka.

41

42

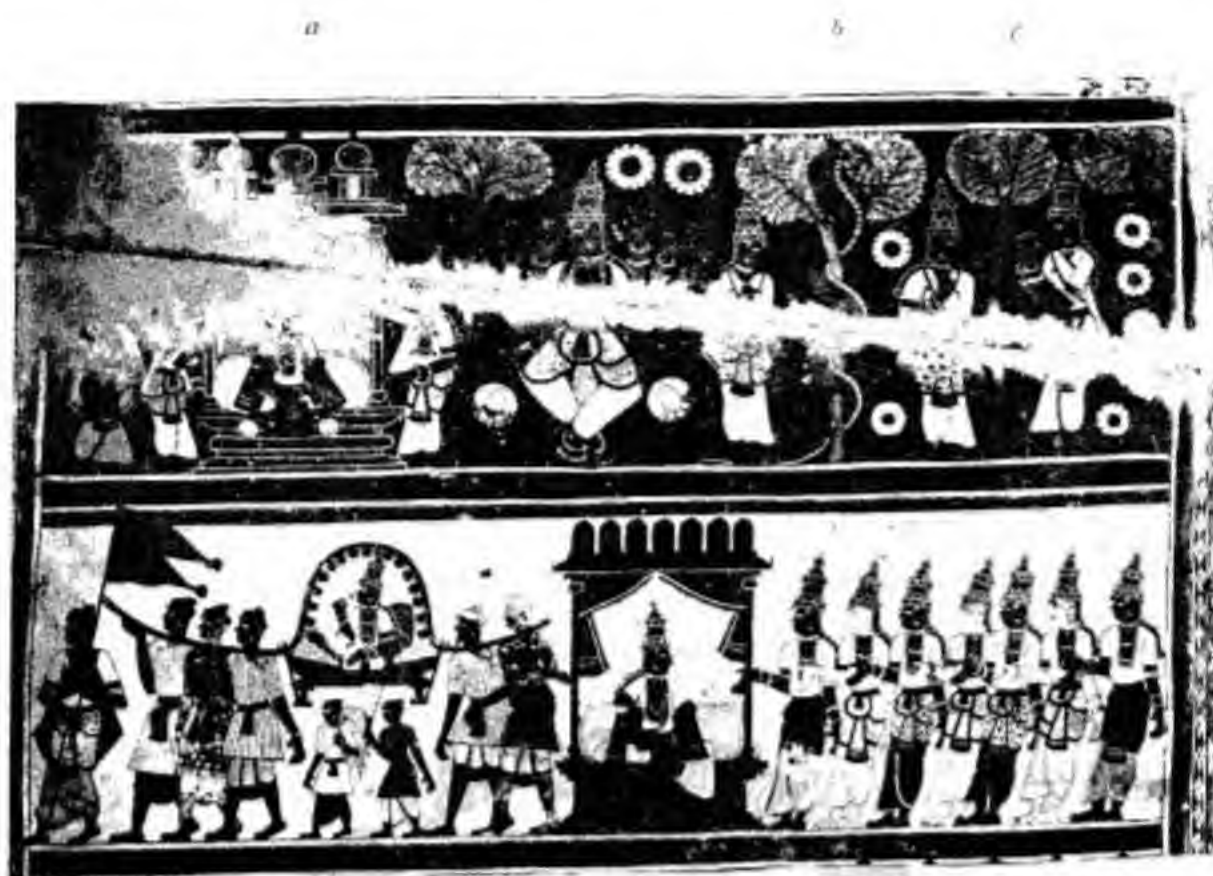

43

44

PLATE XIX.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

45. (a) Saudharmendra placing Vardhamāna on a throne and dancing out of joy.
(b) The humiliation of Saṅgama.
(c) The humiliated Saṅgama seeking Vardhamāna's pardon.
46. (a) Vardhamāna getting the spirit of world-flight (vairāgya) and the Lankāntikas appearing before him just then and reminding him that it was time for him to renounce the world and take to dīkṣā.
(b) Vardhamāna proceeding to the forest for dīkṣā in a palanquin.
47. (a) Vardhamāna performing dīkṣā.
(b) do. do. do.
(c) do. going out for charyā and partaking of food offered by King Kūla of Kūlagrāma.
48. (a) Vardhamāna spending all his karma and doing penance to obtain Kevala-Jñāna.
(b) do. becoming a kevalī and the devas worshipping him after the event in the Gandhakūṭi.

45

46

47

48

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMĀNA.

PLATE XX.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

49. Men and devas marching towards the samavasara structure to hear the Tirthaṅkara's discourse.
50. March of devas.
51. March of devas—(cont.)
52. Celestial ladies holding eight emblems of honour (aṣṭa-maṅgalas) and proceeding to the samavasara structure.

50

49

52

51

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMANA.

PLATE XXI.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamana—

53. Celestial ladies dancing.

Row of rosettes.

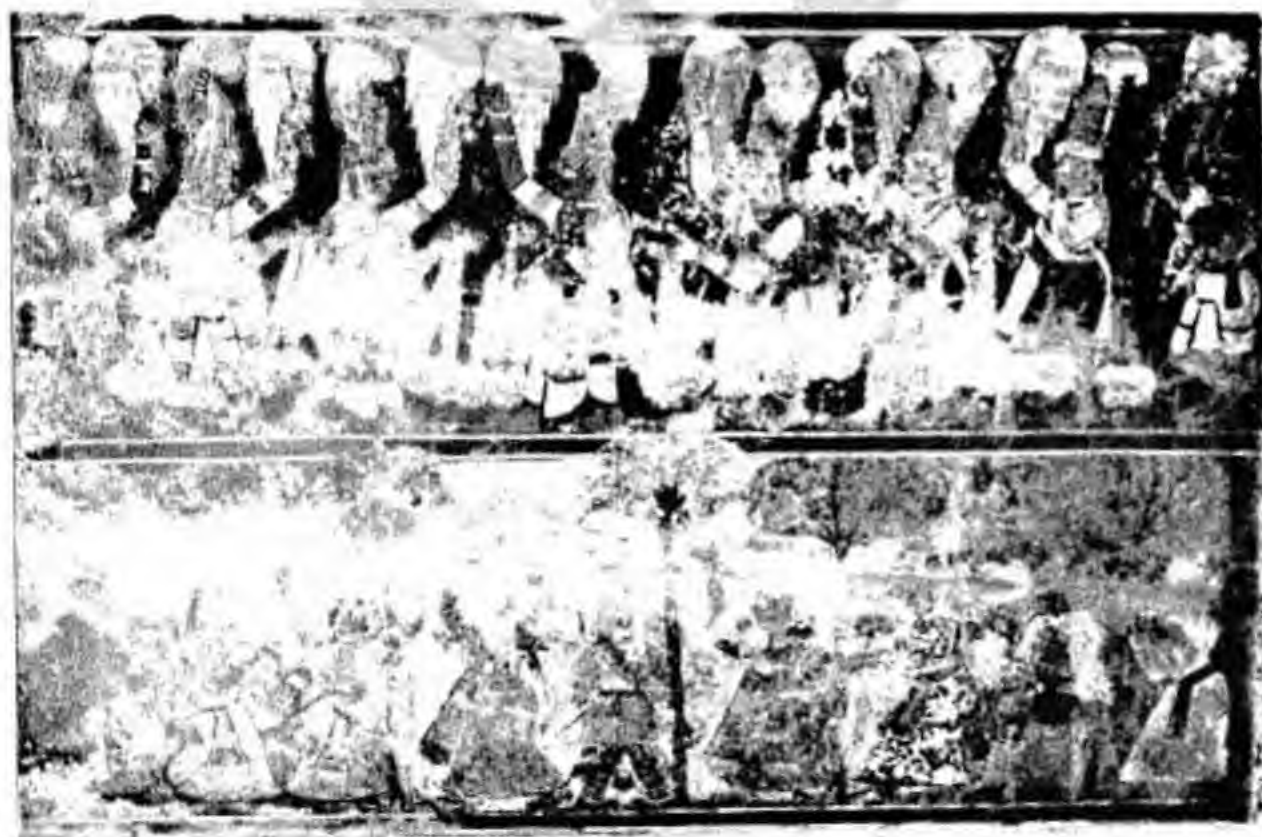

54. Nautches of the human world.

55. Nāga-kumāras with chamaras in their hands marching to the samavasarana structure.

53

55

54

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMANA.

PLATE XXII.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

56. Other classes of the Bhavanavasi-devas marching to the samavasarana structure.
57. Celestial ladies performing kōḍṭṭam-dance.
58. Celestial ladies dancing in groups.
59. Celestial ladies carrying in their hands materials of honour.

57

56

59

58

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMĀNA.

PLATE XXIII.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

60. Devas, with emblems of honour (ashṭa-maṅgalas) in their hands, marching to the samavasaraṇa structure.
61. The presiding deities over the nine treasures (nidāis) including Śaṅkha and Padma, dancing.
62. The samavasaraṇa structure : the first three regions with the mānastambha.

61

60

62

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARAHAMANA.

PLATE XXIV.

Scenes from the life of Vardhamāna—

63. The samavasarana structure (cont.); the remaining four regions.

64. Do. do. ; the Lakshmivara-maṇḍapa with the Gandhakuti in the centre.

64

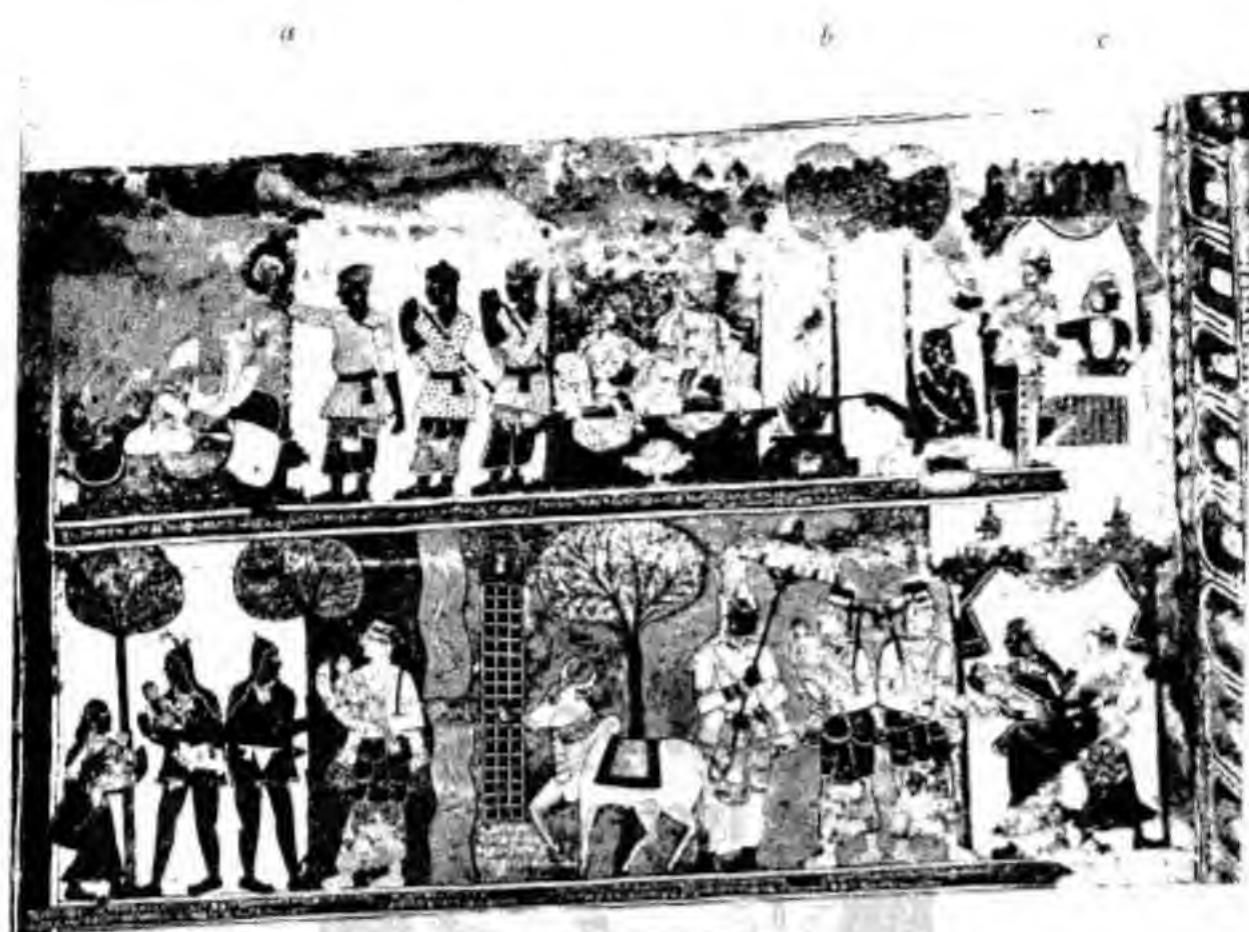

63

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF VARDHAMĀNA.

PLATE XXV.

Scenes from the life of Kṛishṇa, the cousin of Neminātha—

65. (a) Kamsa and his consort Jivadyaśā.
(b) Kamsa's sister Devakī being given in marriage to Vasudeva.
(c) Birth of child Kṛishṇa to Devakī.
66. (a) Baladeva removing the child from the chamber of nativity.
(b) Vasudeva holding a white umbrella over the child.
(c) The presiding deity of the city, in the form of a bull, showing Baladeva the way.
(d) The city gate opened of its own accord.
(e) The river Jumna divided and gave him the way.
(f) Baladeva delivering the child unto the care of Nanda Gopa, and the latter's wife receiving the child from her husband.
67. The sports of child Kṛishṇa and the annihilation of seven evil spirits sent by Kamsa—
(a) One of the evil spirits that came in the form of a wheel. Two other evil spirits that came in the form of trees and stood in his way as he was dragging the mortar to which he was tied by his foster-mother.
(b) Three more evil spirits that came in the forms of a palmyra tree, a horse and an ass respectively.
(c) The seventh evil spirit that came as a woman offering Kṛishṇa milk from her breasts smeared with poison.
(d) Subjugation of the deva Arishta, who came as a bull to test Kṛishṇa's strength.
(e) Devakī, Baladeva and Vasudeva arriving just then on the scene, and Devakī admiring her son with motherly love, milk flowing out of her breasts spontaneously.
68. (a) Kṛishṇa raising up Mount Govardhana.
(b) Kṛishṇa doing trivikrama.
(c) Nanda's flight from the village with his cowherds and cattle out of fear for Kamsa.
(d) Kṛishṇa assuring Nanda of his strength by lifting on the way a huge stone column, thus prevailing on him to return to the village.

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF KRISHNA.

PLATE XXVI.

Scenes from the life of Kṛishṇa—

69. (a) Kṛishṇa plucking a lotus-flower from a tank guarded by a udgā, after subduing the latter.
(b) Kṛishṇa subjugating an infuriated elephant set up against him by Kamsa.
(c) Baladeva informing Kṛishṇa, while wrestling with the latter, that the time was opportune for killing Kamsa.
(d) Kṛishṇa vanquishing a wrestler set up against him by Kamsa.
(e) Kṛishṇa killing Kamsa.
(f) Public wrath appeased by Baladeva, Vasudeva and others narrating the parentage of Kṛishṇa to all assembled.
70. (a) Ugrasena and his wife Padmāvatī.
(b) Vasudeva and Devakī.
(c) Samudravijaya and his wife Śivadevī.
(d) Kṛishṇa's victory over Mahabala, one of Jarāsandha's sons.
71. (a) The battle between Kṛishṇa and Aparājita, another son of Jarāsandha and the latter's death in the battle-field.
(b) The ruse employed and the return of Kālayava, another son of Jarāsandha, without ever encountering Kṛishṇa.
72. (a) The flight of the Yādavas under the leadership of Kṛishṇa.
(b) Kṛishṇa fasting and doing penance.
(c) Kṛishṇa dreaming of the deya Gautama, who offered to take Kṛishṇa on his back as a horse and to find for him a new land.
(d) The realization of the dream.
(e) The finding of the city of Dvārāvātī, and Kṛishṇa, Baladeva, Vasudeva and Devakī being in the palace.

a b c d e f

69

70

71

72

e d c b a

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF KRISHNA.

PLATE XXVII.

Scenes from the life of Neminātha—

73. (a) Samudravijaya and his wife Śivadevi.
(b) Śivadevi narrating her dreams to her husband.
(c) Birth of Neminātha.
(d) The Devas placing the child on the back of Airāvata and proceeding to Mount Mahā-Meru to perform the janmābhishheka of the child.
74. (a) The Janmābhishheka ceremony.
(b) Return of the party to the city.
(c) Devendra dancing after installing the child on a throne.
75. (a) Kṛishṇa requesting Neminātha to look after the city of Dvarāvati during his absence away on war with Jarāsandha.
(b) Fight between Kṛishṇa and Jarāsandha.
76. Kṛishṇa crowned as a chakravartin.

73

74

75

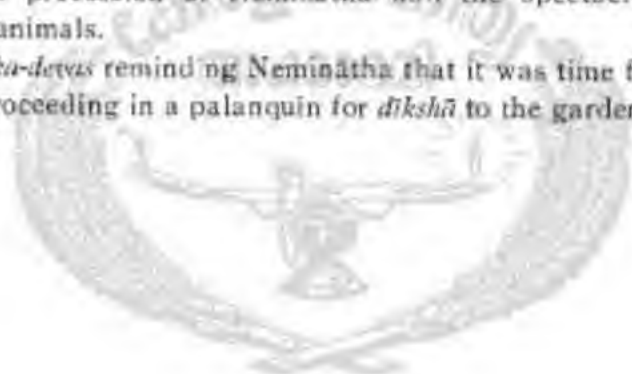

76

SCENES FROM THE LIVES OF NEMINATHA AND KRISHNA.

PLATE XXVIII.

Scenes from the life of Neminātha—

77. Kṛishṇa in court, when he heard the blast produced on the conch by Neminātha.
78. The marriage procession of Neminātha and the spectacle of the sickly and frightened animals.
79. The Laukātika-devas reminding Neminātha that it was time for dīkshā.
80. Neminātha proceeding in a palanquin for dīkshā to the garden Sahasrāmṛavana.

77

78

79

80

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF NEMINATHA.

PLATE XXIX.

Scenes from the life of Neminātha—

81. The dikṣhā ceremony, and subsequent penance.

82. (a) The first charyā of Neminātha.

(b) Do. do.

(c) Neminātha's departure to the forest.

(d) Neminātha doing penance.

(e) Neminātha being worshipped in the Gandhakūṭi when he had become a kevali.

Scenes from the life of Agnīlā (Aṁbikā) or Dharmadevī—

83. In five panels from left to right—

Somaśarman and Agnīlā.

Agnīlā and her sons.

Agnīlā inviting Varadatta for food.

The offering of food.

Varadatta departing after partaking of Agnīlā's offering.

81

82

e d c b a

83

SCENES FROM THE LIVES OF NEMINĀTHA AND AGNILĀ (ĀMBIRĀ).

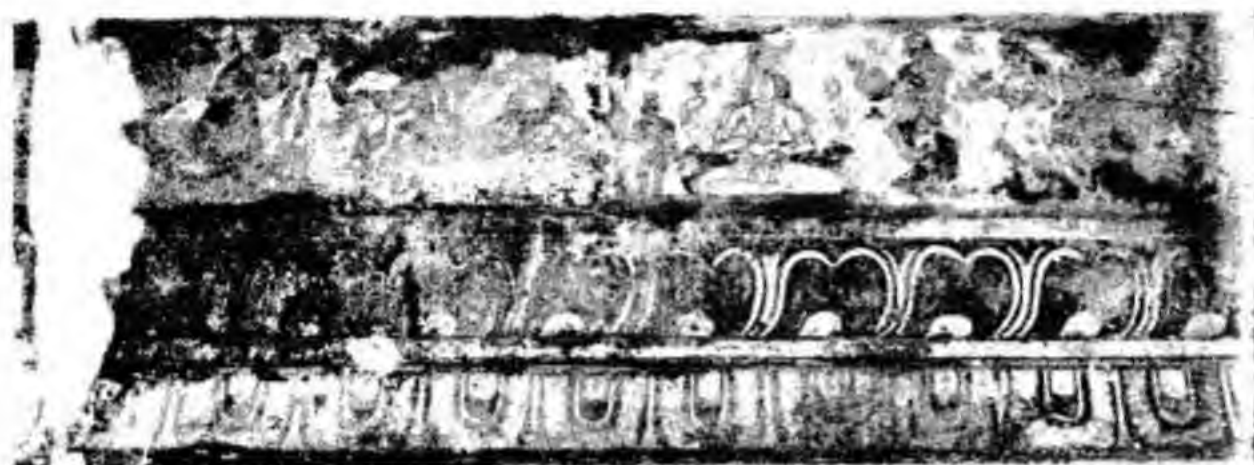

PLATE XXX.

Scenes from the life of Agnīlā (Ambikā) or Dharmadevī—

84. The transformation of Agnīlā into the Yakshī Ambikā or Dharmadevī.

I. The Gopura, Vardhamāna temple.

84

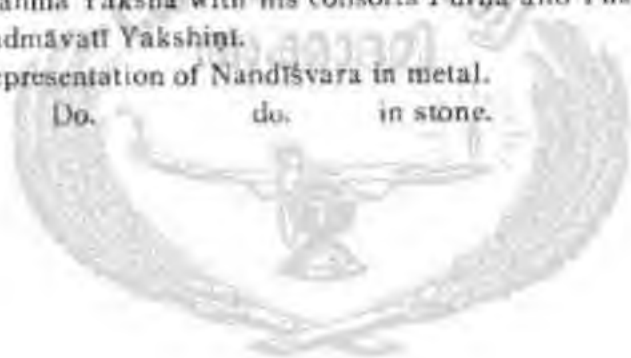

I

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF AGNİLĀ (ĀMBIKĀ); GOPURA, VARDHAMĀNA TEMPLE.

PLATE XXXI.

1. Brahma Yaksha with his consorts Pūrṇā and Pushkalā.
2. Padmāvatī Yakshinī.
3. Representation of Nandīśvara in metal.
4. Do. do. in stone.

2

3

4

BRAHMA YAKSHA WITH CONSORTS, PAUMĀVATĪ AND SANDĪVARA.

PLATE XXXII.

1. Sarvāṅga Yaksha.
2. Dharanendra Yaksha with Padmavati Yakshini.
3. Dharmadevi Yakshini.

1

SARVAMATA

2

DIARANENDRA AND PADMAVATI

3

DIARMADEV

PLATE XXXIII

1. Dharapendra Yaksha.
2. Pārsvanātha.
3. Padmāvati Yakshini.

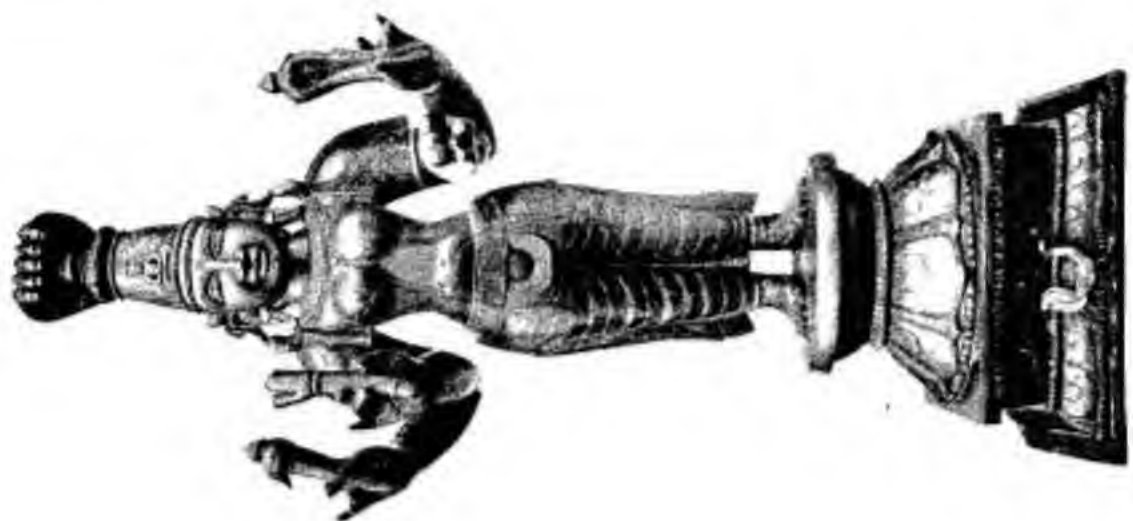

1

UTHAKANEENDRA.

2

PĀRSVANĀTHA.

3

PADMANAVATI.

1. Mātanga Yaksha.
2. Vardhamāna.
3. Siddhāyini Yakshini.

1

MATAṆGA.

2

VARJHAMANA.

3

SIDDHĀVINI.

1. Jvālmālinī.
2. Sarasvatī.

2
SARASVATI.

1
JVALĀMALINI.

PLATE XXXVI.

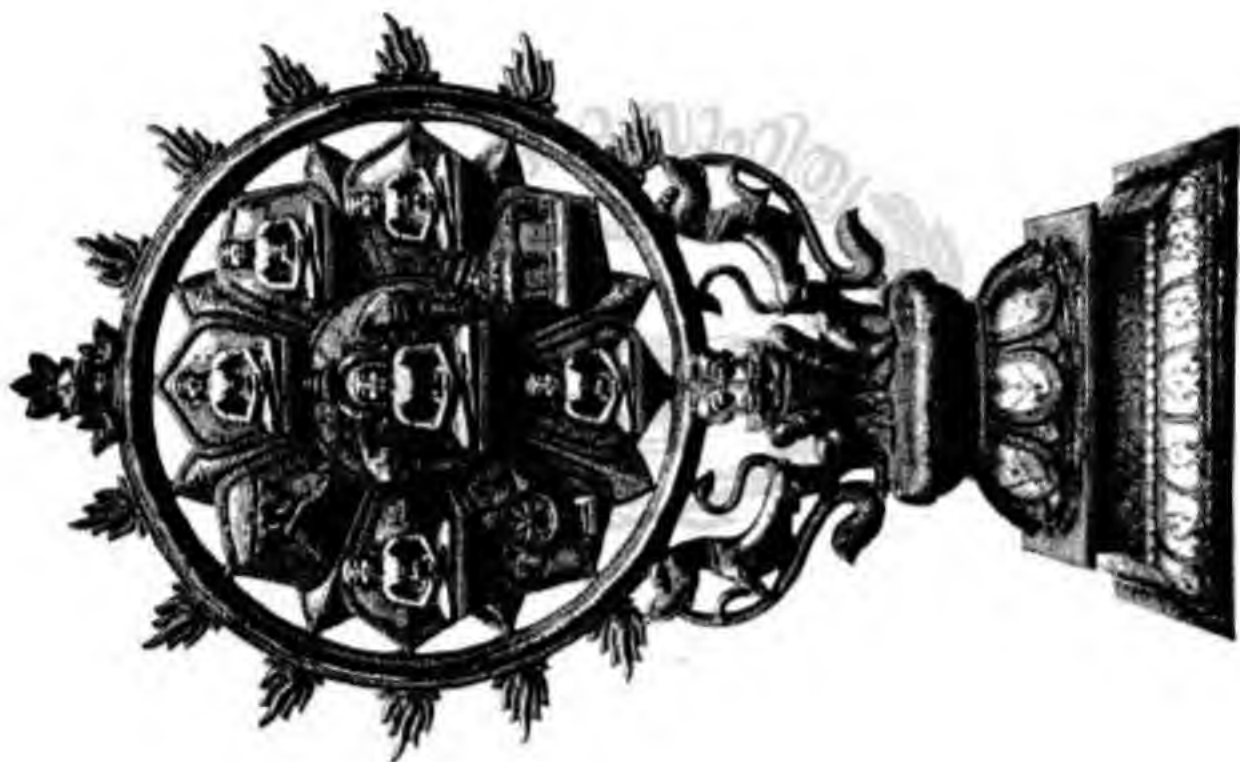

1. Bāhubali.
2. Pañchaparameshthī or Navā-devalā.
3. Anantanātha.

1

PAHUTAKA.

2

NAVA-DEVATA.

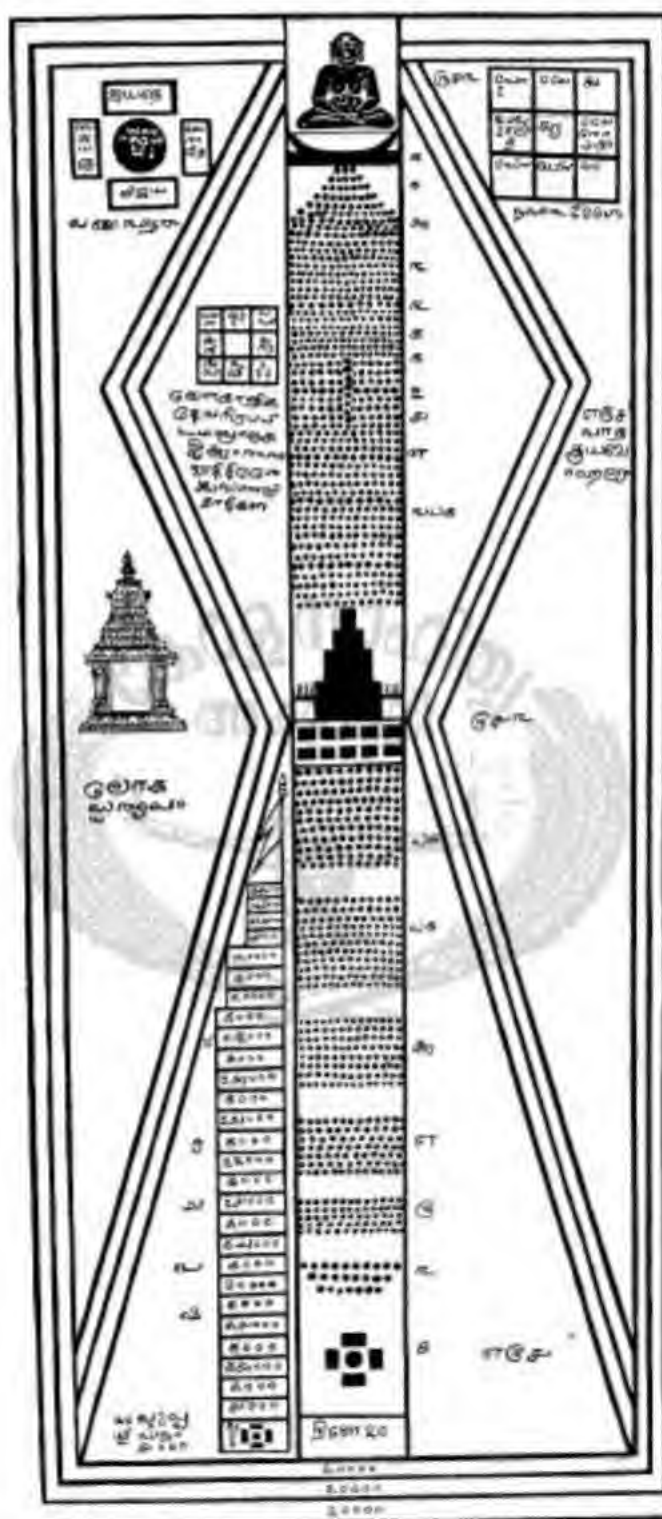

3

ANANTANATHA.

PLATE XXXVII

Diagram illustrating Jaina Cosmology from a picture in the Vardhamāna temple.

JAINA COSMOLOGY.

AGENTS FOR THE SALE OF MADRAS GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS.

IN INDIA.

RAM NARAIN LAL, Bookseller, etc., 1, Back Road, Allahabad.
 The Superintendent, GOVERNMENT CENTRAL BOOK DEPOT, Bangalore.
 D. B. TARAPOREVALA SONS & Co., Bombay.
 THACKER & Co. (LTD.), Bombay.
 N. S. WADE, Circulating Agent and Bookseller, No. 4, Tilghuan Road, Gurgaon, Bombay.
 THE BOOK COMPANY, Calcutta.
 BUTTERWORTH & Co. (LTD.), 4, Hastings Street, Calcutta.
 R. CAMBRAY & Co., Calcutta.
 The Managing Director, KAMALA BOOK DEPOT, LTD., 15, College Square, Calcutta.
 THACKER, SPINE & Co., 3, Esplanade East, Calcutta.
 SANFSON WILLIAM & Co., Booksellers, etc., 127-B, The Mall, Cawnpore.
 THE OXFORD BOOK AND STATIONERY Co., Kashmir Gate, Delhi.
 RAMAKRISHNA & SONS, Lahore.
 The Proprietors, The Punjab Sanskrit Book Depot, Saidmulla Street, Lahore (Punjab).
 THE CHRISTIAN LITERATURE SOCIETY FOR INDIA, Post Box No. 300, Park
 Town, Madras.
 CITY BOOK COMPANY, Post Box No. 283, Madras.
 HIGGINSON & Co. (LTD.), Mount Road, Madras.
 G. A. NATHAN & Co., Madras.
 P. R. RAMA IYER & Co., Madras.
 P. VARADACHARI & Co., Booksellers, 1, Lingha Chetti Street, Madras.
 Agent, THE SOUTH INDIA SAIVA-SIDDHANTA WORKS PUBLISHING SOCIETY,
 LTD., 6, Coral Merchant Street, Madras.
 D. SRI KRISHNAMOORTHY, Editor of "Grama Paripalana," Marripet, Tenali, Guntur (Madras).
 E. M. GOPALAKRISHNA KOOR, Padmantapam, Madras (Madras).
 M. SUBBACHALAM & Co., Proprietors, The Hindu Press, Madulipattam (Madras).
 THE MODERN STORES, Salem (Madras).
 THE SRIVILLIPUTHUR CO-OPERATIVE TRADING UNION (LTD.), Srivilliputhur
 (Madras).
 MANIAM BROS., Booksellers, etc., Railway Station Road, Tanjore (Madras).
 S. KRISHNAMANI & Co., Teppakulam Post, Trichinopoly Fort (Madras).
 A. VENKATASUBBAM, Law Bookseller, Vellore (Madras).
 P. N. SWAMINATHA SIVAN & Co., Commission Agents, Booksellers, etc.,
 Pudukkottai State.
 The International Book Service, Booksellers, etc., Poona 4.
 MOHARLAL DOORABHAI SHAH, Books Agent, Publisher and Printer, Rajkot.
 THE BOOKLOVERS' RESORT, Booksellers and News Agents, Talakad, Trivandrum.

NOTICE.

Official publications may be obtained in the United Kingdom either direct from the office of the High Commissioner for India, India House, Aldwych, London, W.C. 2, or through any bookseller.